DYSENTERY, CHOLERA, FEVER, AGUE, COLDS, &c.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S (Ex. Army Med. Staff)

CHLORODYNE

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE. The Public, therefore, are cautioned against using any other than DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

Remedial Uses and Action.

THIS INVALUABLE REMEDY produces quiet, refreshing sleep, relieves pain, calms the system, restores the deranged functions, and stimulates healthy action of the secretions of the body, without creating any of those unpleasant results attending the use of Opium. Old and young may take it at all hours and times when requisite. Thousands of persons testify to its marvellous good effects and wonderful cures, while medical men extol its virtues most extensively, using it in great quantities in the following diseases:—

Diseases in which eminently useful—Cholera, Dysentery, Diarrhoea, Colics, Coughs, Asthma, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Whooping Cough, Cramp, Hysteria, &c.

Those exhaustive diseases—Fever, Ague—so common in tropical climates, are rapidly arrested, and the cold stage in a few moments checked by a timely dose, when warmth and a general glow of the system is established, and comfort secured.

As a Sedative, Neurotic, and Antispasmodic, it is unequalled by any other known Medicine, and not to be surpassed in its specific effects.

Extracts from Medical Opinions.

The Right Hon. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians and J. T. Davenport that he had received information to the effect that the only remedy of any service in Cholera was Chlorodyne.—See Lancet, Dec. 31, 1864.

From A. Montgomery, Esq., late Inspector of Hospitals, Bombay:—"Chlorodyne is a most valuable remedy in Neuralgia, Asthma, and Dysentery. To it I fairly owe my restoration to health after eighteen months' severe suffering, and when other remedies had failed."

Dr. Lowe, Medical Missionary in India, reports (Dec., 1865) that in nearly every case of Cholera in which Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne was administered, the patient recovered.

Mrs. Forbes, wife of the Chaplain at Paris:—"I cannot speak too highly of Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne; I have not in any single instance been disappointed with the result, even in aggravated cases of Indian Cholera."

Extract from Medical Times, Jan. 12, 1866:—"Chlorodyne is prescribed by scores of orthodox medical practitioners. Of course it would not thus be singularly popular did it not 'supply a want and fill a place.'"

Extract from the General Board of Health, London, as to its efficacy in Cholera:—"So strongly are we convinced of the immense value of this remedy, that we cannot too forcibly urge the necessity of adopting it in all cases."

CHLORODYNE, the Great Remedy for CHOLERA.—See Report in the Times, Sept. 6, from the Malta Correspondent, who states, August 24th, that "108 cases and eighty-one deaths occurred at Messina: 50,000 people fled from the town, which is in a most deplorable condition; that Chlorodyne has been found most efficacious as a remedy, and a number of persons are reported to have been saved by its use."

Now as there are various imitations sold under the name of Chlorodyne, containing Indian Hemp, Morphia, &c., ingredients highly adverse to the cure of Cholera, the public are cautioned against the use of any compound under the name of Chlorodyne, unless it bears the name of Dr. J. Collis Browne, who coined the word Chlorodyne to designate his wonderful discovery, which he fully tested for many years in her Majesty's Service before introducing it to the public, the wonderful success of which has given rise to various imitations totally different to genuine Chlorodyne. See the decision of Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood, reported in the Times, July 13th, 1864.

The extraordinary medical reports on the efficacy of Chlorodyne renders it a subject of most vital importance that the public should obtain the genuine, which is now sold under the protection of the Government of Great Britain, authorising a stamp, bearing the words "Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne," without which none is genuine. Sold in bottles, 1s. 1½d., 2s. 6d., and 4s. 6d., by all Chemists. Sole Manufacturer, J. T. HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.
INFLUENZA—COLD.—In diseases of the throat and chest, so prevalent in this country, nothing so speedily relieves or so certainly cures, as these inestimable remedies. These diseases are too often neglected at the commencement, or are injudiciously treated, resulting in either case in disastrous consequences. Whatever the condition of the patient, Holloway's medicines will restore, if recovery be possible. They will retard the alarming symptoms till the blood is purified, and nature consummates the cure, gradually restoring the strength and vital nervous power. By persevering in the use of Holloway's preparations, tone is conferred on the stomach and frame generally, the fluids are regenerated, morbid matter is expelled, and a happy revolution occurs throughout the system.

Where the gums are in any way tender, and great absorption has taken place, this system will prove invaluable.
INSPECTION OF MODELS AND SPECIMENS
Feeling that illustrative specimens of the above improvements would impart a more accurate appreciation of their object, effect, and value, than any written description, a number of models have been executed representing the adaptation of Teeth, and sets to several different shapes, sizes, and defects of the mouth and gums. These models furnish a clear, practical exposition of the principles adopted, and may be seen every day at Mr. Webb's residence, free of charge.

THE PEOPLE OF INDIA:

A SERIES OF
PHOTOGRAPHIC ILLUSTRATIONS OF
THE RACES AND TRIBES OF HINDUSTAN,
ORIGINALLY PREPARED UNDER THE AUTHORITY OF
THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, AND REPRODUCED AT THE INDIA MUSEUM
BY ORDER OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL.

EDITED BY
J. FORBES WATSON AND JOHN WILLIAM KAYE.

MEMORANDUM.

In addition to the copies of this work prepared for the use of the Government, the Secretary of State for India in Council has authorised the publication of an edition for sale. The work will contain about 450 Photographs on mounts, in eight volumes, super royal 4to., and it will be issued at £2. 6s. per volume. The First and Second Volumes are now ready for delivery.

PREFACE.

During the administration of Lord Canning, from 1856 to 1863, the interest which had been created in Europe by the remarkable development of the Photographic Art communicated itself to India, and originated the desire to turn it to account in the illustration of the topography, architecture, and ethnology of that country.

There were none, perhaps, in whom this interest was awakened more strongly than in Lord and Lady Canning. It was their wish to carry home with them, at the end of their sojourn in India, a collection, obtained by private means, of photographic illustrations, which might recall to their memory the peculiarities of Indian life.

The great convulsion of 1857-58, while it necessarily retarded for a time all scientific and artistic operations, imparted a new interest to the country which had been the scene of, and to the people who had been the actors in these remarkable events. When, therefore, the pacification of India had been accomplished, the officers of the Indian Services, who had made themselves acquainted with the principles and practice of photography, encouraged and patronised by the Governor-General, went forth, and traversed the land in search of interesting subjects.

In this way the design soon exceeded the dimensions of a mere private collection; but Lord Canning felt that its importance was sufficient to warrant official sanction and development, and, therefore, placed the matter in the hands of Mr. Clive Bayley, his Home Secretary. Some of the more important results appear in the present work.

The photographs were produced without any definite plan, according to local and personal circumstances, by different officers; and copies of each plate were sent home to the Secretary of State for India in Council.

After a time, it appeared that a sufficient number of illustrations had been received from various parts of India, fairly to represent the different varieties of the Indian races. The negatives remained in India; but from the plates sent home it was easy to produce fresh negatives, the prints of which might be multiplied to any extent. The Secretary of State in Council sanctioned this operation, and the work was executed by Mr. W. Griggs, at the India Museum, under the superintendence of Dr. Forbes Watson.

In many cases some descriptive account of the tribes represented accompanied the photographs sent from India. These varied greatly in amplitude and value. But, on the whole, it may be said that they were sufficient to constitute the basis of the sketches contributed by Mr. John R. Melville, Colonel Meadows Taylor, Mr. Kaye, Dr. Forbes Watson, and others. These sketches do not profess to be more than mere rough notes, suggestive rather than exhaustive, and they make no claim to scientific research or philosophic investigation. But although the work does not aspire to scientific eminence, it is hoped that, in an ethnological point of view, it will not be without interest and value.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, July 28; Agra, July 25; Calcutta, July 23; Madras, July 22. The leading political item of the week is the despatch of H.M.'s steamer Vigilant from Bombay to the Persian Gulf, to support the British resident in urging on the Sheikh of Bahrein and some other chieftain in those parts his demands for compensation on account of losses inflicted on British subjects by the piratical inroads of said chiefs on the ruler of Guttur. Colonel Pelly has a difficult part to play in those politically unquiet latitudes. There is the difference still to settle between Persia and the Imam of Muscat regarding the possession of Bunder Abbas. The strength of the fanatic Wahabee influence in Muscat is said to have determined the Persian Government against renewing the lease of the port in question; but may not such a step be rather ascribable to the Shah's natural desire for naval or commercial advantage on the seas that wash his own dominions? It can hardly be our interest to oppose so reasonable a claim.

THE Bombay Bank Commission have toiled through three more sittings. Among the new witnesses examined were Hon. A. Brown, one of the old directors, and Mr. W. Bullock, formerly manager of the Mombadavie branch of the Bank. The latter seems to have had no sort of help or guidance from headquarters, although his branch was in the native town of Bombay. No instructions were ever given him regarding the kind of business he was to carry on, nor could he ever get the needful information touching the character of those who came to borrow money of him. In cases of doubt indeed he was bidden to apply to Premchund Roychund at a time when that gentleman was still outside the Bank direction. During 1864 and 1865 no inspector ever came near Mr. Bullock's branch. Every case of importance was referred to Premchund, who was in fact the ruling power at Mombadavie, although Mr. Bullock owns to a preference for the shroffs in the bazaars, and admits that Premchund's advice was generally fatal. No wonder that this witness complains of the secretary, Mr. Blair, as being "in matters relating to business a most inaccessible man," with whom "it was not very easy to confer;" and goes on to say that "he was not a man of much judgment." Mr. Brown's examination was still in hand when the mail left.

ACCORDING to the Bombay Gazette the Cotton Frauds Department, of which the late Mr. Harrington Bulkley was Chief Inspector, is to be amalgamated with the Cotton Improvement Department, whose present head, Dr. Forbes, will have supreme control over the united service. This may be a first step towards doing away with the Cotton Frauds Act, or else it may simply mean the consolidation of two departments which would work better under one head than two. It seems indeed that of the two services the more important one was always undermanned, and that the Inspectors of Frauds, having little to do in their own line, had to help the Improvement Commissioners in getting through their work. We trust that the day is not far off when the Cotton Department will expand into a complete department for agriculture.

IT is said that Sir John Lawrence has agreed to hold a farewell durbar in the Punjab before returning home to England. The promise seems to have been wrung from him by the earnestly repeated prayers of his former lieges, who have not yet unlearned their old admiration of the ruler whose moral ascendancy over the chiefs and people of the Punjab paved the way for the deliverance of Upper India from the perils of the great mutiny. Their recollections of "Jan Sahib" must differ widely from the views now expressed by the Times of India, which can see no good in any part of Sir John's viceregal career, from the day when he tried his hand at settling the land question in Oudh, to the latest results of his policy of "masterly inactivity" in all departments of public business. Even his Afghan policy "happens to be wise, because it is the expression of the dull immobility of his nature." We are requested to regard him as "a thoroughly honest, good, and incompetent man, full of common sense and self-respect, but believing implicitly in" the virtue of things as they are; shy of responsibility, and blind to the manifest tendencies of the time. That the picture is wholly untrue, we are not prepared to maintain; but has not the painter's pencil been dipped in the gall of party prejudice? Clearly the departing Viceroy will not go to the Times of India for a character.

MENTION is made of Mr. J. B. Norton, Advocate-general of Madras, as the probable successor of Mr. Maine in the Viceregal Council.

So great is the rush of our official countrymen homewards, under the new Furlough Rules, that the Government has had to suspend privilege leave among civilians. Everybody is wanting to come home at once, so many having put off furlough in expectation of the new rules; and of course only a certain number can be spared from duty at a time. Even the number of furloughs granted seems to be unexpectedly small. Great at any rate is the outcry in Madras against the limiting of the boon to twenty per cent. of the whole army, which includes so large a number of unemployed officers and a certain percentage of officers on sick leave. These last should not have been reckoned in the twenty per cent.

SOME correspondence has been going on between the Bombay Chamber of Commerce and the Bombay Government, touching the silting up of the northern side of Bombay harbour. Off the P. and O. Company's old docks the mudbanks have widened 100 feet and risen two feet in the last nine years, in spite of constant dredging. In the small dock channel the mudbank has grown nearly four feet in the same time, and the water in Mazagon harbour is at least a foot shallower than it used to be. At the Patent Slip at Mazagon the dredge has to clear away one or two feet of mud every quarter from the entrance, and the cradle has to be lowered once a fortnight to prevent the silt choking up the ways. In some parts of this end of the harbour there is now no water where once were channels two fathoms deep. The P. and O. Company are necessarily put to great expense in keeping down the accumulations of mud; and if nothing be done to check the evil, the whole upper end of almost the only harbour in India will in time be filled up; for the low-water mark line has advanced half a mile into the harbour since Captain Selby's survey in 1829. All this is traced to the building of the causeways over Sion and Chimber creeks. The Government has been persuaded to order an inquiry into the extent and causes of the alleged evil.

WHAT is the use or economy of keeping scores of officers unemployed in India on Indian rates of pay? In Madras alone, according to the Times, there are twenty lieutenant-colonels and twenty majors "strictly and literally doing nothing, at Bangalore and elsewhere," and drawing each from £65 to £80 a-month for his share in that toilsome process. Moreover, of the field-officers employed in doing something, a great many are drawing the pay of colonels and majors for doing captain's and subaltern's work. If the same rates of idleness and under-work prevail in the other presidencies, what a pretty amount of public money must be yearly going to waste! It has often been reckoned that half at least of that sum might be saved by the simple plan of letting these surplus officers live at home on half pay until their services shall be needed in India. There is no doubt at any rate that a large saving might have been effected by offering them a fair inducement to go home, whether for good or for a conditional term. Why the present system, so unfair alike to officers and State, has continued so many years, we are at a loss to understand? Whose is the benefit?

AMONG the late arrivals in India are Mr. Seton-Karr, who takes up his post of Foreign Secretary, Sir Alexander Grant, who returns, for a time at least, to the Bombay University, and General Abbott, who succeeds Colonel Elphinstone on the Punjab Railway.

THE weather reports by the last mail are not of the most cheering. In Bombay the rainy season had thus far proved unhealthy. Most parts of Bengal Proper were slowly recovering from the effects of the tremendous downpour in June; but Tirhoot, Chumparum, and Bahar were suffering for want of rain. The North-West Provinces and Central India have had a narrow escape from famine, if they have altogether escaped it. The rains which are due there some time in June kept off till the latter part of July. One week's more delay would have made famine certain. As it is, many of the staple crops are seriously damaged, such as cotton and indigo. There is said to be great distress in the Nizam's dominions.

LIEUTENANT GOULD has been committed to prison without power of bail, to undergo trial for forging and uttering bills of exchange. The case against him is not a little strengthened by his manjee's account of their day's trip up and down the river between Barrackpore and Calcutta. By an odd chain of unlucky accidents a hole was staved in the boat, the means of baling her suddenly disappeared, an easy opportunity of landing was unaccountably missed, and finally, while the boatman was away in quest of help, the officer himself disappeared from the scene, to turn up afterwards in Allahabad.

THE directors of the Bank of Bengal have issued their half-yearly report. The business done in the first quarter was comparatively slack, in spite of the low rates of interest on loans and discounts. In March and April the rates rose one per cent. in all, and the next two months were marked by a steady improvement both in the business and the rates of interest. A clear profit of Rs. 10,08,695-6 in the half-year enables the directors to declare a dividend at the rate of 9 per cent. per annum. The Bank has extended its operations to Hyderabad and Bombay with so much success that, in spite of the recent agitation in Madras and elsewhere, the directors have informed the Viceroy in Council that they "cannot undertake the responsibility of delegating to the new Bank of Bombay the management of the large amount of funds which the opening of so many branches, and the consequent expansion of the Bank's business with Bombay, have in recent years rendered it necessary to maintain in that city." The directors have resolved to confer on Mr. G. Dickson a life pension of £1,000 a-year, whenever his health may oblige him to resign his post of secretary and treasurer. For the present however he has consented to hold on, so long as he can do so "without actual danger."

WHO is the Prince Feroze Shah, of whom the Akhoond of Swat is jealous and the Indian newspapers observant? According to the "Report on India's Progress," on which we have elsewhere commented, Feroze Shah died in 1866. Is the dead man come to life again, or ought we to regard the present bearer of that name as a mere impostor, another Perkin Warbeck trading in a name still powerful for mischief? If the Akhoond is really jealous of his influence, he had better avail himself of the latter theory.

RECENT telegrams inform us that Captain Sladen had reached Momein and was making ready to march on to Talifoo. A still later telegram from another part of India announces the final entrance of the reascendent Shere Ali Khan into Kabul, and the flight of his once victorious rival, Azim Khan, into Turkistan. How long will the new Ameer retain a throne which has continually changed masters since the death of Dost Mohammed?

WE have had several bits of telegraphic news touching the great eclipse of the 18th. At Bombay the weather was very unfavourable for scientific observations, and rain fell during the greatest darkness. Major Tennant however reports to the Astronomical Society that his observations had on the whole been successful, though light fleecy clouds covered the sky. This should mean that his party had been able to take some good photographs of the eclipse. Dr. Janssen, commanding the French party, goes into more details in his telegram. He tells us that the eclipse has been successfully observed, and that the red protuberances always seen round the moon's black disc during a total eclipse present in the spectrum "a very remarkable and unexpected" appearance, being in fact of "a gaseous nature." This, if true, would seem to settle the question as to the true character of those huge piles of light which have hitherto been taken for solar clouds.

IN Dr. Hooker's inaugural address to the British Association at Norwich, he touched on a fact which will sound new even to the bulk of Anglo-Indians. How many of them are aware that within three hundred miles from Calcutta there exists in the Kossyah district of Eastern Bengal a tribe of savages "who habitually erect dolmens, menares, cysts, and cromlechs" almost as huge as those in Western Europe which are usually ascribed to Celtic builders; and that "man," their word for "stone," occurs in the names of their villages as commonly as it does in those of Brittany, Wales, or Cornwall?

The following circular has been addressed to officers of the Indian army, now on leave, who propose to elect, or have elected, the Furlough Rules of 1868:—

India-Office, August 24, 1868.

I am directed by the Secretary of State for India in Council to inform you that the following arrangements have been made with regard to the application of the Furlough Rules of 1868 to the officers of the Indian Army now on leave in Europe, viz.:—(a.) Officers now on furlough, or sick leave, shall be allowed to elect the new rules, and to convert their present leave into such furlough as their service may entitle them to. (b.) That those who on 1st July had not completed six months' absence be allowed, from that date, to draw half their total receipts, subject to the maximum and minimum limits. The pay of those who have received Indian allowances and half staff for any period beyond the 1st July to be adjusted accordingly. (c.) That those who had exceeded six months' absence on 1st July be allowed to draw half their Indian pay and allowances from that date. (d.) In those cases in which it is not possible to determine whether half staff salary is available for officers on leave, it is to be understood that final adjustment of salary will be made on return to India. An election once made of the Furlough Rules of 1868 is to be considered final, and on no plea whatever will an officer be afterwards released from his choice. The Accountant-General's department of this office have received instructions to adjust, on the next issue of pay, the allowances of such officers as elect the present rules in accordance with the above-mentioned decisions.

THE continued regularity in the arrival of the mails from India will enable us for the future to publish the Indian Mail in time to reach the furthest parts of the country on Wednesday morning. Our readers will thus gain a day's earlier perusal of the paper, without any harm we trust to the character of its contents.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

THURSDAY, August 27, 1868.

HOW NATIVE PRINCES SPEND THEIR MONEY.

IF the hopes of the Friend of India should be fulfilled, we may look out for some pretty disclosures of the way in which the wrongs of native princes are taken up by their advocates at home. The revelations will not be new as regards the methods, which are old enough, but only as regards the men. Native princes have always been taught by their disinterested champions to believe in the power of money as a means of winning any cause; and native munificence has often been abused by Englishmen in search of an easy livelihood. But the old scandals pass away and are forgotten, until new incidents recal them dimly to mind. In the present case the late ruler of Mysore figures as the victim of his English friends' cheap and unadulterated sympathy. His accounts are now in the hands of the Indian Government, which so often paid his debts when he was alive, and sustained so many attacks from English partisans for their unkind treatment of so worthy a prince. Very curious, apparently, are some of the revelations therein contained. The Friend of India mentions for the present one name only, that of a well-known officer in the Indian service, whose controversial writings have made some little noise at home. Major Evans Bell is entered in the Maharajah's account books as recipient of Rs. 10,000. If that is true, we can understand why the major expended so much literary heat in asserting the claims of his princely client to redress. But it does take the gilt off the gingerbread to find that all that eloquence was fired off at so many pounds a page. Of course there is no law, social or other, against taking money for pleading another man's cause, especially if your efforts redound to your client's advantage. It is possible that the reversal of our former policy towards Mysore may be partly owing to Major Bell's eloquent advocacy of a specious cause. But, if we may believe the Friend of India, he has hitherto declined "to acknowledge that he is really the paid agent, and not the disinterested redresser of the wrongs of Asiatic tyrants and sensualists." Perhaps so splendid a gift was bestowed without previous conditions, in acknowledgment of splendid services gratuitously performed. We should like to believe in human virtue, so long as facts will permit us. Meanwhile our curiosity has been raised, and further disclosures will, no doubt, be eagerly expected by all whose belief in human virtue has not stood the test of time.

INDIA IN 1866-67.

AMONG other useful papers lately published by the India Office is a "Statement exhibiting the Moral and Material Progress and Condition of India during the year 1866-67." These yearly reports, drawn up with great care from an embarrassing wealth of materials, offer us a bird's-eye view of yearly progress in every department of our Indian administration. They set before us in one comprehensive view all that relates to twenty-six different heads of administrative action, from the subject of general legislation down to the special treatment called forth by the Orissa Famine, from the larger questions of finance, agriculture, education, to the lesser matters of emigration, weights and measures, and the geological survey. The present Statement should be read at leisure—it extends only to seventy-four folio pages—by all who would know what the rulers of British India have lately been doing for the general weal of the millions entrusted to their charge. A few facts of more or less interest culled from the mass is all that can be offered here.

The first census of the population of the Central Provinces was taken in the year under review. In an area of 114,718 square miles was counted, "in one night, quietly and easily," with the willing aid of the inhabitants themselves, a population of 9,104,511 souls, making an average of 79.36 to the square mile. Compared with most of the older provinces this average is very small; for Oudh shows 393.57, and the North-West Provinces 361.12, to the square mile, an average about equal to that of populous Antwerp, which again is nearly doubled by East Flanders. Even the Punjab has nearly twice as many people as the Central Provinces. But the latter yield an average more than thrice as large as British Burmah, more than twice as large as Sind, and nearly a third larger than Coorg. By 1871 however the Central Provinces ought to show a considerable advance on their present numbers. Of the three Presidency capitals Calcutta has far the largest European, and Bombay the largest native population. Bombay indeed can boast a population of all sorts nearly double that of Madras, and more than double that of Calcutta.

With regard to legislative progress the Supreme Government in the same year passed thirty-six Acts against twenty-nine in the year before. Of these eight concern all India, and eighteen were passed for the four Non-Regulation Provinces of Upper India. Among the eighteen was an Act for the suppression of public gambling in those provinces, in accordance with the example set the year before by Bombay. Another Act confirmed the new arrangement regarding proprietary and sub-proprietary rights in Oudh. A third provided for municipal committees in the Punjab, a great step forward towards local self-government. A like end was furthered by the Act imposing the license-tax, the proceeds of which, after the first year, are to be credited to the local revenues. By another Act the old punishment of transportation for murderous attempts inspired by "religious fanaticism" has been displaced by the alternative of death or transportation.

Under the head of Judicature we find that in Bengal the District Courts had more suits to settle, and the High Court fewer appeals to hear, in 1866 than in 1865. In the North-West there was more litigation both for the upper and lower courts, but the arrears of business in both were fewer. In the Punjab litigation has been steadily increasing for many years past, and the same may be said of the Central Provinces, of the Berars, and of Madras. The decline in Burmah is attributed to the stagnation in the timber trade. No cause is suggested for a similar decline in Bombay, perhaps because the commercial crisis there would at once suggest itself to most readers. There was a marked increase of crime in Sind, Bombay, Madras, the Punjab, the Central Provinces, and Bengal. For the increase in Bengal and Madras the famine is naturally made to account. The apparent increase in the Central Provinces and the Berars seems traceable to the greater efficiency of the police, coupled with greater willingness among the people to report offences. In the Punjab, again, many small offences that once passed unnoticed are now brought into court, and several new ones have been created by new laws. It is also feared that the cheapness of the criminal procedure has tended to demoralise the people by encouraging vindictive suits. In Bombay crimes of violence, from common assault to dacoity and attempts at murder, seem to have been unusually rife, in accordance with the rule that distress breeds crime. We are glad to see that the measures taken at Madras for checking European vagrancy have largely reduced the number of European offenders.

We have good reports in general of the police, to whose maintenance the railway companies now contribute a handsome share. The Punjab shows the largest proportion of trials as compared with offences reported, but yields to the Central Provinces with regard to the percentage of convictions as compared with trials. In Bombay the district police have been thoroughly reorganised, and a gang of thieves who had long infested Guzerat have been nearly rooted out. The jails in Bengal were frequently overcrowded in 1866; and the death-rate, in spite of counteractive measures, rose from 5·95 to 10·59 per cent. Each prisoner cost an average of £4. 13s. 8d., or a guinea more than the average of the previous year. The net profits of work done by the prisoners was greater, but the average earnings of each was less than in 1865. In the North-West the death rate was only 2½ per cent., the average cost of each prisoner £4. 14s. 10d., and the average earnings more than twice the amount netted in Bengal. The death rate in the Punjab was still lower, being only 1·78 per cent., against 3·56 in the year preceding, but the average earnings were less than in Bengal. In the Berars the death rate was only 1·53 per cent., but the average cost of each prisoner was £9. 8s. 4d., or nearly thrice as much as in the Punjab. Madras still takes the lead in respect of a high death rate, returning 11½ per cent. against 13 the year before. Of prisoners able to read Bombay shows the smallest proportion—236 only out of 15,612.

On the 1st of April, 1867, the whole Indian garrison mustered 190,957 effective men, of whom 64,109 were Europeans. Of the whole number Bengal engrossed 105,505 men, and Madras 47,654. The health both of European and native troops was decidedly better than the year before. The sickness of the 23rd Fusiliers at Jubbulpore has been traced to the marshy nature of the ground on which they were quartered after their march thither from Agra. Steps are being taken to build new barracks on a healthier site. That is always the rule in India. Pitch on the worst possible site in the first instance, and look out for a new one after hundreds of precious lives have been lost or ruined through the previous blunder.

Opinions have been divided about the use of quinine as a prophylactic against fever. Experiments tried at Peshawar proved abortive; and now it is ruled that quinine as a prophylactic shall only be "exhibited" at the discretion of deputy inspectors-general of hospitals.

Under the heading "Political" we may note the making of "an important question," suggested by Holkar's attempt to make fiscal honey out of railways passing through his kingdom. He has been levying excessive duties on "merchandise intended for transport by railway." The Government think that native princes ought to have "some corresponding advantage" in return for any financial loss involved in the development of railway enterprise. Very true; but they should not be allowed to recoup themselves by arbitrary imposts on trade. No native prince in British India should be free to hinder the natural passage of goods from one part of the empire to another. As the paramount Power we are surely bound to prescribe due limits to Holkar's fiscal appetites.

With regard to revenue, we find that, except in Madras and Bombay, the revenues of all the chief provinces show a general increase in 1866 on the returns for the previous year. Even in British Burmah there was a slight gain of a few thousand pounds. In settling the revenue of the North-West Provinces, it has been ordered that "no estate shall be permanently settled in which the actual cultivation amounts to less than 80 per cent. of the cultivable area," or whose value might be increased 20 per cent. by canal irrigation during the next twenty years. The regular settlement of the Central Provinces "progresses satisfactorily." Great things are expected in the course of a few years from the enhanced assessment of the Punjab. In the Berars during the last six years the general revenue had increased as much as 80 per cent.

In a country where good coal is scarce, the question of forest conservancy rises into first importance. The Indian Government is looking sharply after its forests. Those of Bhootan, which had long been given up to reckless timber-merchants, it has lately taken under its own care. The broad forest tracts in the Central Provinces are being tended with a vigilance duly appreciated by the people around. In British Burmah there has been a decrease in the export both of home-grown and foreign timber, owing in the one case to local circumstances, in the other to the disturbed state of Upper Burmah. The planting of trees in the Punjab goes on so steadily, that by 1875 there will most likely be an ample supply of wood for fuel along the whole line of railway from Mooltan to the Jumna.

The sales of waste lands during the past year seem to have been comparatively few. For the benefit of the Assam tea-planters a special rule has been framed, allowing the sale of any lot to cover all claims of Government against the seller, and transferring all payments on behalf of that lot to the credit of any other lots that might still be partially unpaid for.

The paper currency of India is steadily making its way. During the year there was an increased circulation to the extent of more than a million pounds. In Bombay the circulation fluctuated greatly, owing to the general depression of trade. From a like cause the Madras Mint did very little in the way of coinage. For the first time in its history rupees were exported home as bullion. At Bombay also "the mint operations were of a limited character."

During 1866-67 the progress of public works in Bengal was paralysed by the pull upon the department for officers to carry on the relief works in Orissa. The central jails still exist on paper only, and are likely to cost a good deal more than the same kind of buildings in the North-West. The Hazareebagh Penitentiary however was nearly completed. The building of barracks, jails, and the making of roads went on steadily in the Punjab, Burmah, Madras, the North-West and Central Provinces. Of the Godavery navigation works it was hoped that so much would be ready by June of this year, that 220 miles of the river would then be thrown open for use.

In spite of many disturbing causes the railway system was extended by 306 miles, making a total of 3,637 miles open for traffic in May, 1867. There was a steady improvement in the net receipts for the year both from passengers and goods. We should like to see quicker progress made in the construction of new lines; but while the Government waits on private speculation and shirks raising heavy loans, the progress must depend on the state of commercial business in England. Telegraphs like railways have suffered from the depression of trade in both countries. The Indian lines however show a small increase on former years; but the number of messages sent by the Indo-European declined from 27,517 to 24,455. We are not told how much of that decline was owing to the wretchedly bad working of the line. A wealthy banker in Ajmeer wanted to bribe a telegraph officer to divulge the secrets of some opium telegrams; but being reported and found guilty, he had to pay a fine of £400 and suffer imprisonment for six months. Storms, jungle-fires, and wild beasts caused frequent damage to the lines in British Burmah.

The Ganges Canal drew a large profit from the grain sent down to the suffering districts in Orissa. On all the canals yet open the profits for the year were greater than those for 1865-66. In the Central Provinces and Madras the projected works were brought to a standstill for want of money and good management.

Under the head of Agriculture we have notices of fairs and exhibitions held during the year. The Agra Exhibition produced a "considerable" effect on the native mind. That at Jubbulpore was very successful. So was the Etawah Fair, which attracted 200,000 visitors in fifteen days to a place "neither hallowed by antiquity, nor sanctified to the people by any superstitious feelings." At the great fair of Hurdwar nearly three millions of pilgrims were gathered on the bathing day. All praise is given in the report to the measures taken for preserving order, health, and comfort among that vast crowd; but nothing is said of the disastrous burst of cholera which dogged the steps of the pilgrims homewards.

A reference to the commission which inquired into the state of the tea plantations and of the labourers in Bengal introduces some interesting items touching the production of Indian tea. In Assam out of 477, 576 acres held for tea-planting, only 43,500 were actually cultivated in 1866, but the actual outturn was larger by 366,833 lbs. than that obtained from 45,827 acres in 1865. In Cachar, where less than 21,000 acres were planted, the increased outturn was nearly 800,000 pounds. Sylhet on the other hand shows a smaller outturn on a wider area, while a smaller area in Darjeeling produced a larger yield. Tea is also grown in Dacca, Chittagong, Chota Nagpore, and Arracan. Tea culture in Kangra is yearly extending and developing a finer class of tea. Why is nothing said about Kumaon?

Both in Bombay and Bengal more opium was grown last year than the year before. The cultivation of Chinchona seems to flourish alike in Bengal and Madras.

The cotton culture of the North-West in 1866 covered an area almost as large as in 1863, when the cotton trade of India had nearly reached its zenith. The same remark holds good of the Central Provinces and Bombay. Only in British Burmah has cotton gone out of favour, while rice, its chief staple, shows an increase of more than 300,000 acres on the year before. The decline of cotton culture in Madras may be traced to the higher price of cereals and the scarcity that prevailed in certain districts. On the whole, according to the Cotton Commissioner for Bombay, India is "making rapid strides towards improving its cotton."

Coming to the trade of India, we find that last year the imports of merchandise were slightly greater, and the imports of bullion much smaller than the year before. On cotton goods, certain metals, silks, spices, dyes, tobacco, the increase was considerable, while books, fruits, glass ware, ice, and jewellery show as marked a decrease. Under the two last-named heads the difference was more than double. In exports of merchandise there was a large decrease, made up chiefly from cotton-wool, rice, lac, saltpetre, sugars, and timber. On the whole trade of the country the decrease was 23 per cent. as compared with 1865-6; and 19 per cent. as compared with 1864-5. A corresponding decline was noticeable in the coasting trade of every maritime province except Madras.

We must reserve for another article some interesting details on the remaining subjects of this interesting report.

Spirit of the Indian Press.

THE MILITARY DEAD-LOCK.

The Friend of India believes there is a scheme before the Government which has for its object the weeding of the senior ranks of the Staff Corps and local army, so as to prevent that tremendous burden upon the pension list which, under existing regulations, must take place within a few years. The details of the scheme have not yet been published, but we understand it has originated in a report made by Colonel Broome, on a scheme which was sent in to Government from outside and which we discussed last year. What we believe to be an amended edition of the same scheme, evidently by the same hand, has lately reached us. We cannot tell in what particular Colonel Broome's scheme differs from this one, but as it is evident that it must be formed on a basis, if not precisely the same yet necessarily extremely similar to it in principle, we believe that in criticising the one we shall touch closely upon the main points of the other. The subject is so interesting to the officers of the army, and the rejection of any scheme of that nature is pregnant with such important consequences to Government, that we can only do a service by inviting to it the attention of all parties. Not very long after the formation of the Staff Corps, the Home Government, at their wits' end to find a substitute for the old method, deceased with the old army, of providing Colonels' allowances for the reorganised force, hit upon the fatal expedient by which those allowances were obtainable by all officers, without limitation as to number, who might have served twelve years in the substantive rank of Lieutenant-Colonel. They committed this enormous extravagance whilst they refused to the same officers the privilege which had been theirs since the close of the last century, of retiring upon the pension of their rank. These two mistakes have caused the present imbroglio. Officers not being able to retire on the moderate pension of their respective rank, have been induced by the temptation of Colonels' allowances after twelve years' service as Lieutenant-Colonel, to wait for that great prize. Hence the ranks of the Staff Corps are clogged, and threatened to be still more clogged, with field officers. Such are the facts. Being tangible, capable of proof, easy to understand—the effect and the cause being alike visible—there is no occasion to dwell further upon them. The Staff Corps is becoming an army of field officers, simply because, 1st. Its officers have no inducement to retire in middle life. 2nd. Because they have the strongest of all temptations to remain till they obtain their Colonels' allowances. It is not our intention to dwell upon the military results of such a system, important as they are to the Commander-in-Chief. It will suffice to state that, deducting whatever casualties may occur, the 2,204 officers, who now constitute the Staff Corps of the three Presidencies, will, in 1872, be thus graded:—Lieutenant-colonels, 921; majors, 476; captains, 790; lieutenants, 17. It is our wish on the present occasion to draw attention to the financial part of the scheme. In the first place we may state it as a fact that the 2,200 officers who compose the Staff Corps cost the State enormously more than the 3,000 officers of whom the old army was made up. This is because, there being few if any retirements, the promotions to the higher grades have already been excessive. Again, allowing that out of the 921 lieutenant-colonels who will be in the Staff Corps in 1872, 221 will die between that period and 1884, the seven hundred who will then survive will draw as pensions upwards of £700,000 per annum, a sum nearly doubling the amount now paid by the Home Government to all the retired officers of the three Presidencies. It might easily be shown that this £700,000 will reach a million, and more than a million sterling. This is no imaginary fact. The road towards the payment of the million has been entered upon already; every year it will increase until in the end it will reach the sum we have indicated. All this time, moreover, the evil of having old officers to do duty all over the country will be perpetuated. The present dead-lock having been caused by practically preventing retirements until officers should be able to claim colonels' allowances, the natural remedy is to open out to those above a certain standing inducements to retire before reaching that more distant goal. We would suggest, as the first step, the granting to officers permission to retire on the pension of their rank, subject, as was this condition before, to twenty-two years' actual service in India. The inducement of a small extra pension or bonus, in proportion to the time served to colonels' allowances, might also be offered. The great object, it must be remembered, is to induce men to retire before obtaining the colonels' allowances. In their own interest, then, the Government must be liberal. The plan of the author of the scheme which first attracted the attention of Government is as follows:—He would propose to offer 100 extra pensions annually to the three armies, giving brevet-colonels an addition of £144 annually, lieutenant-colonels £135, and majors £108, in addition to the pensions of their rank, these pensions to be given irrespective of leave, and the seniors to have the preference. We think this scheme fair, and it would effect a considerable saving. The actual annual saving on 100 lieutenant-colonels, as shown by the difference between the pension above indicated and the pay of rank, would be five lakhs annually; but a greater gain still would be the abandonment of all prospective claim on colonels' allowances. This plan seems to us well worthy of consideration.

THE QUESTION OF A GOLD CURRENCY.

The Friend of India holds that if India has ever been unanimous in desiring any reform, it is that of a gold currency. In a hasty moment Mr. Wilson threw the weight of his authority into the scale against it, and Sir Charles Wood followed him. Mr. Laing and Sir Charles Trevelyan touched the question too timidly to command success. Sir Charles Wood's departure from the India House encouraged Sir John Lawrence and Sir W. Mansfield to make another attempt, and the result was the Currency Commission of 1866. That commission, being too official, overshot the mark by an excess of caution. It designedly subordinated the necessity for a gold coinage to a reform of the paper currency, lest it should alarm the currency doctors of the India-office. The report was as weak as the evidence was strong. This, however, would not have prevented Lord Salisbury or Sir Stafford Northcote, as "new brooms," from taking credit to their party for a reform so long dawdled over by their predecessors in office. But still nothing was done. We have only now discovered the cause. It is Mr. Massey. As Indian finance minister it was his duty to send home the report with a minute of his own, exhaustively discussing the subject and expressing the opinions of the Government of India. This duty he deliberately failed to discharge, for who, in Simla especially, would attempt to master such a problem as the currency if he could shirk it? So the Secretary of State still waits, as he has already waited for two years, for the recommendations of the Government of India, and Sir Richard Temple is up to his ears in the difficulty. This is hardly fair to him; but he will be less like the potentate whom he is believed to rejoin in resembling, than is generally supposed, if he does not induce the Home Government speedily to respond to India's cry for a gold coinage.

MR. JUSTICE—MANSFIELD.

The Times of India reminds its readers how it drew particular attention to his Excellency's opinion, that at the time when Sergeant Carthy killed his wife, the prisoner was labouring under "strong excitement from previous conviviality." It is much to be lamented that this elegant euphemism has not yet attained that degree of notoriety to which upon many grounds it is fairly entitled.

Captain Cameron was cashiered the other day for being drunk and neglecting his duties at Poona on the 23rd April, and his Excellency, in reviewing the case, observes that "it is very grievous, but with respect to the example set to the army by the offences of which the prisoner has been found guilty, his Excellency regrets that it is out of his power to extend pardon to the prisoner." We can imagine his Excellency shedding tears over this "shocking event" as he dictates the fatal order—

Cameron—I love thee,
But never more be officer of mine.

Had some good angel, with pen in hand, gone over the report of this grievous case, and substituted the words "strong excitement from previous conviviality" wherever the objectionable adjective "drunk" makes its appearance, is it too much to assert that his Excellency's bowels of compassion would have yearned towards this poor delinquent, the unhappy victim of circumstances beyond his control, and that Captain Cameron's punishment would have consisted of a brief but eloquent recapitulation of his past services and sufferings? It would run somewhat thus—"Taking this into account (this being in Captain Cameron's case—say the heat, for it was Poona in April), along with the high and exemplary character of the accused, his long service, his numerous campaigns, and finally the suffering he must have undergone since the shocking event which has brought him to trial, a suffering which cannot fail to make itself felt in after years, I hold Captain Cameron to be an object of pity and clemency, and I hereby remit the sentence accordingly." These words constitute the peroration in Sergeant Carthy's case, and had they been applied, as we have suggested, to the case of Captain Cameron, we should say, "Why this is a more excellent song than the other," and, with reason. Let us make a brief comparison of the offences of which Sergeant Carthy and Captain Cameron are respectively, by his Excellency, considered guilty; of the punishment awarded to each; and of the reasons assigned. And first, Sergeant Carthy kicked his wife to death. He is granted a free pardon because of his high and exemplary character, his good temper, the provocation he received, his drunkenness upon the occasion, the battles he had fought, and the suffering that must ensue from his recollection of the "shocking event." Captain Cameron was drunk, and neglected his duties on a certain day. He is cashiered, because of the bad example he has set to the service. By the way, it is worth noting what store his Excellency sets by example. Example has proved the salvation of Sergeant Carthy: example has cashiered Captain Cameron. We hope his comrades will profit by the society of such a model as Carthy. Confining our attention to Captain Cameron, we wish to inquire whether his offence deserved the heavy punishment it has met with. On the 23rd April he drank a few glasses more than was good for him, and was unable to attend to the not very important duties that he had to perform:

The very head and front of his offending
Had this extent: no more.

Habitual intoxication he is not charged with, and for all that appears in the accusation this was his first misconduct. Now for this he is turned adrift on the world and banished the society of his friends, with a ruined reputation and a broken name. If officers were as a rule teetotallers, the injustice of the sentence would not be so glaring; but so many instances rise to our memory where we have known their country's defenders "quaff the flowing bowl" too freely, instances not a few where officers of high rank and not unknown to fame have attained a chronic state of "strong excitement from previous conviviality"—that we cannot hesitate to record our opinion that very severe measure has been dealt in the present instance. On this point opinions may differ, but we do not see how it is possible for any person who has read the reports of the two cases we have noticed to escape being convinced of the utter incompetency of the present Commander-in-Chief for the exercise of any judicial functions whatsoever. The sooner our Indian Army is under the administration of another chief the better.

The Bombay Gazette observes that the result of the court-martial recently held at Poona for the trial of Captain J. G. E. Cameron, of the Madras Staff Corps, attached to the 12th Regiment Madras Native Infantry, has been fatal to that officer's commission. The court found him guilty on three out of four charges, and sentenced him to be cashiered. His Excellency Sir William Mansfield has confirmed the sentence, and expressed the opinion that there should have been a conviction on the fourth charge also. A good deal of sympathy was felt for Captain Cameron in the course of the trial, and under the circumstances that came out in the evidence the decision that has been come to seems unnecessarily severe. Sir William's humour (for it seems to us his humour plays an important part) is a fickle one. We all remember the Jervis case, in which he displayed his humour in its unrelenting, vindictive, persecuting phase. A few days ago we found him in a soft melting mood in dealing with the case of a colour-sergeant of the 104th Regiment, who caused the death of his wife at Dugshaie by kicking her violently, and was convicted of having "voluntarily caused her grievous hurt on provocation," for which the court-martial decided that he should suffer a year's simple imprisonment. The provocation no doubt was very great, and the previous character of the man seems to have been exemplary; but the crime at the same time was a serious one, and the sentence was not excessive. One might have expected the martinet of Simla to confirm the sentence with a gruff remark that it wasn't enough. Not at all. He finds the sentence "legal" and "in accordance with the evidence," but, touched by the "cruel provocation" and the "exemplary character," he remits it all. Here we have, emphatically, one law for colour-sergeants and another for captains; and the colour-sergeants have the best of it. If discipline is to be studied so carefully in Captain Cameron's case, why should it not in the case of Colour-sergeant Carthy? Is there no inconsistency in pardoning a man who causes the death of his wife, and a few days afterwards cashiering another man who, on one occasion in his life, and at a time when he is not in perfect health, is a little intoxicated on duty? Verily, Sir William has strained at a gnat and swallowed a camel.

STATION TALK.

PESHAWUR, July 13.—The Khyberrees have been fighting among themselves of late. The fighting parties are the Kookee Khyles on the Jone side, and Feroze Khan, son of Allah Dadkhan, chief of another tribe, on the other. The Kookee Khyles have got one cannon in their possession, while Feroze Khan boasts of two. These men, however, do not much rely on fire-arms, as they have got more command over their own weapons, however rude or uncouth they may be. Slight engagements take place at times with loss of men on both sides. Sahibzadah Ateekoolah of Cabul has been at Peshawur for some time past. As he had heard of the arrival of Sirdar Fattah Mahomed Khan, son-in-law of Ameer Shere Ally Khan, at Lah Gurb, near Ghiznee, he intended to join the Sirdar at once. His friends have, however, prohibited him from joining Fattah Mahomed Khan at present, as the lives of his sons at present residing at Cabul would then be in danger. This is very true, as Azim Khan would no sooner hear of the Sahibzade's taking refuge with Fattah Mahomed Khan, than he would put his sons to the sword.—Bombay Gazette Correspondent.

ALLAHABAD, July 18.—After all we are favoured with a short yet refreshing shower of rain. A great deal more was expected from the dark heavy clouds that began to rise in the north about 4 P.M., but the little that has been given us has sufficed to cool the atmosphere, and we are thankful for it. For agricultural purposes the shower is not likely to do much good. The natives, however, still hope to escape a famine, for if rain falls even within the next fortnight—that is, before the current month of Saawan ends—the harvest may yet be tolerably favourable if not plentiful. Wheat was sold to-day at fifteen seers for the rupee. The Municipal Commissioners have unanimously resolved on reverting to the old chowkedars system; they appear to think, and not without sufficient reason, that constables do not answer so well as was expected for the watch and ward of crowded places like the city, Kuttra, and Colonelgunge. This is paying rather a poor compliment to Mr. Mayne's police, but it could not be helped. The natives are jolly at the prospect of the return of the old piping days of chowkedars screaming themselves hoarse every night.

July 21.—Just a line to say that since Sunday last we have had plentiful rain, and that sickness in consequence has considerably diminished. To-day (Tuesday) it has been raining off and on since the morning, and at this moment heavy clouds are hanging over us, and we will, there is every reason to hope, have a good downpour of several hours' if not several days' duration.

BAREILLY, July 15.—9th July: Strong hot and sickly wind from the N.W.; no rain, the wind lasted all day. 10th July: No rain, a stiff hot breeze from N.W. lasted up to 4½ P.M. 11th July: This morning very sultry; no rain, dead heat mid-day; at 4½ P.M. strong wind with a slight sprinkling of rain from N.W.; at 7½ P.M. very strong wind and heavy rain from N.W. This rain lasted for about two hours, but fell irregular as to quantity and place, even within the space of three miles. 12th July: The clouds looked dark and low from 6 to 10 A.M.; from 12 to 5 P.M. a dead heat. 13th July: Dead heat all day, a slight sprinkling of rain towards evening, scarcely perceptible. 14th July: During early morning and up to 4½ P.M. awfully hot; at 4½ P.M. very heavy rain, preceded with very strong wind and dust storm from N., direct, I think. The storm preceded the rain half an hour. 15th July: No rain, air slightly cooled, but still very sultry. The fakirs of this place have predicted that we shall have a great famine this year, and the dread of this is much affecting many of the farming natives here; indeed nothing but famine is spoken of by the natives. The moon was quite visible at 7 o'clock A.M. on the 10th instant. Cholera is among the natives in this city, and fifteen of them are said to have died on the 9th July, and a good many of them died on the 6th, 7th, and 8th July. Wheat sold at 25 and 26 seers per rupee ten days ago; on the 4th July, 16 seers; on the 10th July, 18 seers per rupee; and on the 12th, 20 seers. It appears one shower of rain has given the poor natives two seers more of wheat, and it is no wonder they hail the coming of rain. Two men of the 37th Regiment died, one of heat apoplexy and the other of fever; one was a colour-sergeant, much respected by all in his corps. The funeral procession of the colour-sergeant of the 37th Regiment I saw this morning was certainly the most respectable and solemn I have ever seen follow a man of his rank to the grave. 1st, the band and drums all in mourning; 2nd, the corpse in a very nice coffin, on which laid the belt, sash, and hat of the deceased on a gun drawn by six horses of D-8th R.A.; 3rd, the chief mourners, the relations of the deceased; 4th, well-wishers in carriages; 5th, the women of the regiment nearly all in mourning, in file; 6th, the staff sergeants of the regiment in fours; 7th, the whole regiment in fours; 8th, the officers of the regiment; 9th, strangers in carriages and on foot. The procession was met by the clergyman at the gate of the cemetery. The service was performed in the most solemn and affecting tone. The deceased left a baby three months old and a young wife to mourn his loss.

SIMLA, July 18.—An appeal has been made in behalf of the Simla school founded by the late bishop. I recently visited the buildings now in course of erection, and was extremely gratified with all saw. The site is a most beautiful one, on the spur of a hill, stretching out so far that you have a splendid panorama of Simla on the one side and the alternate ranges of mountains and valleys toward Kussowlie and the plains on the other. It has the appearance of being most healthy and salubrious. The school-house buildings are very nearly complete, the rooms capacious and airy, and in one of the dormitories, which are on the upper story, bedsteads have already been placed. There is a small quadrangle with a cloister round it, where the boys will be able to take exercise in wet weather. The building is a very pretty one, hardly on a grand enough scale to be called handsome. Laying claim to no architectural knowledge, I am safe I suppose in saying the style is Gothic. The head-master's house is not yet finished, and I suppose the school will not be moved from Jutog till that is ready. Situated in such a delightful spot, amid such splendid scenery, no insignificant element in education, and in such a climate, the school bids fair to become one of the most valuable institutions founded in India during the last half century. I have heard and read a great deal about Lord Dalhousie's magnificent road from Simla into Thibet. I am not able to speak from experience of the condition beyond a few marches out of Simla, but it is fair to conclude that it does not improve the farther it goes. I think it was a mistake constructing this road, though I am aware it is rank hereby to say so. How many lakhs of rupees were expended upon it I do not know, but it must be almost built of silver; and this would not so much matter if it would remain in a serviceable condition; but the fact is, from the nature of its construction, a perfectly, or almost level road cut out of the side of the mountain, or built up upon the side, the expense of keeping it in repair must in a few years almost amount to its original cost. In my opinion the road will have to be abandoned. As it is, even between this and Narkunda, only four marches out, it is in places unsafe—that is to say, it is constantly breaking up, and the traveller can never be certain that he will be able to make the next stage. Where the road rests on solid rock it is all right, but for the greater part of the way it is either cut out of soft shingle or slate, which is perpetually undergoing the process of disintegration, or simply earth, in places banked up. In other parts it is built upon the gallery system, supported by piles of wood, and it was on one of these galleries, which suddenly gave way, not on a bridge, as is generally supposed, that the lamented son of Sir Henry Lawrence met with such an awful death. How the road is looked after I do not know, nor do I know who has charge of it, but I know that before the late rain, which has not been heavy, it was impassable altogether in one place about fifteen miles from Simla, and in at least one other spot between this and Narkunda, most dangerous, a space not a foot in width being all that was left of it, with a tremendous 'kud' beneath; while in other places where it was in perfect repair and could not get much out of repair, because it was there an ordinary road over level ground, there were to be seen coolies under the supervision of the veritable chippassie employed in lazily sweeping the surface with branches of trees. What good this sweeping was intended to effect I do not know; but it enabled the coolies to draw their pay, and the chippassie to have an easy time of it. Of European supervision I saw no trace. Had the money thus thrown away upon nothing at all been expended in repairing the road where it was dangerous and broken down, it would have been a reasonable adaptation of means to an end. But it is the old story; and if the Simla and Thibet road is under the Department of Public Works there is nothing to surprise one in its being in reality a gulf to throw public money into. During the present rainy season the road will be altogether impassable, even between Simla and Koteghur. What it will be farther on you may guess.—Delhi Gazette Correspondent.

THE THIRD INSTALMENT OF THE BANDA AND KIRWEE PRIZE IN INDIA.—H.E. the Governor-general in Council is pleased to authorise the payment of a third instalment of the Banda and Kirwee prize at Rs 120 per share.

THE APPEAL OF THE TIMBER MERCHANTS.—The Act XI. of 1861 is decreed to apply generally to all timber and woods, inclusive of sawn timber and woods, in concession to the wishes of the leading timber merchants of Calcutta.

THE KUPPOORTHULLAH CASE.—The Maharajah of Kupperthullah has deputed his Naib Dewan to London, to conduct before the Secretary of State his Highness' cause against his brothers, Sirdars Beekarna and Suchey Singh.

TAKING UP COMMANDS.—Under instructions from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India, concurred in by H.R.H. the Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief, H.E. the Governor-general in Council notifies, with reference to G.O. No. 740, dated May 19, 1859, that the time passed by a major and brevet lieutenant-colonel in proceeding from the command of one regiment to that of another, the removal having been ordered on public grounds, is to count in full for promotion to that rank of colonel, under Clause 9 of the Royal Warrant of January 31, 1859.

ARRIVAL OF MR. SETON-KARR.—The Hon. W. S. Seton-Karr, the new Foreign Secretary, had arrived from England in the steamer Labourdonnais, and was to proceed at once to Simla to take up his appointment.

THE FRENCH EXPLORING PARTY.—The French expedition from Saigon has at last turned up at Hankow, from which it has proceeded down the Yangtze to Shanghai. It seems to have passed through the new Mussulman Kingdom in Yunan.

PROPOSED DURBAR AT LAHORE.—The Englishman states that Sir John Lawrence has declared his willingness to comply with the request of the chiefs of the Punjab that his Excellency would give them a last opportunity of meeting him in durbar. He has not as yet however named the place at which he will hold the durbar.

INCREASE OF SALARY NEEDED.—The Allahabad correspondent of the Delhi Gazette hears that Sir William Muir has applied to the Supreme Government for an increase of salary to the Secretaries to the North-West Government, and that if the proposal is sanctioned Mr. Simson will be appointed Commissioner of Meerut, and Mr. H. S. Reid will take his place as Secretary to Government.

RUMOURED INVASION OF KASHGAR.—We hear from Cashmere that considerable agitation has been caused amongst the Yarkund merchants by a report that Khodyar Khan, the Ameer of Khokand, had organised an expedition for the conquest of Kashgar, Kutchah, and Yarkund. Yakooob Khoosh Begi was said to be making preparations to meet the coming storm.—Englishman.

BHOOTAN.—The Englishman says that Bhootan is again in a ferment. The durbar have thought it necessary to levy new taxes. They have however only succeeded in throwing the whole country into confusion. The villagers resist the impost, and in many instances have abandoned their former residences and taken to new ones in good positions in the hills.

THE COMMISSION OF THE PEACE.—On the 3rd July an order was made by the High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal for the issue of a Supplementary Commission of the Peace, directed to the undermentioned gentlemen in the Province of Oudh :—Mr. J. Dyson, Assistant Commissioner, Lucknow; Captain Francis Monro Newbery, Assistant Commissioner, Lucknow; Mr. John C. Williams, C.S., Assistant Commissioner, Lucknow; Lieutenant W. Hamilton, Assistant Commissioner, Hurdul.

THE AKHOOND OF SWAT.—The Englishman learns from a correspondent that the Akhoond of Swat appears to be jealous of the influence acquired by Feroze Shah. It is said the old man has exerted his own influence with the Swatees and the cognate tribes to prevail upon them to regard Feroze Shah as an exiled prince only, with whom they might sympathise, and to whom they might lend such general assistance as might be in their power. But the Akhoond has warned them not to regard the prince as a sovereign, or even as a man in whom Mahomedans might repose their hopes.

AN ART-SHOW AT SIMLAH.—An Art Exhibition for the purpose of forming a Society of Amateur Artists for Upper India will be held at Simla in September next, under the patronage of Sir Richard Temple, himself a distinguished amateur, Lieutenant-colonel Lumsden and other officers. The committee hope to receive from the many amateur artists scattered over Northern India good specimens of oil-paintings, water colour pictures, pencil and crayon drawings, pen and ink sketches, architectural designs and photographs. All expenses of transit will be borne by the committee.

PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT (PUNJAB).—The Lieut.-governor has made the following promotions, vice Lieut.-colonel Smith, resigned: Capt. Menzies, from the 3rd to the 2nd grade of District Superintendents; Lieut. Tait, from the 4th to the 3rd grade of District Superintendents; Lieut. Jones, to be a District Superintendent of Police, 4th grade; Mr. Jones, from the 2nd to the 1st grade, 1st class of Assistant District Superintendents; Mr. Ward, from the 3rd to the 2nd grade, 1st class of Assistant District Superintendents; Lieut. Jones, District Superintendent of Police, is posted to the Jhelum district.

CONTENTMENT AMONGST THE CONVICTS AT PORT BLAIR.—It is reported from Port Blair that since the Government have adopted the plan of sending the families of convicts to the Andaman Islands and sanctioned marriage amongst the exiles there has not been a single escape amongst the prisoners. We are also glad to hear that the aborigines have now almost ceased to molest the convicts. This is no doubt due in a great measure to the manifest power of the growing settlement, and to the vigorous efforts made by the authorities to recover the crews of ships wrecked on the coast.—Englishman.

COMPLAINTS AGAINST THE RAJAH OF JEYPORE.—The Rajah of Jeypore, having we suppose managed to get rid of his quarrel with the Chief of Ulwar, has got up a new misunderstanding with a chief called the Nizam of Narnaul. The Rajah is possessed with the idea that as he is the superior in rank and power his sepoys ought to have the privilege of bearing arms when off duty, and in the territories of the Nizam. This however the minor chief has refused to see, and, as the Rajah persisted, the Narnaul Chief has solicited the interference of the Government to compel the Rajah of Jeypore to restrict his demand to such of his followers only as may be protected by a passport.—Englishman.

RETIREMENTS.—The Commander-in-Chief in India accepts the resignation of his commission by Staff Assistant Surgeon T. G. Archdall, subject to approval by her Majesty, dated July 7. The retirement from the service, by the sale of his commission, of Ensign Livingstone Clarke, 26th Foot, is accepted, subjected to approval by her Majesty, dated July 7, 1863. His Honour the Lieutenant-governor of the Punjab, with the sanction of the Government of India, is pleased to accept the resignation by Lieutenant-colonel C. Smith, Bengal Staff Corps, of his appointment as District Superintendent of Police, second grade.

RETURN OF OFFICERS FROM ABYSSINIA.—The following arrangements are directed, consequent on the return from Abyssinia of Captain C. E. Bates :—Captain Marriner, 58th Foot, appointed to officiate as brigade major at Bareilly, by G.O. of the 29th June, will rejoin the regiment to which he belongs. Captain Loughnan, officiating brigade major, is transferred from Meerut to Bareilly, and directed to join on being relieved. Captain Bates, returned from Abyssinia, is posted to Meerut and directed to join. Lieut. Lockhart, late 44th Native Infantry, recently employed with the 3rd Sind Horse in Abyssinia, is directed to do duty with the 1st Bengal Cavalry.

INCREASED RATE OF ALLOWANCE TO THE RAJAH OF SIKKIM.—With reference to a small paragraph relating to the increased rate of allowance lately granted to the Rajah of Sikkim for the cession of Darjeeling, we have been informed that the allowance formerly granted to the Rajah was Rs. 5,000 per annum, and the Home Government, it appears, on the strong recommendation of the Government of India, has now raised it to Rs. 9,000. This increase of allowance has been granted to that native chief in consideration of the amity and friendly feeling he had invariably evinced towards the British Government.—Indian Daily News.

A HARD CASE.—An unusually despotic order was recently issued dismissing all pay-sircars in native regiments from Government employ. It is possible that under the new system the economy effected was judicious, but considering that the men were as much on the establishment of a corps as any one connected with it, to strike them off so summarily was to exercise a power which if just is both unusual and without mercy. After holding Government appointments for a quarter of a century, as is the case with some of them, it is, we think, without parallel that neither bonus nor permission to retain the appointment during the life of present possessors was extended to so hardworking and useful a class of men.—Delhi Gazette.

A SUSPICIOUS STRANGER.—A foreigner, declaring himself a Swiss, who is making a tour of India, has gone down by train from Allahabad to Jubbulpore. He is said to be an Arabic scholar, and given to reading the Koran to large assemblies of Mahomedans. We believe the police have their eyes on him; and, at the present time, when the emissaries of Feroze Shah, et hoc genus omne, are known to be roaming all over India with exaggerated accounts of the Russian operations near our North-West frontier, the exercise of the strictest surveillance over all suspicious characters is fully justifiable. We shall be glad to learn, for publication, the movements of the Swiss, even though at present he be regarded as a designless creature.—Delhi Gazette.

GROSS INHUMANITY.—The other day a dinghy, carrying several passengers, accidentally capsized on the river, and one of the unfortunate men thrown overboard, happening to observe a boat pass that way, called out to the boatmen to come to his assistance, but the men paid no regard whatever to his entreaties. He therefore endeavoured to swim up to the boat, on coming close to which the men, instead of rendering him any assistance, pushed him away with their oars. Mr. H. Ryland, Excise collector, who was at the time crossing the river in the ferry, noticed this, and through his instrumentality the two boatmen were taken into custody. They were subsequently placed before Mr. C. Miller, the magistrate, who sentenced each of the men to undergo one week's imprisonment with hard labour.—Indian Daily News.

LIEUTENANT GOOLD.—Lieutenant F. H. Goold has been committed to take his trial at the August criminal sessions in Calcutta on three distinct counts of forging, and three counts of uttering a forged document, with intent to cheat the Delhi and London Bank. He was remanded on Friday last to the Calcutta Jail. Permission to remain in the police lock-up was denied. His defence has been reserved. One important witness against him was his own manjee or boatman; his statement was that about two o'clock on the 24th June, the day when Mr. Graham, the deputy-manager of the Delhi Bank, had presented the protested bills to Mr. Goold for payment, the prisoner had ordered out his boat, and, sailing up the river, concealed himself in a house until sunset. He then floated down with the tide to Barrackpore, and as soon as it was dark Mr. Goold told the boatman to throw out some of the iron ballast, but the latter declined, as his hands were sore. Mr. Goold then threw out two pieces of iron, and lifted a third piece, which was very heavy, "and God only knows whether it fell from the prisoner's hand, or whether he let it go, but witness heard a sound and said the boat was broken." The boat then began to fill, but Lieutenant Goold would not allow the manjee to make any exertion to get to the shore, and, after the manjee had got to land, the prisoner refused the assistance of a bamboo to pull him on shore. The place where he last saw the prisoner was four miles above Barrackpore.

AN ACTION FOR DEFAMATION.—We hear that an action for defamation has been brought in Lahore by Lieut. Nicholl, of the 5th Fusiliers, against Mr. Wakefield, Assistant Commissioner at Ferozepore. The defendant is accused in the plaint of having charged the plaintiff, at the mess-table of the 5th Fusiliers, with being drunk and assaulting the ferry darogah at Ferozepore. The charge is said to be so utterly without foundation that the plaintiff has felt bound to reject an apology tendered by Mr. Wakefield. The darogah, we also hear, commenced criminal proceedings in Mr. Wakefield's Court against Lieut. Nicholl for the alleged assault; but the Chief Court has removed the case to Umritsur to be tried by Major Urmston.—Lahore Chronicle, July 15.

DISTRESS IN LUCKNOW.—The Lucknow Times is sorry to report that considerable distress is prevalent in that city, owing to the great increase in the price of food. Wheat, which in June was selling at 24 seers the rupee, has now risen to 18, and rice has risen from 18 to 13 seers a rupee, and is daily rising. When, however, we compare these with the current prices throughout the North-West, there is no cause for entertaining any great apprehensions. According to the Delhi correspondent of another paper, the natives in that city have taken to gambling about the rains. The stakes are held by an influential native, by whom some heavy bets have been already decided. The Mahomedans go daily outside the city to the Eedgah, where they offer up prayers for rain. The price of grain of every description is on the increase, and fever has set in.

SPECIFICATIONS OF INVENTIONS.—The undermentioned specifications of inventions have been filed in the office of the Secretary to the Government of India in the Home Department:—Mr. George Leggett, of the firm of Leggett and Son, coach builders, Mount-road, Madras, for giving free ingress and egress to the back of vehicles having a seat parallel with the front one by making the said seat to open and shut with the door; Mr. William Weir, Bombay, engineer, residing at Colaba, in the Island of Colaba, for fastening the iron hoops used for lashing bales of cotton; Mr. J. G. Marshall, of Leeds, in the county of York, England, flax spinner, for improvements in solvent or detergent processes for dissolving the gummy or resinous matters adhering to the fibres of various fibre-yielding plants, or cleansing fibrous material of animal origin, such as wool or silk, from some of the extraneous matters that may adhere thereto.

THE BENGAL MAGISTRACY.—TEMPORARY APPOINTMENTS.—The following officers are appointed to officiate as joint magistrates and deputy collectors of the second grade (all the eleven appointments in this grade being temporarily vacant), viz.:—Messrs. Clark, Hopkins, Quinn, Verner, Beadon, B.A., Meres, Hallett, Hodgkinson, Charles, Stevens, and Manson. The undermentioned officers are appointed to officiate as magistrates and collectors of the first grade and of the second grade respectively, viz.:—Of the first grade, in which there are fifteen acting vacancies:—Messrs. Hankey, Lewis, Reynolds, Bell, Wells, Worgan, Smith, Metcalfe, Grant, D'Oyly, Garrett, Park, Humphery, Alexander, and Monro. Of the second grade, in which all the thirteen appointments are temporarily vacant:—Messrs. Wavell, Sutherland, Whinfield, Bignold, Larmine, Hime, M.A., Raban, Geddes, Glazier, Graham, Ward, M.A., Kenble, and Armstrong.

CORRESPONDENCE REGARDING CHANDERNAGORE.—It is somewhat strange, after the correspondence which has passed on the subject, to find the Government arriving at the conclusion that the French Government are unwilling to part with their settlement at Chandernagore. Had the Cabinet of the Tuileries shown any disposition to meet the British Government in a fair and liberal spirit on the question the exchange or purchase of the settlement might have been arranged for long ago. The most recent stage of the negotiations would seem to have been the submission by the French Government to the Home authorities of a statement, including, amongst other things, of the value of the public buildings at Chandernagore. The estimate fixes the sum at a very extravagant figure, and further specifies a most exorbitant charge on account of the rent of the French lodges in India. This statement has made it plain that there is no disposition at Paris to part with the settlement. The return itself has however been forwarded to the Viceroy for an expression of opinion, and for a report on the whole subject.—Englishman.

THE CASE OF WIFE-SLAUGHTER AT DUGSHAI.—With reference to the case of Sergeant Carthy, who kicked his wife to death at Dugshai, and has been so mercifully pardoned by Sir William Mansfield, a correspondent of the Delhi Gazette says, "The late revision of a Court-martial upon Colour Sergeant Carthy, of her Majesty's 104th Regiment, Dugshai, by the Commander-in-Chief, must strike us all with astonishment. Here is the case of a man who has a drunken quarrel with his wife; in the midst of it he leaves the room for an hour and goes to the Sergeants' mess, where he gets more liquor; he returns to his quarters; the quarrel is renewed, and within ten minutes after his return the woman is found dead, with wounds, as from a kick on her breast, a badly cut head, a cut eye, as from a blow, and ghastly wounds on the back of the head, caused by a fall upon the door-step; a leg of a chair is also found with hair and blood upon it: she was in the family-way at the time. One would have thought that the judgment of the Court-martial, giving a year's imprisonment, was little enough. Supposing it to be the case that there had been no ill-will between man and wife hitherto, no intention of murder, all this was proved indeed, and that he had borne an excellent character for eighteen years; but it does seem a most uncalled for stretch of mercy on the Commander-in-Chief's part to revise so light a punishment and to order the man to return to his regiment with no other disgrace than the fact of his having been a few weeks under arrest or in prison. It is a scandal that after such a deed a man should be allowed to appear before his men with his old rank and with two or three stripes upon his arm declaring that he was still considered by his officers to be a man of good conduct. Had he been found simply drunk, he would probably have been reduced; had he only struck his wife or given her a beating, some punishment would have been inflicted; but is it not intolerable that those in authority should encourage the opinion that if you strike another it is much better, and you will have a much better chance of escape, if you will only do it thoroughly? The fact is, wife-beating is rather too common in the army, and instead of men being allowed to do these things with impunity it would be much better when an opportunity occurs to punish severely."

BRAHMOIST MARRIAGES.—A meeting of the Brahma Somaj was held on July 5 to consider the advisability of petitioning Government to legalise Brahma marriages. Baboo Keshub Chunder Sen, who presided, declared it impossible to say whether Brahma marriages were or were not valid according to Hindoo law. The Advocate-general gave this opinion some time ago, and intimated the expediency of getting an authoritative decision on this obscure point. To a plan which had been proposed to include in a comprehensive movement pantheists, utilitarians, sceptics, and rationalists of all kinds, the Baboo expressed himself decidedly opposed as putting a premium on scepticism and indirectly encouraging misbelief. It was resolved to present a memorial to Government. To legislate specially for 2,000 Brahmists, whose creed is in a state of transition, and has changed radically twice in ten years, would be premature. But the Brahmists deserve relief. The best escape from the difficulty is to permit all non-Hindoo and non-Mussulmans to be married, like Christians, before a civil registrar.

BOKHARA.—A report has reached the Government of India to the effect that the Ameer of Bokhara has at last yielded to the pressure put upon him by the Russian authorities in Turkistan, and has agreed to all the terms of the treaty presented for his signature, with this exception, that he refuses to grant permission for the construction of a fort at Bokhara itself. It is just possible that the Russians may forego the demand for the present, in which case it will not be long before we hear of a treaty having been concluded between General Kauffmann and the Ameer. The letter bringing this report contains a positive assertion that Samarcand has been definitely annexed to the Russian Empire. The Ameer, abandoned by his people, who, according to the Russian accounts, regard him as a traitor to the cause of Islam, and overwhelmed by the consequences of the late defeat of the Crescentaders is evidently in no position to oppose any kind of resistance to the demands of the conquerors. Recent events have made Russia master of the Khanate, for if her arms have taught the people the folly of resistance in the open field, her diplomacy has wrought a breach between prince and people which nothing can heal, and which every new evidence of her success will only make the wider.—Englishman.

HYDERABAD.—We hear from Hyderabad that rain still keeps off, and that the irrigational channels and tanks are dry. The prospect before the people is depicted in very gloomy colours. Our correspondent gives an extract from the Berar District Health Reports, in which it is said—"Several of the poorer classes are leaving their homes to earn a livelihood elsewhere, others are subsisting on the seeds of grass, tamarind, and mowah. The population of the Hyderabad Assigned Districts is stated, according to official returns, to amount to 1,918,352. General orders have been published for the relief of the Corps of the Hyderabad Contingent. The movements are as under:—

Cavalry.

- 1st Cavalry from Hingolee to Aurungabad.
- 2nd " from Aurungabad to Mominabad.
- 3rd " from Bolarum to Hingolee.
- 4th " from Mominabad to Bolarum.

The fourth will send a detachment to Lingasoorgoor, a cantonment to the extreme S.W. of Hyderabad.

Artillery.

The Horse Battery at Ellichpore moves to Aurungabad, and that at Aurungabad to Ellichpore.

Infantry.

- 1st Regiment from Hingolee to Jaulnah.
- 2nd " from Lingasoorgoor to Bolarum.
- 5th " from Hingolee to Jaulnah.
- 6th " from Jaulnah to Hingolee.

Head-quarters will march on 1st November next.

It is expected that the command of the Contingent will be conferred on Colonel Abbott, Madras Staff Corps. Colonel Abbott is at present commanding the 4th Cavalry of the Contingent. This arrangement is of course contingent on the anticipated promotion of the Brigadier-general. Our correspondent remarks that—"Colonel Abbott is considered one of the smartest and best officers in India for the command of an irregular brigade."—Englishman, July 22.

REBEL REFUGEES IN NEPAL.—The Englishman hears from Nepal that the rebel colonies there are great sufferers from cholera and other diseases. Regularly every year since they crossed the frontier has cholera pounced down upon the small community and claimed its victims. The Begum Huzrut Mehal, amongst other devices to mitigate its ravages, constructed a large and spacious dwelling-place. Her precautions have however been without effect. The disease has again made its appearance, and with the usual fatal results. Her followers are now very few in number, and these, together with her son, are anxious to be allowed to return to India. Their representations have induced the Begum, who herself is tired of her exile, to submit a memorial, praying for the pardon of past offences, and for permission to return to India. The Begum and her party will take up their residence in any place on the North-west which may be designated by the Government. She has also stated that should the Government decline to allow them anything for their support she would not press for an allowance. The Government, we believe, is willing to grant an amnesty on these conditions, so that nothing now remains but to convey to the exiles an intimation of the place selected by Government for their residence and a permission to return.

FEARS OF FAMINE IN CENTRAL INDIA.—The register of the rainfall in the Central Provinces during the week ending with the 4th instant is full of warning to the public and the Government of impending calamity. While, with one trifling exception, no rain had fallen in any of the districts, the column of remarks shows that in almost all serious damage to the crops had either already occurred or was imminent. In Bhundara, we are told, the heat was intense, field operations were at a standstill, the rice already sown had dried up, and cholera had broken out; in Chanda, rain was urgently wanted, and it was remarked that if it did not fall soon all the crops in the ground would be destroyed. In Jubbulpore the rice crop was seriously injured by want of rain; in Saugor all seeds sown had been lost from the same cause. In Damoh the khureef sowing was delayed for want of rain; in Seonee the paddy sown had begun to wither. In Munda anxiety was felt, and cholera prevailed; in Narsingpore the sowings had been burnt up, and the hot westerly wind was still blowing. Fever also prevailed, owing to the excessive heat. In Belaspore the khureef crops were almost everywhere seriously diseased. As the country must have had to wait at least another fortnight for rain, if it has yet fallen, after the date of this report, very little hope can be entertained that there will be any harvest to speak of.—Englishman, July 22.

THE OUDH AND ROHILKUND RAILWAY.—We much regret to learn (says the Lucknow Times) that there is some opposition to the carrying out of the Oudh and Rohilkund system of railway in its integrity. In order to take in certain large cities, and to catch the Bombay traffic, the projectors of the East India Railway followed the course of the Ganges as far as Cawnpore, and then struck off for Agra and Delhi. By adopting this route they diverged considerably from a direct line drawn from Calcutta to Lahore and the North-west frontier. Chiefly with the design of partially remedying this defect the Oudh and Rohilkund system of railways was planned, and on reference to a map it will readily be seen that a railway from Buxar to Saharanpore, passing through Fyzabad, Bareilly, and Bijour, would considerably shorten the distance between the Punjab and Bengal. This plan, however, has suddenly been nipped in the bud. Only a part of the project is to be proceeded with. The consequence is that one of the principal objects of the promoters of the Oudh and Rohilkund system will be entirely frustrated. The development of the resources of the two provinces is important, but even this desirable object will but partially be accomplished by running the line into a cul de sac at Bareilly, where it is now said to terminate. Anything more absurd can scarcely be contemplated than having such a place as Bareilly as the terminus of a line, when, by proceeding eighty or ninety miles further on, the whole of the Punjab and North-west would be opened out.

FURLONGS.—The following officers, military, medical, and civil, obtained furloughs, on medical certificate, in July. To proceed to Europe on furlough on urgent private affairs: Surgeon Watson, Superintendent of Vaccination, Allahabad and Jhansie Divisions, from 24th July to 22nd November, 1867, without pay, under the regulations of 1854. To Europe, for twenty months, on medical certificate, Mr. Doyle, Superintendent of Police, 2nd grade, British Burmah, with effect from the 19th June. The undermentioned officers have reported their departure on the date specified opposite to their names:—Lieutenant Jarrett, Staff Corps; Lieutenant Reade, late 67th N.I.; Captain Braughton, late 6th European Regiment, Surat, 6th July, 1868; Mr. Brandeth, of the Bengal Civil Service, has been granted by the Secretary of State for India an extension of leave for six months; Mr. Sandford, of the Civil Service, is permitted to proceed to Europe on furlough for a period of two years from the date of embarkation. Royal Horse Artillery: Assistant Surgeon A. Lower, doing duty B bat alion, D brigade, to England, overland; Lieut. Alexander (B battery, D brigade), to England, overland; Lieutenant Coghlan, to England. 2nd Foot (1st battalion): Lieutenant Squirel, to England, overland. 19th Foot (2nd battalion): Lieutenant Stokes, to England, for six months; Lieutenant Huddart (No. 7 battery, 23rd brigade), to England, overland. 19th Hussars: Lieutenant Carnac, to England via the Cape. 85th Foot: Lieutenant Rudkin, to England, via Egypt. The Rev. G. D. Symonds, B.A., a Junior Chaplain on the Bengal Establishment, extension of leave for six months, on medical certificate.

THE DISTRESS IN CHUMPARUN.—We are receiving very unfavourable advices from Chumparun regarding the weather and the state of the crops. Up to the 17th there had been no rain, but one shower at the commencement of the season. Agriculture was completely at a standstill, and everything that had been sown was burnt up. We also hear that the whole of Behar, north and south, is suffering from drought, though less severely, and there is every prospect of a scarcity. In Chumparun, we fear, early measures of relief will be necessary, and we sincerely trust they will be more timely and effectual than during the last famine, when the part of the district most seriously affected was altogether unthought of and untouched by the operations of the committee. Since writing the above, we hear further that there had been no rain in the district up to the 18th inst., and that water was with great difficulty procurable for the manufacture of indigo. A famine was considered inevitable, and we would strongly urge on the authorities the desirability of immediately organising measures of relief to be put in force the moment it becomes necessary. To make matters worse, cholera is, we understand, raging severely in the southern part of the district. At the same time we hear that rain has at last fallen in the North-West Provinces, though not in any quantity, but we trust it will be in time to prevent the serious calamity with which the country was threatened.—Englishman, July 22.

STATE OF THE ROAD TO PALIMPORE.—A correspondent of the Indian Opinion declares that Palimpore will never become anything like a Nijni Novgorod, unless Government do something for the roads leading to Thibet and Turkistan. The money and engineering talent of the Government have, if we may believe our contemporary, been wasted on these roads at the outset. Lives and a large sum of money have been sacrificed on the Rotang Pass in the construction of a road, which is four miles longer than the old and safe pak-dandi path, which had been used for generations, and was free from heavy snowfalls and avalanches. This year the Rotang Pass has been impassable the whole season, through a heavy fall of snow. In another case the road has been taken three miles farther up the Chandra than the former resting-place, the village of Koksar, and, in consequence, travellers cannot procure provisions. Travellers are known to pass along the road from Koksar to Seesoo, but the road is impassable in many parts. As for the road to Kyelang, the moment the snow begins to melt new and dangerous landslips will take place upon it. Government granted only Rs. 5,000 for the road from Koksar to Lingtee, upwards of a hundred miles, and the workmen employed on it got only an anna or an anna and a-half a day. "How, then, can people expect to have an Indian Nijni Novgorod without a decent road to it?" Government, however, can excuse itself on the plea that the road was never designed to lead to a Nijni Novgorod, but was sufficient for all the traffic that could have been expected. If, however, the Palimpore fair continues to succeed we have little doubt that steps will be taken to improve the road.

DISTURBED STATE OF RAJPOOTANA.—Central India, or rather Rajpootana, is in an unusually disturbed state. The Chief of Joudhpore has not yet discovered a means of allaying the discontent of his Thakoor. The States of Jheend and Loharoo are at variance. Scindhia is troubled by the dacoits which infest the Southern and Western borders of his territory. The Chief of Serohee too has offered a reward of Rs. 5,000 for the apprehension of the Thakoor of Bytana, who has appeared in arms against his suzerain; and to add to the list we hear that Todghur in Meywar is in a disturbed state. The neighbouring tribes of Bheels and Meenas are committing depredations in its vicinity. Protected by the inaccessible character of the country they inhabit, these tribes pounce upon the villages near them, and commit every kind of atrocity, and on the approach of the Rajah's troops disappear into the fastnesses of their hills. It seems to us that the policy we pursue in Rajpootana is founded too exclusively on the rights and interests of the chiefs and princes; the Thakoor and ryots have hitherto been overlooked, and the result is that throughout a vast and thickly-peopled district we hear of nothing but conflicts between the chiefs and their nobles, or between the chiefs and the peasantry. When these are quiet the Bheels and Meenas take up the game, and protected by the wildness of their jungles, and the many foreign territories into which Rajpootana is divided, carry on the business of plunder and rapine almost unchecked. It is time the Government, in its interference in these quarrels, considered both the parties to the dispute. Again, if we allow native chiefs to keep up military forces we ought to take some means for ensuring their efficiency against such foes as the Bheel tribes. Until this is done peace and progress in Rajpootana is impossible.—Englishman.

THE MILITARY FURLOUGH RULES.—A writer to the Delhi Gazette finds fault with the new rules. "Disappointment seems to be the general feeling amongst officers with regard to the new furlough rules, the promised liberality of which it is difficult to discover. The solitary benefit they confer is the retention of appointment on half-pay, and allowances for the whole period of furlough, whether on sick certificate or otherwise. But of this it can only be said that it cancels a rule which it was a crying grievance had been allowed to exist so long, namely, the deprivation of appointment on taking furlough except on sick certificate, which virtually prevented the majority of officers from doing so on other terms. These new rules cost Government nothing, inasmuch as it is not the latter but the officer who officiates for an absentee who is to suffer by being allowed only half staff of the officiating appointment for the whole period, instead of half staff for the first six months, and full staff for the rest of the time. Again, the difference in furlough pay of an officer on staff employ, and of one of the same rank without it, appears very unfair, the furlough pay of a major in command of a N.I. regiment, for instance, being £740 a-year, against £380 of his less fortunate contemporary. The old illiberal rule allowing only two years of leave of every kind out of twenty-four years' service to count for pension still holds good, as well as that by which an officer compelled to go home on sick certificate within three years of his return from furlough, whether on medical certificate or otherwise, forfeits his appointment, a consideration which will still deter many officers from taking leave in the first instance. The new civil rules, modified before publication through the exertions of the junior members of that service, appear to be really liberal, and have consequently given universal satisfaction. The fact that these civil rules involve a large additional expense to Government is enough to point out the partiality shown towards a service already so much favoured. The long-looked for but cruelly disappointing new military furlough rules may be a slight improvement on those of 1854, but to call them liberal is simply a fallacy."

DEATH AT BANGALORE.—We regret to have to record the death, at Bangalore, of typhoid fever, of Captain H. Anderson, Royal Artillery, formerly of the old Madras Artillery. His premature death will be sadly deplored by the many friends, and by none more than his old companions of the E. and A. troops in Whitlock's column. Anderson was full of dash and courage, he had the true spirit of the soldier in him, and had his life been spared would have added to the laurels of his glorious regiment. He had already seen good service.—South of India Observer, July 16.

MILITARY ITEM.—The British transport Durham, which left Bombay on the 9th July, arrived on the morning of July 21, with three commissioned officers and one hundred and seventeen men of H.M.'s 45th Regiment, six commissioned officers of various corps, and ten men of the Madras Sappers and Miners, from the late Abyssinian campaign. The party landed at four o'clock in the afternoon opposite the High Court. The officers and men of H.M.'s 45th Regiment at six o'clock marched direct to the fort, the band of their own regiment playing them in. The men of the Sappers and Miners marched to the Moument Esplanade.

THE MADRAS RAILWAY.—The traffic receipts to the South-West Line for the week ending 11th July, 1868, amounted for passengers, &c., to Rs. 29,172-14-6, for goods, &c., to Rs. 57,874-12-10, making together Rs. 87,047-11-4; or an average receipt per mile of Rs. 176-14-10. During the corresponding week in 1867 the receipts were Rs. 78,261-2-11, or an average receipt per mile of Rs. 159-1-1. The receipts of the N. W. Line for the same week amounted for passengers, &c., to Rs. 5,211-8-9, for goods, &c., to Rs. 23,528-15-5, making together Rs. 28,740-8-2; or an average receipt per mile of Rs. 187-13-7. During the corresponding week in 1867 the receipts were Rs. 20,943-15-1, or an average receipt per mile of Rs. 136-14-3.

MADRAS VOLUNTEER GUARDS.—Ensign E. P. Coultrup, of No. 2 Company, is permitted, at his own request, to resign his commission in the Volunteer Guards.

MILITARY.—The local Government have approved of the proposition to convert the Native Artillery garrisoning Cuttack and Mangalore into a mountain train battery, the armament and establishment being on the same principle as in the Bengal Presidency, viz., four three-pounder guns with carriages, two twelve pounder howitzers mountain train, two spare carriages, or what would be much preferable, and six seven-pounder muzzle loading rifled mountain guns, which it is understood to be the universal mountain train gun for India. The establishment of each battery will consist of four havildars, four naigues, sixty-four drivers, sixty-four mules, forty grass cutters, and two farriers or nalbunds. On the eventual withdrawal of the two regiments of Madras Native Infantry from the Straits Settlements, it has been arranged to furnish a full regiment of Native Infantry to each of these stations, where only a wing has heretofore been located. This arrangement will tend to lessen the guard duties devolving on the reduced military strength at present maintained at Cuttack and Sumbulpore.—Madras Times.

FURLONGHS.—The following furloughs were granted in July to Europe:—Lieut. Chrystie, Assistant Superintendent of Police, Cuddapah, for two years, and to embark from Madras. Lieut. Mainwaring, R.E., on medical certificate for twenty months, and to embark from Madras. Capt. Childers, Commissary of Ordnance, 2nd Class, Pegu Division, for two years, and to embark from Madras. Lieut. Coningham, Royal (Madras) Engineers, Executive Engineer, 3rd Grade, Wynaad, for two years, and to embark from Madras. Lieut. Vibart, Executive Engineer, 3rd Grade, Kistna District, for two years, and to embark from Madras. Lieut. Wetherall, Infantry, General List, attached to 26th Regt. N.I., on medical certificate for twenty months, and to embark from Madras. Lieut. Mainwaring, R.E., Assistant Engineer of the 2nd Grade, has preparatory leave for one month, from July 4. Mr. R. Davidson, Civil and Session Judge of Trichinopoly, for fourteen months and twenty-four days, with subsidiary leave under section 11 of the Civil Service Absentee Rules of 1868.

THE LATE MAJOR DENTON.—We regret to learn from Cannanore of the death of Major J. Denton, of the Invalid Establishment, and one of the oldest officers of the late E. I. Company's Military Service. Major Denton died at his residence in Cannanore on the afternoon of the 12th July, and was buried with full military honours on the following morning. The deceased officer was transferred to the European Veterans in the year 1820, and was invalided after thirty-five years' active service. He was much respected by all who knew him for his kindness and urbanity. We find that Major Denton joined the Horse Brigade so early as 1808, and was engaged with the chieftain Bunglers, served under Colonel Close in pursuit of the chieftain Ahmed Khan in 1810, with the expedition under his Excellency Sir Samuel Ouchmuty against the island of Java in 1811, when he received the Java medal. He was at the taking of Weltevreden, and at the storming of Fort Cornelis, was detached with nineteen select men on board H.M.'s brig Progress in pursuit of piratical praas round the coasts of Batavia and the Straits of Banco. Major Denton was also employed in the expedition under Commodore Bowen and Major-General Gillespie. At the taking of Pulembany he was one of the first who landed, and was wounded in the right leg at the storming of Djogakarta. He was present at Muritch against the troops of the ex-Peishwa, and again at Pundapoor in 1817. He took part in the cavalry combat of Ash-tee, where Gokla fell in 1818. He was present at the siege and taking of Asseerghur in 1819, and rendered good service in putting down the insurrection of Kittoor in 1824, when, after receiving four severe wounds, one through the right arm, one sword cut on the right side, one arrow wound in the right thigh, and one wound in the left hand, thereby rendering it almost useless, he effected the withdrawal of the party, bringing off the public treasure under the gallant fire of a very superior force.—Standard, July 17.

DISCHARGES AWAITING PENSION.—Soldiers of H.M.'s British regiments who have elected to reside and draw their pension in India, and are awaiting the decision of the Chelsea board as to the amount of their pensions, will be permitted to proceed to England, should they desire it, before the completion of their discharge.

IMPROVEMENT OF THE RIVER AT SUKKUR.—The Sindian states that about 50,000 cubic yards of rock have been excavated during the past year to improve the course of the Indus at Sukkur, at an expense of Rs. 2,13,479. A strip of rock fifty feet wide, of the whole length of the pass, has been recovered, and a clear open channel has been found, which it was anticipated will greatly relieve the Roree Pass during the present inundation.

PENSIONS TO THE WIDOWS OF OFFICERS AND SOLDIERS.—Hannah Elizabeth, widow of the late Capt. P. Cowley, Deputy Commissary, is admitted to pension at Rs. 36 per mensem, from the date succeeding that of her husband's death. Eliza, widow of the late Conductor Thomas Holtham, Ordnance Department, is admitted to pension at Rs. 20 per mensem, from the day succeeding that of her husband's death. Mrs. Jahagan, widow of the late Sub-Conductor J. Gahagan, of the Bombay Sappers and Miners, is admitted to pension at Rs. 9-5-1 per mensem, from the day succeeding that of her husband's death.

THE G. I. P. RAILWAY.—We are able to announce that both General Rivers, the agent, and Mr. Jas. Rushton, the chief engineer of the G. I. P. Railway, are likely very shortly to relinquish their respective posts on that railway. As to the General, no one could be surprised were he to own that he has had quite his share of Indian service; but with Mr. Rushton the case is different, and it is difficult to see how, at this juncture, the interests of the railway must not inevitably suffer by the withdrawal of his great practical ability and his valuable local experience in connection with the engineering requirements of the line.—Times of India.

TELEGRAPHIC.—The mean time occupied in the transmission of messages between Great Britain and India via Turkey, in the month of June, was 2 days, 14 hours, 36 minutes; via Russia it was 2 days, 23 hours, 55 minutes. The number of messages from Great Britain via Turkey was 882, and via Russia 110. As regards the time there was a great improvement in that month. The statement before us shows the average time in each month since June, 1867; and in the case of telegrams via Turkey the average for June last is the most satisfactory. In June and July, 1867, the average was slightly less in the case of telegrams via Russia; in other months it was greater than in June last.—Bombay Gazette.

THE NEW GOVERNOR OF CEYLON.—A proclamation has appeared in the Ceylon Government Gazette of July 2 to the effect that "Major-General Studholme Hodgson, colonel of her Majesty's 54th Regiment, commander of the forces in Ceylon and the Straits Settlements, had been sworn in to administer the government of the said Island of Ceylon, with the dependencies thereof." It was further notified that the Major-general administering the government had been pleased to make the following appointments: Lieutenant-Colonel J. S. Young, h.p., 80th Regiment, to be private secretary, and Captain the Hon. E. R. Bourke, 6th Dragoons, to be aide-de-camp.

A DIFFERENCE WITH BAHREIN.—On Saturday, July 25, H.M.'s steamer Vigilant left Bombay for the Persian Gulf. Her commander, Capt. Brown, bears instructions to support the resident in demanding compensation from the Chief of Bahrein for the recent piratical attacks on his neighbours, and the damage done to certain British subjects trading on the southern shore of the gulf. In the event of a refusal on the part of the Bahrein Chief, the Vigilant will enforce the demand for redress. The amount of the loot taken and damage done was four lakhs of rupees. The commander of the Vigilant and the resident between them will no doubt convince the Bahrein Chief that the maritime truce is not to be lightly broken.

SUCCESSOR TO MR. H. BULKLEY.—It has, we believe, been decided, and very sensibly so, to abolish the appointment recently held by the late Mr. Harrington Bulkley, and to place Dr. Forbes, the clever Commissioner of the Improvement Department, at the head of both departments, which will be amalgamated under him. By this means the senior officials of the Frauds Department will be enabled regularly to devote their attention to improvement work, as in point of fact they have chiefly but irregularly done for a considerable time past. Whether any assistance will be afforded to Dr. Forbes in carrying on his supervision over so large a district as will be now placed under his control we do not yet know; but it would seem to be a charge almost too great to be undertaken, or, let us say, accomplished, single-handed. Anyway, we are glad that the energies of the Department are now to be officially directed to the improvement of cotton cultivation, instead of, as heretofore, being at once the most important, and yet an officially acknowledged portion of their duties. The report of the Department's labour during the past year, which is now before Government, will, if we be not greatly mistaken, prove the value of the efforts over which Dr. Forbes has presided, and in which he has hitherto been mainly assisted by the officers of the sister Department. It was said that the ryots would never allow themselves to be persuaded into new tracks by the exhortations of officials whom they would surely regard as spies, sent by Government to spy out the fatness of the land, and furnish it with a justification for increasing its demands upon the pockets of the cultivators. This prediction however has happily been but very slightly borne out by experience.—Poona Observer.

A COMPLAINT. Sir Robert Napier's despatch of 29th June contains the names of a large number of officers who are deservedly brought to the favourable notice of the Home Government. Our attention however has been called to the omission of one name, that of Captain Hawkes, Assistant Commissary-General. This officer did excellent work at Zoolla for many months, and left Annesley Bay at the end of May, when nearly all the troops had re-embarked. All who know the very onerous duties which devolved upon the Commissariat Department at Zoolla during the campaign can bear witness to the untiring energy and zeal of Captain Hawkes in carrying them out. It does therefore seem strange that this officer's name should not appear in the list. We can only suppose it to be an accidental omission, and we feel assured that Sir Robert Napier, as soon as his attention is directed to it, will do justice to one who has done so much to bring this very remarkable campaign to a successful issue.—Bombay Gazette.

THE COLLISION AT COLABA.—The Court for official inquiry into the circumstances connected with the collision of the transport Humber with the outer light-ship at Colaba met on Tuesday, July 21, to give decision on the evidence. Mr. Connon, the Chief Magistrate, and Captain Dixon were on the bench, and the former gave the judgment of the Court, which found that a shipmaster of Captain Bell's long experience should have known that it was very dangerous to approach a light vessel within a hailing distance under such circumstances as those of the present case and in weather like that which he had stated prevailed when the collision occurred. The Court therefore arrived at the conclusion that Captain Bell was solely to blame for the collision forming the subject matter of this investigation, and they regretted that they were called upon to perform a painful duty, but they could not, under all the circumstances, do less than order that Captain Bell's certificate of competency be suspended for a period of two months.

FURLONGS AND LEAVE OF ABSENCE.—The undermentioned officer has obtained leave of absence, subject to confirmation by H.E. the Commander-in-Chief in India:—Lieutenant Abbott, 109th Foot, to England by the overland route, on medical certificate. This officer is not available for duty with troops, and will, on arrival, report himself to the Adjutant-general, Horse Guards. Captain Van Straubenzie, 14th Brigade R.A., from July 1 to August 31, in extension. The following officers are allowed furlough to Europe for two years, under rule IX. of the regulations of 1868:—Major Scott and Capt. Glasford, Staff Corps; Lieut. Babington, 9th Bengal Cavalry, is allowed furlough to Europe for twenty months, on medical certificate; Conductor Vint, of the Ordnance Department, is allowed furlough to Europe for eighteen months, on medical certificate, to proceed overland; Surg. Hewlett, Coroner of Bombay, is allowed leave of absence to Europe on medical certificate for six months, from July 14; Capt. Thompson, H.M.'s 3rd Regt., Madras L.C., is allowed furlough to Europe for twenty months, on medical certificate.

ARRIVAL OF MEDICAL OFFICERS FROM ABYSSINIA.—The following medical arrangements are ordered:—Surgeon-major Gilbert to be Acting Staff Surgeon and Deputy Medical Storekeeper at Mhow, and to join when relieved from his present duties, v. Thorold, proceeded to Europe, on sick leave from Zoolla. Surgeon Plumtre to the medical charge of the 2nd Grenadier Regt. N.I., v. Burrowes, proceeded to Europe on sick leave from Zoolla. Surgeon Straker, from the 25th Regt. N.I., to the medical charge of sappers and miners. Assistant Surgeons Riddell, to the medical charge of the 25th Regt. N.I., v. Straker; Hunter, to the medical charge of the 3rd Regt. N.I., v. Alleyne, proceeded on sick leave to Europe from Zoolla; Sexton, M.D., from the 27th Regt. N.I., to the 29th Regt. N.I.; Nolan, M.B., to the medical charge of the 27th Regt. N.I., v. Sexton; Cowell, from general duty, Presidency, to general duty, Sind Division; Knapp, to general duty, Poona Division; Batty and DeTatham, to general duty, Northern Division; Halliday, to general duty, Presidency; McAlister, M.B., to general duty, Southern Division.

THE TWENTY-FOUR PERGUNNAHS.—The part of the Twenty-four Purgunnahs where the crops have been wholly destroyed is in a condition to excite apprehension as to what the people can do to sustain themselves. The rice is principally a "bunani" or broadcast crop, and the hope that the "roalli" or planted crop could be made to supply young plants for the land, where the first broadcast crop was destroyed, appears to be a vain hope. The Government has come fully to know this fact, but what is to be done is the difficulty, and meanwhile the condition of many villages is becoming serious. Several families are known to have left their houses and what little they possessed and gone off in search of the means of living. So far as this indicates an effort on the part of the people to help themselves it is good, but as indicative of the present and prospective state of the southern part of the Twenty-four Purgunnahs it tells no very pleasant tale. And it is well known that families, driven by poverty and want from their native villages, have to dwell in the most miserable huts wherever they go; a few leaves tied on a few rough sticks to be the "home" of husband, wife, and children for months, until the means can be collected and ground rented for a decent mud-walled hut. The result is generally death to one or more members of each migrating family; so that this beginning of an exodus within twenty miles of Government House has a dark side to it, and should be closely looked after.—Indian Daily News.

THE BRITISH ASSOCIATION.

At the meeting of the association on Friday last, at Norwich, Mr. C. R. Markham, Government Geographer of the Abyssinian expedition, read a paper on the geography of the expedition. The following is an extract: That region which was traversed by the English troops is far from being the least interesting in Abyssinia. A series of mountains and plateaux extending north and south for upwards of 300 miles, form the watershed between the Nile and the Red Sea, and containing the sources of Egypt's fertility. These mountainous regions have the sea comparatively near on one side, so that on the eastern flanks only small torrents flow down, which are dried up by the scorching heat as they approach the Red Sea: while on the western side there is room for tributaries with long courses along deep valleys. The Abyssinian highlands, from the elevation of 7,000 to 10,000 feet, enjoy a delightful climate, but are not so favourably placed as to moisture as other temperate regions within the tropics. On one side is the boundless Sahara desert, on the other the boundless strip of the Red Sea, with the arid wastes of Arabia beyond. Abyssinia has to look to the equator for most of her moisture. When the sun comes to the north after having pumped up the necessary water from the Indian Ocean, then from June to September she gets her rainy season. One feature of this region is its deep ravines and river beds, which carry off the moisture. The deepest of these gorges are towards the coast, and form magnificent features in the scenery. A description of the flora of this alpine region and of the valleys traversed by the expedition followed. The country between Antola and Magdala is a mountainous region entirely composed of volcanic rock, but it is divided into two distinct parts by the river Takazé. To the north of Antola the scenery becomes grand, the vegetation varied and abundant, and the supply of water plentiful. The Magdala district, with reference to the Talanta plateau, is not, properly speaking, a mountainous region. It is simply a portion of the great basaltic mass which has been cut up and furrowed by the action of water during many years. Magdala and Fala are isolated bits of the original plateau. The scenery of this wild country, where the forces of nature appear to have been at work gradually, but with such tremendous effect, is most striking. Looking from the heights of Magdala, the lofty ridges and profound ravines would appear very grand in their apparently wild confusion, were it not that the view is always bounded by the straight basaltic wall of Talanta, which rises above them all, and has the effect of dwarfing everything below it. The region I traversed with the expeditionary field force from the sea coast to Magdala, a distance of more than 300 miles, is one of considerable geographical interest, and the operations of the expedition have added much to our knowledge. The remarkable passes from the coast to the highlands of Abyssinia have been thoroughly explored, the mountain chains forming the water-shed of a vast region have been examined, and the numerous sources of the great fertilising tributaries of the Nile have been accurately surveyed. Besides the observations I have taken, that most zealous and indefatigable of Quartermaster-generals, Colonel Phayre—(cheers)—has completed a rough but useful survey of the whole country traversed. Dr. Cooke, notwithstanding severe illness, has done much valuable meteorological work, and the officers of the Indian trigonometrical survey have completed the mapping of the eastern portion of the Abyssinian highlands. But important as the geographical results of the expedition have been, our science is not the only one that will be enriched by it. Mr. Blandford, who, from his intimate knowledge of the analogous formations in the Deccan, was peculiarly well qualified for the work, has found the geology of this part of Abyssinia to be exceedingly interesting—so interesting that he resolved to be amongst the last to quit Abyssinian soil. He has also added to our knowledge of the zoology of the country, and ascertained the existence of four distinct zones into which the fauna is divided. Mr. Jesse, who was sent out by the Zoological Society, and several officers, have also made large collection of skins, both of birds and mammals. The botany had been already thoroughly worked out by M. Schimper, the nestor of King Theodore's captives. The country on the line of march also presents many points of antiquarian interest. The ruins of the Greek emporium at Adulis, on the coast, and of Koboito, at the head of the Deganta Pass, offer a field of research of no common interest to the archæologist, as throwing light on the ancient intercourse between the Axumite kingdom and the Egypt of the Ptolemies. The cave church of Dongola, the curious ruins at Agula, and the famous caverns of Lalibela illustrate the later period when one of the most ancient Christian churches was established in Abyssinia. Nor can it be said that nothing of antiquarian value was to be gained worth taking away when several thousand MS. parchment folios were found in the library of King Teoderos, and a golden chalice belonging to Sultan Segud, a king who flourished in the 16th century, was among the plunder of Magdala. The main objects of the Abyssinian expedition have been gained. (Applause.) The men of science who accompanied the expedition have not returned empty handed, and there are few regions in the globe where so much could be found to repay inquiry. (Renewed applause.)

Dr. H. Blanc read an interesting paper on the "Native Races of Abyssinia," in which he sketches the character of the country, its separation by almost impassable mountain ranges from the burning shores of the Red Sea and the sandy deserts where the Daulkili and the Adail roam in search of pasture—more frequently of plunder; from the north and west; from the Savanna, inhabited by the Bareas, the Suankalas, and the many Arab tribes; the vast expanse stretching from the foot of the Ethiopian basaltic rocks to the White Nile, and to those almost unknown regions wherein the Pagan Gallas dwell. Detailed characteristics of the following great divisions were given, premising that the Abyssinians differ from all other native African races in presenting much analogy to many European nations. There never was, in all probability, a pure original Abyssinian race. The Amharas—a name applied to the majority of the population—are all Christians; the Nigre people, dwelling in the north, and much resembling the Amharas; the people of Lasta, who combine the best points in the two former; the Shoas—each of these being Islams. The Falashas are the most important of the separate tribes, and are the supposed descendants of Jews said to have accompanied the Queen of Sheba on her return from her visit to Solomon, and to have settled in the country under the rule of Menilek, the alleged offspring of Solomon. The Kainawrits, a peculiar people, having much in common with the Falashas, and professing a religion which is a mixture of Judaism and Paganism, though under compulsion exercised by Theodore, they for a time professed to be Christians. The Agners, another separate tribe, are of Galla origin, but whose manners are such as to have impressed themselves favourably on Dr. Blanc's remembrance. The Agaws wear the Mahtah—the mark of Christianity, but who are looked upon with some prejudice by the Amhara Christians. The Zalas are a separate caste, industrious, and therefore looked on with contempt by the lazy and vain-glorious Amhara, but still, by the help of a stick, enabled to hold his own against several Amharas armed with spear and shield. The Waitos, another small tribe, is noted for their predilection for the unclean hippopotamus, and consequently placed under a ban, though actually always obliging and civil. The Figens are a border tribe, cruel, and famed for their powers of incantation. The Wallo Gallas, originally from Equatorial Africa, were, however, before Theodore's rise, the most powerful people in Abyssinia. They invaded the country in the sixteenth century, not only subdued and occupied the fairest provinces, their present country, but often carried their victorious arms to Gonda and Tigre, and imposed their rule on many Christian emperors. They are a brave, handsome race, and now that their great enemy is no more, they bid fair, should they bury in oblivion all internal rivalries and petty jealousies, and once more unite to overrun Abyssinia and impose on the debauched and sensual Christians of that country the false creed of the Koran. Such, said Dr. Blanc, in conclusion, are the several tribes and classes that constitute the Abyssinian races. Taken as a whole, with the exception of the oppressed and hard-working peasants, there is nothing in them to praise or extol. Beggars infest the land; the priests are ignorant and bigoted; the soldiers the curse of the country. Abyssinians, I regret to say, are cowardly, adepts at low treachery, lazy, pretentious, and pompous. Naturally drunkards and gluttons, they are only abstemious by necessity, and their festivals are but low and coarse orgies. They have no literature, no means of intellectual recreation. Their conversation is a revolting, incoherent talk, partly blasphemous, partly lascivious, and when they favoured us with their society, always ending in requests for favours. When we state that cleanliness is a shame, debauchery no disgrace; robbery, treachery, and murder glorious deeds, we have summed up the qualifications most prized by that degraded race; and if their timorous nature made them recoil before the daring act of murdering the white men, their guests, they enjoyed, at least for a while, the idea of their importance, and swaggered full of pride before the few helpless individuals their King detained in captivity and in chains.

Mr. Rassam was called for, and, on presenting himself, was loudly cheered. He said that he was unprepared to speak, and had an engagement which obliged him to leave. He assured them that he left them with greater regret than he did their late entertainer, King Theodore. (Laughter and applause.)

Miscellaneous.

Her Majesty has also been graciously pleased to nominate and appoint Major James Augustus Grant, C.B., Bengal Staff Corps, to be a Companion of the said Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.

ARTILLERY PURCHASE SCHEME.—Suggestions for facilitating the working of a scheme for accelerating promotions in the cadre of the late Bengal Artillery:—1. That every officer, serving or on leave in England, a supporter of or subscriber to the scheme, authorise Messrs. Cox and Co. to pay into a fund, to be styled Bengal Artillery Promotion Fund, the sum of two quotas at once. 2. That, on a step being purchased and one quota debited on account, Cox and Co. be authorised to pay into said fund the sum of one quota, and thus maintain, as "purchase-money" lodged, the sum of two quotas of such subscriber. 3. That the home affairs of the fund be audited once a year, printed, and circulated at home and abroad. 4. That a similar account be opened with the Bank of Bengal, Calcutta, to enable officers serving abroad to pay in their quotas through the honorary secretary. 5. That officers in India maintain the sum of two quotas as "purchase-money" lodged with the honorary secretary, as proposed, for officers at home. 6. That the Indian accounts be likewise audited once a year, printed, and circulated to all concerned. 7. That Messrs. Cox and Co. be furnished with a scale of quotas to guide them in debiting officers' accounts with the quotas paid in by them to credit of the fund. 8. That the fund be maintained on the only possible basis that such a fund can be supported and satisfactorily worked—viz., prepayment of quotas not less than two. 9. That a board of three officers be appointed to look after the affairs of the fund, one at home and one abroad, with an honorary secretary to each.—Army and Navy Gazette.

INDIAN CROMLECHS.

The Saturday Review thinks the most generally interesting of Dr. Hooker's observations are those relating to the researches now being made among the indigenous tribes of India. No limit can at present be assigned to the discoveries which may be awaiting an adequate investigation of the less known parts of the great Indian continent. Dr. Hooker was probably right when he said that many members of the association would hear with surprise that within 300 miles of Calcutta there exists a tribe of savages "who habitually erect dolmens, mehares, cysts, and cromlechs almost as gigantic in their proportions and very similar in appearance and construction to the so-called Druidical remains of Western Europe." Their country is "dotted with groups of huge unpolished squared pillars, and tabular slabs supported on three or four rude piers." These blocks—some of which are erected every year—are detached from the solid rock by successive applications of heat and cold water, and then transported to the site where they are to stand by ropes and levers. It is almost incredible that these facts should have been known for nearly a quarter of a century without exciting any active curiosity. Colonel Yule described them as long ago as 1844, and Dr. Hooker himself inspected them in 1850. It is hard to say what light may not be thrown on the early history of mankind by the study of these monuments in connection with the habits and character of the race by which they are actually raised. How intact the barbarism of this people still is may be gathered from the fact that they measure distances by the mouthfuls of betel-leaves chewed in the journey, and hold so loose by the marriage tie that the son commonly forgets his father, and the sister's son inherits. Dr. Hooker mentions one fact in connection with their language, which is at least a suggestive coincidence. Their word for a stone is "man," and it "as commonly occurs in the names of their villages and places as 'man,' 'maen,' or 'men' does in those of Britanne, Wales, or Cornwall." Now that the attention of scientific men in this country has been at length called to the subject it is to be hoped that they will be urgent, both with the Home Government and the Government of India, not to neglect the opportunity for profitable research which the existence of such tribes affords.

MAJOR-GENERAL SIR C. STAVELEY.

The Army and Navy Gazette spoke last week of an unreasonable complaint as to the promotion of Major-general Sir Charles Staveley to his present rank, and showed how infinitesimally small was the injury done to the colonels now senior to him. While we see no reason to modify that view, we must, at the same time, express surprise at seeing his commission as major-general dated September 25, 1867. He will thus take his place on the fixed establishment of Cavalry, Guards, and Line generals after Major-general Holdich, and will thus go over the heads of sixteen existing general officers, as well as the thirty-five colonels before him on the list. This appears as inexplicable as it is objectionable. Why ante-date his promotion nearly a year? He did not get local rank or temporary rank on that day, as far as we are aware. It was not the date of the capture of Magdala or the conclusion of the Abyssinian Expedition; and, really, so far as any justification for the step is to be found, the authorities might as well have gone back a couple of years more and hoisted General Staveley on a score or two more steps up the seniority ladder. We have known no case like it since that ludicrously indefensible job, the promotion of Major-general F. H. G. Seymour to unattached rank with seniority from the day he would have obtained it had he been qualified according to the Royal Warrant.

BILLS ON INDIA.—The biddings for bills on India took place on Wednesday, the 19th inst., at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were: To Calcutta, £185,400; and to Madras, £14,600. The minimum price was fixed, as before, at 1s. 10½d. per rupee on both Presidencies. Tenders at 1s. 10½d. will receive about 2 per cent., those above that rate will be allotted in full. No tenders on Bombay were invited. The result shows a further decline, the demand for remittance having fallen off.

EXTRACT FROM PREFACE.

"I am not without a hope that these memoirs may be regarded, in some sort, as a Biographical History of India from the days of Cornwallis to the days of Canning. * * I have not attempted, indeed, to write History; the work has grown up spontaneously out of the Lives of the great men who make history * * and, unless the ability of the execution has fallen far short of the sincerity of the design, I have done something, in these pages, to do honour to a race of public servants unsurpassed in the history of the world. * * I have striven to show how youths, from the middle-class families of our British Islands, have gone forth into the great Eastern world, and by their own unaided exertions carved their way to fame and fortune.

"J. W. KAYE."

From the ATHENÆUM.

"We say at once that more admirably-written and interesting narratives are scarcely to be found in any literature. We do not envy the man who could read without deep emotion the lives here given of Conolly, Lawrence, and Nicholson; and we doubt whether the whole range of history can show more perfect characters. Nobler subjects of biography could not have been chosen, and higher praise it is impossible to bestow on a writer than to say, as we do of this author, that he is fully equal to such a theme. * * Mr. Kaye's 'Lives of Indian Officers' will take a high place among the standard books of England."

From the SPECTATOR.

"A cadet, an artillery officer, an editor, an employee of the first rank, a successful historian, Mr. Kaye unites in his own person all the qualifications requisite to the biographer of the great Indian soldiers."

From the READER.

"Two stout volumes of biography, which, arranged chronologically, have, in addition to their biographical interest, great historical value as illustrations of the progress of political government, warlike exercise, and philanthropic effort in India during the last three generations. It is a work of remarkable interest; the interest being due not only to the stirring subjects of which it treats, but also to the admirable way in which the subjects are treated."

GOD BLESS OUR SAILOR PRINCE.

A National Song, with Chorus ad lib. The Poetry by J. E. CARPENTER. The Music composed by STEPHEN GLOVER.

"This Song has a heartiness about it quite in accordance with the popular feeling which the late attempt upon the life of our Sailor Prince has so strongly evoked. Easy for the solo voice, and equally easy for the hands in accompaniment, with a chorus so plain in its harmonic treatment that all may take part in the thankful and rejoicing strain, this piece of circumstance pleads well for universality of adoption either at the festive meeting or the choral assembly; and it will, doubtless, become a general favourite, especially in circles where a more elaborate style of music would be as out of place as it would be unattainable of execution."—Vide Midland Counties Herald, July 30.

THETEXTILE MANUFACTURES

AND THE

COSTUMES OF THE PEOPLE OF INDIA

Prepared under the Authority of the Secretary of State for India in Council.

By J. FORBES WATSON, Reporter on the Products of India.

Imperial quarto, morocco back, cloth, with numerous coloured Photographs. £3. 5s.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

THE TIMES.—"On no point, perhaps, in regard to India, has greater ignorance prevailed in England than in respect to the clothing of her vast population. Late as it is, and for the first time within the last hundred years of our Indian domination, the work just completed by Dr. Forbes Watson supplies this great and almost unaccountable want of information, and supplies it, too, in a most complete and intelligible manner. It would be impossible to follow Dr. Watson's work in detail; but, whether to the manufacturer or to the general reader, the interest throughout will continue unbroken. His book is written in a clear and thoroughly intelligible style throughout; it is handsomely got up, and embellished by numerous coloured photographs from which the various styles of costumes and portions of clothing, male and female, will be more readily understood than from mere descriptions."

THE ATHENÆUM.—"We may safely say that a more important work on the manufactures of India has never been given to the public, than the Industrial Museum, and this Commentary by Dr. Forbes Watson. Advantages are sometimes slow to follow, even when the channel for them has been skillfully made and clearly marked out, but we certainly do anticipate very great results from this work, and that before long its author will be acknowledged to deserve a place amongst the real benefactors of India."

THE EDINBURGH REVIEW.—"It is a matter of national importance to study and ascertain what the traditions of India in respect to dress really are. This task has been most ably performed by Dr. Forbes Watson in the volume before us. We call attention to the work and to the subject, not as a matter of mere curiosity, but as an inquiry of direct interest to the manufacturing industry of Europe. Dr. Watson has evidently brought his personal Indian experience to bear upon a mass of materials which, in less skilled hands, would most likely have proved wearisome and unintelligible. As he has arranged his details, they are as entertaining to the general reader as they are full of information and instruction to the manufacturer."

THE MORNING POST.—"The conception of this splendid work reflects the highest credit upon the wisdom of the department to which we are indebted for its publication; and the manner in which it has been executed by its author. No one can fully appreciate the value of this work without seeing it, because neither analysis nor extracts can give any idea of the immense mass of minute facts which it contains, and the admirable manner in which they are grouped and made subservient to the practical requirements of the manufacturer and the merchant, and the cravings of the student of ornamental art. The illustrations are as magnificent as they are appropriate. In fact, as mere productions of beauty and taste, they give the work the air of a book of art luxury, and we have no doubt that from this feature it will find many admirers and purchasers beyond the ranks of trade and commerce."

THE ART JOURNAL.—"The work, indeed, is as well fitted, as far as embellishment is concerned, for the drawing-room table as it is for the study; and its contents will be found far more interesting to the general reader than its mere designation would lead to a supposition that it might be. The motive and purpose of its publication is highly creditable to the present Home Government of India."

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.

LOOK TO THE FUTURE.—The first symptoms of departing health should have instant attention and redress, not more for the comfort of the present, but for the happiness of the future. Whatever the irregularity, wherever situated, however masked, Holloway's remedies will reach it and move it. The external employment of the Ointment and the internal use of the Pills will always restore order and ease. Cutaneous complaints, defective nutrition, want of appetite, nausea, and biliousness are immediately cured, and healthy functions permanently restored to each organ. The united action of Holloway's remedies over the human frame is so singularly searching, soothing, and curative, that few diseases can long withstand the thorough purification they constantly bring about.

PAINFUL TEETH, or DISEASED STUMPS EXTRACTED WITHOUT PAIN. No chloroform, and perfectly safe.

"There is no shame to our manhood if we distrust our own ability to endure the anguish of the body. It is no secret that of late local anæsthesia has been produced to such a degree, that the patient, retaining his consciousness, can watch the surgeon's knife as it cuts to cure, and yet be without the slightest sensation of physical suffering."—Daily Telegraph, July 13, 1866.

TEETH PAINLESSLY STOPPED with Permanent Enamel Cement of the exact natural colour. Guaranteed not to turn black, or make the Teeth look unsightly.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER AS A BASIS FOR ARTIFICIAL TEETH.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER.—This material being soft and elastic, no springs or fastenings are required; the acids of the stomach produce no effect on it; it fits to the mouth with an accuracy which renders detection impossible, and it is entirely free from taste or smell. Where the gums are in any way tender, and great absorption has taken place, this system will prove invaluable.

INSPECTION OF MODELS AND SPECIMENS.

Feeling that illustrative specimens of the above improvements would impart a more accurate appreciation of their object, effect, and value, than any written description, a number of models have been executed representing the adaptation of Teeth, and sets to several different shapes, sizes, and defects of the mouth and gums. These models furnish a clear, practical exposition of the principles adopted, and may be seen every day at Mr. WESS's residence, free of charge.

His Treatise, "Dental Mechanics and Surgery," which explains the above painless and inimitable system, free by post, or on application to Mr. WBBB, 27, NEW BOND-STREET (late with Mr. ESKELL, Surgeon-Dentist, 8, Grosvenor-street).

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER

TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, August 4; Agra, August 1; Calcutta, July 30; Madras, July 29.

Three more sittings of the Bombay Bank Commission are reported in the Bombay papers. Two of these were wholly taken up with the examination of the Hon. Alex. Brown, a member of the Legislative Council and sometime director of the late Bank. Mr. Brown's evidence goes to prove the mingled powerlessness and hesitation of the Government directors to make a firm stand against the gathering mischief. They were frightened into making feeble protests against a system which they lacked the courage to insist on overthrowing. They referred to the secretary himself for information as to the extent of his powers, and contented themselves with resolving that no more loans of more than three lakhs should be granted by the secretary without leave of the board. Mr. Brown and some other directors had promised them a willing support; but the influence of Messrs. Tracey and Hannay seems to have neutralised all attempts at real improvement. Behind these of course stood Premchund Roychund, who had reasons of his own for deprecating too much light on the Bank's affairs. Mr. Brown's examination brings out nothing very new or startling after what we have heard before, and he himself comes out of the ordeal as creditably as any one who has yet encountered it. All he said of the Government directors too tends to acquit them of any active share in the general mismanagement.

THE new Bank of Bombay seems to have made a fair beginning. The report for the half-year announces a dividend at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum, leaving a small balance to be carried to the reserve fund. There had been no loss nor bad debt of any kind since the opening of the Bank in January last.

SIR WILLIAM MANSFIELD is always in extremes. The other day we saw him in his milder hour, remitting the very mild sentence passed on a sergeant who had kicked his wife to death under the strong excitement of "previous conviviality." This week he swings back to his sternest mood, rebuking a court-martial for failure of duty in letting off a wrong-headed subaltern with a reprimand. We refer to the case of Lieutenant Macdonnell, who persisted in disobeying his captain's order to see that his men wore their cholera-belts according to rule. It seems that a sergeant may commit murder with impunity; whereas an obstinate officer who declines, however unreasonably, "to make a daily inspection of half-naked soldiers" is thought to be far too lightly punished with a mere scolding. If the Commander-in-Chief were more consistent we might not quarrel with his conduct on this occasion. Lieutenant Macdonnell was certainly guilty of gross indiscipline on insufficient grounds. He persisted in disobeying an order entirely justified by "the custom of the service in well-ordered regiments," on a plea which cannot fairly be admitted; for it seems that the order could have been carried out "without any infraction of decency or even delicacy on the part of the officers concerned." And there was all the more need for upholding discipline in this case, because the officer who issued the order had risen from the ranks—a fact which seems to have enlisted against him the opinion not only of the lieutenant's comrades, but of military critics elsewhere. His conduct indeed has been made the text for many an irrelevant sermon about the impolicy of promotion from the ranks. Lieutenant Macdonnell may therefore deem himself fortunate to have got off with a reprimand. But after his previous fit of undue lenity Sir William Mansfield was hardly the right man to call for a more substantial punishment for so serious an offence.

ANOTHER officer has received a reprimand and something more. Lieutenant C. P. Elderton, of the Royal Artillery, was tried at Meean Meer for dining at home and getting quietly drunk there, instead of obeying his commandant's directions and dining at his mess. In spite of repeated orders he preferred his own company to that of his brother officers, and "when visited officially by two" of the latter, was found drunk. For this he has been severely reprimanded and put down twenty steps. Sir W. Mansfield finds no fault with the sentence, but lectures the court for some errors of procedure which had luckily made no difference in the result. To our thinking the worst error lies in the punishment awarded. By what rule of the service is an officer bound to dine at his mess? You may make him pay for his mess dinner, but if he chooses to eat another at home and take more drink than is good for him there, what has that to do with military discipline? Is an officer more tied in this respect than an undergraduate of Christ Church? Military discipline is a wonderful and fearful thing; but to make absence from mess-dinners as criminal as absence from parade seems to any being outside the realms of pipe-clay a stupid atrocity. May an officer never call his mind his own?

THE Sind frontier offers in some respects a pleasing contrast to the frontier of the Punjab. There are plenty of hills along both, and the numerous tribes who tenant them are alike in their taste for intertribal warfare. But on the Sind marches, according to Sir H. Green's report for the past year, the tribes keep their quarrels and raids to themselves. There are some fine grassy and woody plains beyond the border, which ought to furnish ample food for the neighbouring cattle, but are now abandoned to wild asses and pigs, when they do not happen to form the battle-field for hostile tribes. Thanks however to skilful management on the part of our officers, and perhaps to the friendly influence of the Khan of Khelat, these mountaineer highwaymen let us and our concerns alone. "No attempt at a raid or mention of one by the mountain tribes has taken place, nor has a single head of cattle been carried off; but many that had strayed beyond the border into the haunts of the robbers have been returned by them to the frontier outposts." More than 20,000 camel-loads of precious merchandise had passed along the roads between Sind and Central Asia, with the loss by theft of three camels only, and these were afterwards recovered.

FROM Kohat on the other hand we have the usual story of another raid by Bazoties into British ground. A Khan of Khelat in that direction might help us greatly to keep the peace. Could we not find one in the Akhoond of Swat or some other frontier-chief of yet wider influence? And is it not high time to carry out Sir S. Cotton's idea of placing the whole Punjab Frontier, including Peshawar, under one military command?

MR. RIVETT-CARNAC's last report on the cotton prospects of Central India is on the whole encouraging. In the Berars indeed the escape from something like a famine has been a narrow one. The rain fell "not a day too soon." Owing to the richness of the soil and its power of retaining moisture not much of the cotton will have to be resown. The Nagpoor cultivators talked hopefully of the future. The plants in the Hinghunghat country were all doing well. Much of course everywhere depended on a due continuance of the rains; but so far there was every prospect of an average yield.

A VERY different report comes from the Twenty-four Pergunnahs. There the late heavy floods following on last year's cyclone had already reduced the people to sad straits. Having sold their cattle for want of forage, many of the ryots were eking out their livelihood by fishing. Others still worse off were crowding into Calcutta. Measures of relief were being set on foot, and meetings of influential men had been summoned in various places to consider the best way of administering relief. Bengal zemindars however seem slow as a body to emulate the Rajah of Burdwan. One of the wealthiest of them, according to the last story out, had just ordered his agent to raise money for his mother's funeral from the tenantry on one of the most suffering estates. Hard-hearted landlords however are not peculiar to Bengal. In Tirhoot again, the land of indigo, the crops had suffered not from an excess but a great deficiency of moisture. From other parts of Bengal the reports are much more encouraging. Fresh sowings were being made wherever the crops had received most damage, and fears of general distress were dying away under the influence of more seasonable weather.

THE little war in the Cuttack Mehals still smoulders. We have got the recalcitrant Ranee under safe keeping, and most of the tribes that supported the pretender of her choosing have given in. But the Bhooibas still hold out in hills virtually inaccessible during the rains. Of course in due time the little force of sepoys and police will stamp out the disturbance; but for that present quietude was the safest policy, as many of the troops had been or still were disabled from the effects of a noisome climate.

THERE is no later news from Kabul than the telegram mentioned last week. But we hear from Calcutta that Shere Ali's probable success, coinciding as it would with the Viceroy's own predictions, would determine the Indian Government to adopt some kind of politic precautions against Russian encroachments on Afghanistan. It is very unlikely however that the Viceroy will swerve from his neutral policy of armed watchfulness without some stronger motive than the fear of what might happen fifty years hence. If Shere Ali Khan wins the throne however and keeps it for a certain time, it might be worth our while to enter with him into some kind of defensive alliance as against all assailants from without. Meanwhile no more time should be lost in completing the great iron road from Kurrachee to Peshawar, part of which has been already begun. It is a pity that reasons of false economy prevent the carrying on of this good work at many different points simultaneously. There is no good excuse for leaving a long gap between Mooltan and Kotree at a time when England is full of unemployed money and engineers idle against their will.

It is time too to hasten on the works needed for the lasting improvement of Kurrachee Harbour. Large sums have been spent on improving the navigation of the Indus, while the great port of Sind has been put off with some cheap makeshifts for the breakwater which alone will serve the purpose of making it large enough for ships of the heaviest tonnage. We are glad to see however that "the experimental concrete blocks for the Munora breakwater were, during last monsoon, exposed to the full force of the sea, at the shore end of the proposed line of breakwater, and stood well," especially those made of Portland cement.

CAPTAIN LANCE's report on the Dumsong district reveals a promising state of things in that part of the Western Doocars. The land revenue is steadily increasing; a great spurt has been given to the trade with Thibet; some of the neighbouring Bhootea chiefs have begun to send into Dumsong mules, brocade, and silk, in exchange for cloth and cotton. The roads in Dumsong are good enough for present needs, but bridges and ferry-boats or rafts are greatly wanted for the passage of heavy goods and cattle across the rivers. Owing to the hilly nature of the ground and its great fertility crops of the most different kinds from rice to barley can be raised with ease. Indian-rubber, lac, madder, huldee, tobacco, several kinds of fibrous plants, and plenty of useful timber-trees, such as sál, toon, oak, walnut, bamboo, are among the chief commercial products of this district. Most kinds of fruits and vegetables grow freely there, including English pease, beans, brocoli, &c., and potatoes from Nepal. Copper has been found in two or three places, and there is plenty of good lime. Its many and rapid streams suggest any amount of power running to waste. In an hour or two you can change your climate from one of great heat to the bracing air of hills 12,000 feet high. The town of Dumsong itself lying out on a northern spur, with hills sheltering it on the other sides, is remarkable for its pure cool air. The soil here is chiefly red clay resting on gneiss. The temperature at eleven A.M. only once rose to eighty degrees in the whole year. Cattle of all kinds thrive in the surrounding pastures. The people themselves, if untaught and not very rich, are happy, healthy, and fully alive to the benefits of British rule. Their neighbours from Sikkim and Bhotan are already flocking thither as emigrants from their own country.

COLONEL PELLY reports from the Persian Gulf that a civil war is raging between Abdallah, the new Ameer of Nejed, and his brother Saood. The Ameer's increasing tyranny had brought about this state of things. He was by last accounts besieged in his capital, Riyad, while the whole country round was in his brother's hands.

THE only news from Madras beyond the unusual wetness of the weather is the death of Mrs. McCleverty, wife of the Commander-in-Chief of the Madras Presidency. She died at Ootacamund after a few days' illness, much regretted by all who knew her. Ootacamund is losing its character for healthiness.

THE Lieutenant-governor of Bengal has pressed on the Supreme Government the need of at once continuing the Eastern Bengal Railway to Darjeeling. We hope his efforts will be fruitful of early results.

LORD MAYO has just told the electors of Cockermouth that before November he "will have accepted" the post of Governor-general. We thought he had accepted it already.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

WEDNESDAY, September 2, 1868.

A CHEAP WAY TO PAY OLD DEBTS.

If the Secretary of State could see some of the answers sent by the Indian Committees to the claimants of bonus compensation, we think his eyes would open to their widest with amazement at the cool evasions of so many just claims. One of these letters now lies before us, and from this one we may easily guess in what sort of spirit Lord Cranborne's well-meant instructions for the redress of an acknowledged grievance have generally been carried out.

The officer in question entered the service in 1843, became a lieutenant in 1848, and a captain in 1857. During that time he paid certain sums for the purchase of several steps; how much exactly he cannot always tell, having few memoranda to guide him. That, poor man, was hardly his fault, for who before the mutinies could have foreseen the difficulties which dogged the subsequent dealings of Government with its Indian armies? But a committee of officers empowered to consider the claims of their own comrades in a spirit of fairness and due regard for likelihoods treats the want of full documentary evidence as a bar to just redress. Because the officer in question "produces parts of old letters written to his father," showing what he was about to borrow for one step and another, they point out "the very indefinite nature of the claim" as one of their two reasons for its rejection. An excellent reason indeed, if the committee had been specially instructed to admit no claims that could with the least show of decency be thrown out, or if the claimants themselves were generally open to the suspicion of asking for repayment of a fictitious outlay. But in dealing with gentlemen, few of whom can possibly give legal proof of their claims, a committee of officers and gentlemen are not expected to stand upon reasons best suited to the taste of sharp attorneys and Old Bailey barristers.

And now let us look at the other reason for setting aside a reasonable demand. "The pecuniary advantages gained by accelerated promotion more than double the total amount which the applicant believes he paid." How is this made out? Because the officer who stood third below him gained his lieutenantcy in 1851, therefore the applicant "gained three years and fifteen days' promotion" and a difference of nearly 2,000 rupees. Again, the officer who stood second below him got his company in 1861, or "four years, five months, and three days"—to say nothing of hours—after the applicant himself was made captain. Therefore the latter gained a start in promotion equivalent to nearly 8,500 rupees. Add the two sums together, and the case against the claimant is unanswerably clear. What more can he desire? You cannot eat your cake and have it too. Is it not evident that those six years and a-half were so much clear gain of rank and pay, which required the officer more than a hundredfold for his previous outlay?

A plain-minded person indeed might fail to discover the exquisite justice of a reckoning which assumes that a captain of 1857 would have remained a lieutenant until 1861, the date of the promotion of the officer who had stood second below him on the list of lieutenants, if he had not paid a penny towards the buying out of his seniors. Such a one might argue that the consequences of the mutiny, especially the long delay in reconstructing the Indian army, had almost stopped promotion during those three years. He might urge the gross unfairness of a rule which makes no allowance for exceptional ill-luck in the past or for disturbing causes at any time; a rule which must often fall with special cruelty on those who have really gained the least by the money laid out in quickening their promotion? With what show of justice, he will ask, can the gain of quickened promotion to a lieutenant of fifteen years' standing in the army be reckoned by a reference to the date at which his second junior, not his next junior even, gained his promotion? How many of the steps he purchased to find himself a captain only after fifteen years might not have fallen to him in due course a few months or weeks later than they really did? And why should the State which has steadily ignored his grievance for so many years refuse to take that fact also into the general reckoning? And the interest of the money borrowed for the buying of steps, is that also to count for nothing against the supposed advantages of quickened promotion?

The truth is that all attempts to calculate those advantages by any fixed procrustean process of hard figures must inevitably miss their apparent mark. They can only, as a general rule, aggravate the injustice they profess to remedy. It is simply impossible to tell how much an officer has really gained in return for his actual outlay. So many points would have to be considered, which no committee, if it sat for years, would succeed in balancing to the satisfaction of nine impartial thinkers out of ten. Of the rule adopted by the Bengal Committee we can only say that no shrewder scheme for shirking the fair adjustment of reasonable claims has ever been put in practice. It is impossible to believe that it could ever have received the sanction of the India Council or the deliberate approval of Sir Stafford Northcote. The simplest process would have been the fairest, even if it cost a few thousand pounds more. Let every claimant receive back the full sum which he can honestly swear before a magistrate that he believes himself to have paid; or, better still, let him have fair value according to a fixed scale, however moderate, for his actual standing in the army, and then indeed we shall hear no more of this long-festering grievance.

INDIA IN 1866-67.—II.

THE report on India's Moral and Material Progress goes on to deal with the subject of Education. The Trustees of the Gilchrist Educational Trust having proposed to found two scholarships of £100 a-year each, to be held for five years by natives of India at the London and Edinburgh Universities, the Government of India suggested the founding of one scholarship at £200 a-year instead of the two at £100; that Eurasian as well as native youths should be allowed to compete for it; that the list of subjects for examination should not include Latin; and that the examiners should be appointed not through the Trustees, but by the Universities in the three Presidencies. Of these suggestions the Trustees have adopted only the one for extending the competition to all youths of Indian breed; but they have agreed to let native candidates for the Civil Service compete for these prizes without having taken a degree at either of the aforesaid Universities. The Secretary for India has shown his goodwill towards the scheme by promising £100 passage money to each competitor from India. What will come of it remains to be seen. The first examination will take place in January next.

In Bengal 574 new schools and colleges connected with the Government were opened in the year under review, with a gain of 13,359 pupils on the numbers of the previous year. Six thousand of these go to the credit of the unaided private schools, which have increased in one year from 197 to 425. This seems to speak well for the growth of popular intelligence. Sixty-four new female schools were opened during the same time, in which nearly a thousand more pupils were learning their lessons, than the 5,569 of the year before. The receipts from school fees in this year were nearly double those of 1862-63. In the Government and the aided schools the cost of education, so far as it was defrayed from the Imperial Treasury, was about £1. 2s. 10d. a head, or seventeen pence less than in the previous year. The successful candidates for admission into the University came mainly from the Government schools and colleges. The idea of a compulsory school-rate for Bengal, to be raised from the zemindars, was viewed with some favour by the Government, but the right way of applying it remains a moot question even now.

The North-West Provinces can boast nearly three times as many schools and colleges as Bengal, containing 210,702 scholars, against 134,640 in the older province. As compared with the year before however they show an increase of only eighty schools and 12,054 scholars. In some districts female education had fallen off; but a class of widows were being trained in Ajmere and Kemaon to serve as schoolmistresses in those backward districts. The Female Normal Schools were working well; but the schoolmasters in the other normal schools seem to have thought that duty began at home, in the bosoms of their several families, and there ended, for there was a "difficulty" in getting them to mind their schools. Of pupils studying English the number rose in one year from 9,757 to 13,355, an increase traceable to the new careers opened out to natives in the army, the railways, and at the bar. Local Committees of gentlemen of position were also formed this year with a view to quicken the popular demand for education. The schools in the North-West cost the Government about one-half the relative cost of those in Bengal, Bombay, and Madras, and a little less than the cost of those in the Central Provinces and British Burmah. In all these provinces the number of pupils shows a decided increase on former years. In Central India the growing demand for an English education has raised the total of those learning English from 1,526 to 1,970. There also the female schools, often supervised by native gentlemen, were steadily increasing in number and general excellence, the pupils learning to knit and sew as well as to read, write, and cipher. Scholarships tenable for two years by the winners in open competition have also been founded in these provinces.

Madras shows a large increase in the number of candidates for matriculation and of successful candidates for the same. But the plucked still keep the old proportion of about three to one of the successful. Of the 306 winners, 142 came from Government institutions. In Bombay the attendance of pupils is relatively larger than anywhere else, larger even than in the North-west, and very much larger than in Bengal or Madras. It is worth noting however that the proportion of crimes reported in Bombay exceeds that of the crimes reported in Bengal. On the other hand, we saw that fewer criminals could read in Bombay than in any other province; so the friends of education may keep up a good heart.

The local educational cess had so won on the popular favour that petitions kept pouring in for schools and school-houses, while the attendance of children of the agricultural classes "showed a corresponding increase." In Bombay also the grant-in-aid system has been worked with great success, no grant being made except for actual progress. The Female Schools of this Presidency are numerous and thriving; those in the Northern Division being almost wholly supported out of private funds. Sind, on the other hand, had made no movement towards educating its girls. The Punjab returns show a slight decrease in the number of pupils enrolled, while the average daily attendance was larger than the year before. Its village and female schools were fewer, but the number of high-class schools had increased. Out of eighty-one candidates for matriculation only twenty-two passed, and of seventeen who went in for the first arts examination all but four were plucked. A good many of the students in the Lahore and Delhi Colleges are drawn away from their studies by the comparatively high pay offered to a copyist or underclerk in a public or mercantile office. The only way of meeting this attraction would be to raise the value of university prizes.

In the Hyderabad Assigned Districts the appointment of a director of Public Instruction gave "an extraordinary spurt" to educational progress. The number of pupils rose from 1,881 to 6,644, or 253·20 per cent. Two high schools have been founded there, at which youths may qualify themselves for the Bombay universities.

Under the head of "Sanitary" we start with a notice of the success obtained by applying Mr. Moule's system of dry-earth sewage to the "hospitals, jails, and other public buildings" of British India. That system is described as "the greatest public benefit conferred by a private individual in a matter so essential to public health." New though it be, it "has already worked wonders" towards improving the conservancy arrangements. It has been tried successfully in some of the latrines of European regiments, and so wide is the agreement of public opinion in its favour, that its use is certain to become yet more general. The reverend inventor has received a reward of £500 from the Indian Government for his development of a process at least as old as the Pentateuch.

Nearly 305,000 patients were treated during the year in the hospitals and dispensaries of Bengal. In the North-West the number was nearly 535,000; in Bombay over 305,000; in the Punjab nearly 378,000; and 240,314 in Madras. The death-rate in the Punjab was about 12·50 per thousand, low enough compared with the death-rate for the healthiest of English counties. In the North-West Provinces it was even lower, being only eleven per thousand. In Bengal and Madras the percentage probably ruled higher; but how much higher we are left to guess. The deaths in the Central Provinces were only 12·76 per 1,000 of the rural population; but in the towns, where small-pox prevailed, they rose to 25·09 per 1,000. The death-rate in Bombay, always high, fell this year to 20·50 per 1,000.

Vaccination is gradually making its way among the people of India. It has been a hard struggle to wean them from their deep-rooted preference for inoculation; and the struggle is not yet over, for native hakims are even slower than English doctors to take up new ideas. But on the whole great progress has been made. In Bengal there were 42,654 more vaccinations than in the previous year. The successful cases were 164,529 out of 194,753. Nearly as large an increase and all but the same percentage of successful cases mark the year in the North-west, whose people "generally appear to appreciate" the benefits of an improved hygiene. Attempts are being made, both there and in other provinces, to enlist the services of native practitioners in the cause of vaccination. In the Central Provinces the fright about small pox so encouraged official efforts to disseminate the antidote that the number of vaccinations was five times greater than the year before. Of all the unprotected children vaccinated by order of the superintendent, not one took the disease; a result which did much to allay the popular prejudice against the unfamiliar remedy. The number of successful cases rose from 55½ to 87½ per cent. Almost the same average is reported from Madras, where the deaths from cholera, small pox, and fever were unusually frequent. Sandoway and Bassein were the chief exceptions to the general healthiness of British Burmah. Cholera ravaged the former place, and bad sanitary methods caused a death rate of 55 per 1,000 in the latter.

With regard to postal matters, a brief statement of the new contract with the P. and O. Company ends with the announcement of a scheme laid before the Indian Government, for carrying mails from India and China to the United States by means "of a line of packets recently established between San Francisco, Yokohama, and Hong Kong."

In the year 1866-67 the emigration of coolies from Bengal to the Mauritius came to a standstill, few except old emigrants having ventured to an island where the price of grain was then unusually high, and agricultural prospects very gloomy. New rules were made for securing the emigrants to British Guiana against the perils of close confinement between decks in the passage out. The emigrants from Madras to the Mauritius were less than half as many as in former years. From the French ports in India however a large emigration was carried out to Réunion, Guadeloupe, Martinique, and Cayenne.

The Geological Survey has not been idle. Further examinations during the year were made into the coal-fields of Bengal and Behar. The Bokaroh coal-field to the south of Hazareebagh covers a large area with pretty thick beds of middling coal. There is a smaller coal-field of average quality near Ramghur. A large coal-bed not worth the working for coal, but pretty rich in iron, extends along the Damudah. Near it lie the South Karunpoora and Jherria fields, the latter of which might yield about 465,000,000 tons of coal. Examinations were also pursued at Palamow and Manbhoom; and a large area of Dumoh and Saugor was mapped out. Researches made in Bundelkund "tend to show the existence of two distinct series of strata of a general gneissoid character." To the younger of these belong the crystalline rocks west of the Desaun River. The limestone of Heerapoor and Sorai, belonging to the same series, was found to resemble the brecciated limestones to the south and west of the great Vindhyan country in the Nerbuddah valley.

The neighbourhood of Gwalior was mapped anew on the scale of a mile to an inch. Researches in Rajpootana gained a clearer knowledge of the western limits assignable to the trap of Malwa and the great Vindhyan group. In British Burmah the year's survey was confined to the region east of the Irrawaddy, and north of Prome. Gravels containing fossil-wood of large size abound in the Prome district. The same kind of gravel occurs in the Tounghoo side of the Eastern Yema range. The rocks in this range are quite distinct from those of the Prome group. Tin in large crystals was reported on the frontier north of Tounghoo, but the neighbourhood of the Karen tribes might cause a difficulty in working it.

The question of revising Indian weights and measures, first started in 1837, was once more mooted by the Madras Government in 1863. Committees sat upon the question, and Sir C. Wood in 1865 pointed out the need of handling it with proper care and tenderness for popular usages. A central committee in 1867 had to consider the diverse views of the local committees. Meanwhile, inspired by the metrical proclivities of the British Association, Sir S. Northcote wrote out to recommend a system founded on the metrical rather than the English type. And there for the present the matter stands.

We need not tell again the story of last year's cyclone, or of the famine that desolated Orissa the year before. It would be hardly possible to condense the excellent summary of former reports on the latter subject, which fitly closes the statement under review. We may note however the sad variety of coincidences which heightened the distress resulting from an extraordinary drought. A high rate of assessment had left the land-owners too small a margin of profit to allow of a rise in wages or of any addition to the wealth of the country. Then the stoppage of the salt manufacture in 1863 tended yet more to cheapen the supply of labour, while the dying out of the thirty years' settlement was pretty sure to contract the area of cultivation, pending the completion of a new assessment. On the top of all this came the drought, and many of those who survived the worst of the famine fell an easy prey to the heavy floods and storms of the following year. Let us hope that the lessons of the famine have sunk deep enough into the official mind to ensure the taking of all possible precautions against a like disaster in the future.

Spirit of the Indian Press.

THE BANK OF BOMBAY COMMISSION.

The Englishman observes that the evidence of Mr. C. E. Chapman, before the Bank of Bombay Commission, brings the matter of the advance of £250,000 to Premchund Roychund before the public in a new and startling light. Recognising Premchund as the cornerstone of the Bombay commercial system, the directors seem to have thought only of preventing his stopping payment. They failed to scrutinise his affairs, just as they failed to scrutinise the security he was willing to lodge with them. The whole transaction is rendered ridiculous by the abject fear they showed of the man they were about to accommodate so largely. Premchund would stop; Premchund resented inquiries; Premchund would abandon the whole affair. The directors of the Bank of Bombay were merely his good friends and servants. Master of the position, Premchund used his prerogative with decision and skill, and instead of being compelled to divulge the exact state of his affairs, and how far the loan of a quarter of a million would operate to save him, he forced the directors to be satisfied with some unintelligible statement of his pressing liabilities. Such a picture is unique, and is of itself sufficient to condemn the Government, which, with two of its officials on the bank's direction, refrained from interfering, or from seeking power to interfere; nay, more, which systematically resented, with a blind intolerance, the proposal to interfere on the part of the Supreme Government. Colonel Mariott, in his report on the bank, speaks of a loan of fifteen lakhs to one individual, or firm. We cannot quite gather whether this was a loan of £150,000 in one sum, or an aggregate of the loans made to a particular customer of the bank. This matter has not yet come before the commissioners that we can remember. We feel quite sure, however, it will not be overlooked by Sir Charles Jackson.

THE EDUCATIONAL DEPARTMENT.

The Englishman thinks that "once a missionary always a missionary" would appear to be the view of the Government of India. Much as we deprecate any arrangement which would tend to lead the natives of this country to suppose that our educational system involved anything of the propagandist principle, we cannot help thinking that in ruling that no clergyman who has ever been engaged in missionary duties should be admitted into the department, the Government have overshot the mark. In the first place we think there is palpable injustice in attaching to the professions a man may make at any particular period of his life consequences which tend to render them final. A missionary may see the error or the folly of his ways, and sincerely repent, as well as any one else; and in that case we see no reason why he should remain under the ban even of an institution whose principle is non-interference in matters of religion. Had the Government of India ruled that no clergyman should be employed in the Educational department, the prohibition would have been at least intelligible and consistent. As we read the order referred to by us previously, it appears that a clergyman who has never been a missionary may be employed, and also a man who, though he has been a missionary is not a clergyman; so that while in the one case the disability would appear to depend on his having entered holy orders, and not on his having been a missionary, in the other case it would appear to arise from the latter circumstance, and not from the former. Then, again, we think that in many cases the knowledge a missionary acquires of the language and habits of the country might be of especial use in the Educational department; and we see other reasons for holding out the opportunity of doing real and tangible good to a body of earnest and qualified men whose energies are very generally, we fear, being misdirected. The order we refer to comes moreover with strange inconsistency from a Government that subsidises missionary schools—schools that are conducted by actual working missionaries, with grants in aid from the public funds. Surely the granting of such subsidies is much more open to misconception than would be the employment of men who have once been missionaries, but are so no longer, in a department where religious instruction is rigidly excluded. While, if mischief, and not misconception is what the Government fear, surely there is much more probability of its occurring in missionary schools where there is practically no control, than in a department where everything comes under the eye of the authorities.

MILITARY FURLOUGH RULES.

The Madras Times feels certain that the Home Government, in framing these rules, intended to act liberally towards the officers, in order to induce as many as possible to go home and thus relieve the pressure on the Indian treasury. The officers of the Indian Government, however, who are entrusted with the carrying out of this scheme, seem to us not to be able to appreciate the intentions of the Home Government, and, as is the custom with some of them, are by their restrictive policy throwing all sorts of obstructions in the way which was designed to be wide-open and clear. We have heard that the military authorities in this Presidency, at all events, were almost paralysed with alarm at the mere prospect of the exodus which they anticipated would result on the publication of these rules, and exerted themselves strenuously to make them as nearly as possible a "dead letter" by restricting the number of absentees to 20 per cent. of the entire army of officers; that is to say, as there were about 18 per cent. already absent when the new rules were published, only about 2 per cent. more were permitted to go, and all further furlough to England has been stopped for the present. Everybody knows that at every large station there are scores of officers doing "general duty," who are no more wanted there for military duty than civilians would be. Why should not all these men be allowed to go home if they wish to do so on these new rules? Even supposing it would suit all these men to go, which we are quite sure it would not, there would still be a superabundance of officers for all acting appointments that might become available by staff officers going home; for, are there not scores of "attached" officers "hungering and thirsting" for any small mercies that might fall in their way in these days of free-trade and high prices? And we maintain that these officers wanting places are quite as good as those in place—not better, perhaps, but not worse either, and equally capable of performing the duties required of them. Instead of discouraging officers from going home, every possible method should be adopted to induce them to go, for we have more of them than we want in India at present; and in furtherance of this scheme we would suggest that all appointments to which staff salaries are attached, whether regimental, civil, divisional, or general staff, be vacated at the end of five years' tenure. By this means all will have a fair chance of suitable employment; young men will have the opportunity of distinguishing themselves, if they are made of the proper material; and the old and incapable can be gracefully shelved. It is notorious that "incapables" abound in many appointments; more especially do we allude to those posts which are held, as it were, "for ever and a day." Men retain their commands, and their snug berths, for perhaps a dozen or a score of years, and even for longer periods, merely because they have had the good fortune at one time to have fallen into them; and, irrespective of their fitness for their duties, they are allowed to retain their berths because their incapacity is known only to the subordinates with whom they come more intimately into contact, and is not suspected by their superiors, who of course know nothing of what goes on within the sacred confines of daily routine! Many such men would be all the better for the five years' tenure rule, and many pleasant trips on the New Furlough Regulations.

THE FALLACY OF THE PERMANENT SETTLEMENT.

The Bombay Gazette holds that the question raised by the Permanent Settlement in Bengal will not be laid by any amount of sophistry. Just as every year in Europe is bringing up new revolutionary fervour, so every school that is opened in Bengal is hastening the time when that question will be asked. You cannot avoid it save by laying the axe to the root of the settlement. Will the millions who till the soil in Bengal, when they come to read native papers and prate about their rights, acquiesce in an arrangement which sends the mass of their earnings into the pockets of luxurious zemindars, while the merest crumbs of existence are contemptuously thrown to them? The distance of time is not the question here; the question is the fact that the course we are now travelling actually leads to dire catastrophes. All the literary pyrotechny and flash-in-the-pan writing of the Friend of India in favour of the Permanent Settlement will not gainsay the one fact we here put. It is sheer nonsense for Anglo-Gothic politicians to talk about the "dead level" of the Bombay system, the necessity for a class of opulent landholders, stimulus to cultivation, and the augmentation of the general wealth of the community. Opulent landholders are purchased at the price of the happiness of millions of human beings. Look at Britain with its Dorsetshire labourers, its gang system, its bothie system and its hinds. Even the murmur of revolution is already heard among them, and in a few years they will have learned the art of striking work. And compare their feeble powers of combination with the vast powers with which the existence of caste invests the ryots of Bengal. So, in like manner, the augmentation of the general wealth of the community, in the present connection, means its accumulation in the hands of a few conspicuous men, and the abstraction of it from the mass of the nation—the legislative creation of a wealthy and a pauper class with an impassable gulf between them. As for the stimulus to agriculture, experience shows that is an idle dream. It is possible to stimulate agriculture by other and legitimate means that will leave no evils ineradicable, save by revolution, behind them. Why, none of these imaginary blessings, nor all of them combined, are sufficient to overturn the mere fiscal branch of the argument. They can all be gained without injustice to unnumbered generations of men, and made to contribute not to the growth of discontent and revolution, but of a strong and contented people. But taking for granted that all these means and results are wise and sure, the political consideration overrides every other. Great and urgent as fiscal reasons for the abolition of the Settlement are, we believe that the spread of intelligence in this country will demonstrate, beyond doubt, that its abolition is an overwhelming political necessity.

OUR LAST LITTLE WAR.

The Friend of India admits that the Keonjhar affair is child's play and the irritation at such a contemptible war is the greater. The police, sepoys, and officials alike have shown much zeal and pluck; but there is neither glory to be gained nor good to be done. Two policies were before Government—to take the management of a country into its own hands, as proposed by Dr. Hayes, until the suppression of the rebellion, or to support Dhununjoi. After the decision of the High Court and his installation by the Bhooihas, the latter was inevitable. The truth seems to be that the Bhooihas agreed to the installation as a compromise, that Dhununjoi's Minister, so far from performing his part of the bargain, proceeded to extremities against their nominee, and that the Ranees was disgusted to find she got a smaller allowance than she would have seized if she had been virtual ruler. The dispute must, we fear, be fought out, and the people of Keonjhar have been assured, by orders of the Government of India, which has throughout supported the Bengal authorities, that Dhununjoi will be assisted, and all who resist him will be punished. The war is due solely to the premature application of law to a savage people. But for Regulation XI. of 1816 both parties would have settled their own quarrel probably without our being aware of the fact. All such cases, at least, should be dealt with by the Executive. Imagine the application of Regulation XI. to our subjects on the Punjab frontier. The Regulation must be repealed and the direct power of the Government of India over barbarous districts be restored, as Mr. Maine has urged in the case of the old non-regulation provinces. The solitary crumb of comfort which we extract from this annoying business is that we shall learn something about the simple savages of the Cuttack hills. The survey officials and famine commissioners alike have confessed their total ignorance of a country which lies in the direct line of the proposed railway from Calcutta to Nagpore and Bombay. That custom of the Bhooihas, which we have described, makes us anxious to be better acquainted with them.

STATION TALK.

ALLAHABAD, July 28.—It is with deep and heart-felt sorrow that I report the death of Mr. C. B. Thornhill, which occurred at sea on the 11th instant. Some abler pen than mine will no doubt record the virtues of the deceased; but poor as the effort will prove, compared with the task I undertake, I shall nevertheless endeavour to give you an idea of the loss we have suffered in the death of this good and upright man, whom to know was to love and respect. Of an humble, obliging and forgiving disposition, the late Mr. Thornhill had made himself very popular. He was prompt and sincere in sympathising with any one who was in distress and needed support—with him there was no class distinction—and his sympathy was but seldom confined to expressions only, but what he did was done in a quiet, unassuming manner. He had a fellow feeling with the natives and Eurasians as well as with the Europeans, and he entered, as it were, into the feelings of all who sought his advice or his assistance. With the above virtues he combined a cheerful disposition and ready wit, and the company where he was present could never get a chance of becoming dull or unentertaining. His philanthropy and public spirit were well known; he was ever ready to assist in any public scheme which required for its accomplishment a clear head and a willing mind. As the president of the Municipal Commissioners of Allahabad he made himself very useful, and you can judge of the amount of public confidence he enjoyed when I say that the Commissioners had unanimously elected him as their permanent president. He took great interest in the welfare of the inhabitants of the new civil station, which I may mention was designed and laid out by him before the public offices moved down from Agra, and is now the healthy and pretty place it is only through his exertions. As a public servant he devoted his whole energy to his work. He seldom found fault, and when he did his award was always tempered with mercy. In him the Revenue department of the North-Western Provinces has lost a good and able administrator; the community of Allahabad have lost a sincere well-wisher; the poor and helpless a benefactor; the Church Missionary Society a strong supporter; the native Christians a patron; and his friends have lost a friend whose place it will be difficult to fill. Our present Lieutenant-Governor and Mr. Thornhill were school-fellows; and Sir William Muir will now miss the genial smile of an affectionate friend, and the advice of an experienced and wise counsellor. It only remains for me to say that the subject of my remarks was a true and sincere Christian. The Municipal Commissioners of Allahabad appear to be at issue with the Cantonment Magistrate regarding the expenses of lock-hospitals being defrayed from municipal funds. The Commissioners say, whilst silent as to the utility or otherwise of these hospitals, that as they are intended exclusively for the benefit of the European troops the expenses on their account should be defrayed from Imperial funds. What is your opinion?

LUCKNOW, July 29.—We have had a good deal of rain during the week, and several soaking showers, which have sent the farmer to his fields and removed all fear of a famine. As generally happens after much rain, numerous native houses in the city have come down, but at the present time many householders of our native community are more apprehensive of the supposed intentions of the municipal authorities than of the action of the elements. A few surveyors having been seen taking measurements, rumours began to fly about and fears to be excited. All unenclosed ground was to be taken up by Government, so walls were run up in all directions. Rights to houses and enclosures were to be inquired into, and papers, documents, and title deeds, existing or non-existing, were eagerly sought for. Groups of suspicious inquirers might be seen watching the surveyors, and the propriety of addressing the local government upon the subject was eagerly discussed by the members of the recently projected "Reform Club" in conclave assembled. It is possible that some have just come to fear an investigation, for, though no ground for alarm exists, as much anxiety has been shown as if a general confiscation of property had been declared. This however only shows how ready the native mind is to take alarm, seeing that the only object of the authorities is to take up the nooks and corners which hitherto have been supposed to belong to nobody, with a view of improving the sanitation of the place. One of our lions, the Martinere, had a narrow escape from mutilation or destruction on Thursday night, during a heavy thunder storm we had. The flag-staff on the top of the building is supported by four chains, one of which acted as a conductor, and introduced the lightning into the apartments occupied by the boys. Its course can be traced very plainly from the chain to the ground, and it is surprising that so very little damage was done. None of the boys were injured, although quite a hundred and fifty of them were sleeping in the building. It has hitherto not been considered necessary in this station to furnish buildings with lightning conductors, for the church alone possesses one. Probably the chains on this occasion attracted the lightning, but it is very strange, seeing they have been there many years, and nothing of the kind is known to have happened before. The Byram ghaut branch of the Oude and Rohilkund Railway is getting on famously from here to Chinhut. It crosses the Goomtee between the Martinere and Belatee Bagh, and a great number of coolies are employed thereabout. I regret to say that cholera has broken out amongst them, six dying the first day. We possess a health officer for Lucknow and a sanitary officer for Oude, and it would be as well if one of those gentlemen paid some attention to this coolie camp, as long as cholera is in it, seeing how unpleasantly near it is both to our cantonments and the Martinere. The great Brahmo teacher, Baboo Keshub Chunder Sen, is to pay this station a visit on his return from Simla, where he has gone, it is said, at the special invitation of the Viceroy. He preached at Cawnpore on Saturday last, and a good many baboos went from Lucknow to hear him. There appears to be a goodly number of Brahmos here, chiefly men from Benares and Bengal.

BENARES, July 28.—Last evening there was a meeting of the Benares Association, on which occasion a lecture was delivered by a teacher of Queen's College, on "The Best Means of Improving the Vernacular Language of Upper India," which is one of the most popular and interesting subjects. The essay began by giving an account of the origin of Urdu and Hindee, the common dialects of these provinces. The essayist closely examined the two dialects and deduced the conclusion that there are no beauties in Urdu poems and novels, but the best works are full of obscene passages that corrupt the imagination and contain similes and figures that are quite unnatural. He had somewhat a high opinion of Hindi. After expressing his disgust towards Urdu, he said that the best means of improving the dialect was to translate English works, to borrow European sentiments and express them in idiomatic Urdu. The essayist also said that the premature attempt of establishing an oriental university at present is not practicable. The first speaker, after approving of the plan of translation, expressed his opinion as to the words to be used in such translations. He said that the most practicable means of translating scientific works is to translate them by retaining the English technical terms. He was opposed by some of the members, but as very few were present, on account of the rains, no warm discussion took place.

CHUNAR, July 27.—We have had nothing but rain (which was invariably accompanied by terrific thunder claps, enough to frighten us out of our equanimity, and the lightning so inseparable from this phenomenon was of such a nature as to make the visual organs of those looking upwards at the time defective for a moment), with slight intermission, all last week, and the agriculturists are equally as vociferous against these continued downpours as they were before in consequence of the prolonged drought, neither of which extreme, it would appear, is favourable to the young crops. The indigo planters (some of whom are located only a few miles beyond the vicinity of the station) are also averse to the pelting rain we have lately had, and would like gentle showers, as being conducive to a good yield, which they are all vigorously striving for. I believe the anil plant suffers more than aught else from a redundancy of water, which, being absorbed by the roots, quickly enters the stalks, and in this manner permeates the entire plant; the existing stamina is consequently diminished to such a degree as to produce a marked deterioration in the quality at the yearly outturn. A very perceptible rise in the river has taken place, and the Jergo, its tributary, owing to the narrowness of its bed, is fast becoming a rapid stream.

RAWUL PINDEE, July 25.—A tremendous storm here last night, skirting the whole of the lower ranges in this district, and extending how much further it is impossible for me to say. The lightning towards day-break was one continuous tremour of light discharged from cloud to cloud, and shooting up from below the horizon all round and in every direction. Viewed from here the storm appeared universal, and the fireworks of the sky most magnificent. To count the flashes was as impossible as for a listener to count the notes of a brilliantly executed piece of music. To-day it is delightfully cool, a refreshing breeze, and we all feel very much like Satan must have felt when he leaped the walls and found himself inside paradise.—Delhi Gazette Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

A DURBAR AT MOORSHEDABAD.—The Lieutenant Governor of Bengal was to hold a Durbar at Moorshedabad, on Wednesday, July 29, to receive the homage of the Nawab.

SIAM.—The Siamese Government has asked the Government of India for some guns. The request has been referred for decision to the Secretary of State.

PROPOSED TELEGRAPH TO PORT BLAIR.—The Government have negatived a proposal to establish telegraphic communication with Port Blair, on account of the expense of the undertaking.

THE ROAD BETWEEN SIKKIM AND THIBET.—Orders have been issued to survey the projected road to connect Sikkim with Thibet. This survey was stopped, it will be remembered, on account of the unsettled state of the districts bordering on Sikkim.—Englishman.

REWARD FOR PROFICIENCY.—Mr. W. E. Ward, of the Bengal Civil Service, officiating magistrate of Beerbhoom, having obtained a certificate of high proficiency in Bengali, has been presented with the authorised donation of Rs. 1,000.

APPOINTMENT.—Colonel J. C. Brooke, Officiating Agent to the Governor General with the King of Oudh, has been appointed Political Agent of Marwar in room of Captain Impey, who has proceeded on leave.

CASH BALANCES IN THE INDIAN TREASURIES.—The cash balances in the Government Treasuries in India at the close of May last amounted to Rs. 11,49,73,104, against Rs. 11,59,99,399 in May, 1867, and Rs. 13,39,79,433 in May, 1868.

JUDICIAL.—NORTH-WESTERN PROVINCES.—It is notified that the administration of Civil Justice in the Humeerpore district is placed under the control of the Judge of Cawnpore, with effect from the 1st August, 1868.

DISTRESS IN EAST BERAR.—We are sorry to hear that much distress is felt amongst the people of the Woon district, East Berar, owing to the great scarcity and high price of grain. Capt. Bushby, the Deputy Commissioner, has proceeded personally into the district to try and alleviate the distress.—Central India Times.

THE RAINS IN THE PUNJAB.—The rainy season has at last arrived, such rainy season as the Punjab can boast of. Lahore, on the 28th of July, was deluged with rain, and the heavy banks of black clouds sailing up from the south, reminding every Sanskrit scholar of the Meghaduta, showed that more was to come. This rain had been anxiously looked for by the cultivators, and its value is incalculable.

THE OPIUM DEPARTMENT OF GOVERNMENT.—The following officers of the Benares agency are declared to have passed the examination prescribed for the assistants in the opium department, viz.:—In April, 1868: Messrs. W. Blundell, J. F. Clinton, and J. W. S. McArthur. In July, 1868: Messrs. R. Nicholson and W. D. Riddale, still liable to pass in Urdu.

NEWS FROM YARKUND.—We hear from Cashmere that considerable agitation has been caused amongst the Yarkund merchants by a report that Chodyar Khan, the Ameer of Khokand, had organised an expedition for the conquest of Kashgar, Kutcha, and Yarkund. Yakooob Khoosh Begi was said to be making preparations to meet the coming storm.—Englishman.

A WISE ARRANGEMENT.—Consequent, we suppose, upon the remarks made on the employment of the Rev. Lal Behari De, in the education department, the Home Government have prohibited the employment in any capacity in the education department of a clergyman who is, or who has been, engaged in missionary work.—Englishman.

SOLEMNISATION OF MARRIAGES BETWEEN NATIVE CHRISTIANS.—The Rev. J. Gregson, Baptist missionary, Agra, is licensed under Section 8 of Act V. of 1865 (the Indian Marriage Act) to solemnise marriages, and under Section 47 of the same Act to grant certificates of marriages between native Christians in the North-Western Provinces.

THE TROOPS AT CUTTACK AND SUMBULPORE.—It is intended in future to station a full regiment of native infantry at Cuttack and one at Sumbulpore, instead of a wing at each station as hitherto. This is only the result of the withdrawal of the two Madras regiments from Singapore, although it will tend to the circulation of a few additional thousands of rupees through the unfortunate Orissa country.—Indian Daily News.

RAWULPINDI.—Public Opinion believes it is not unlikely that the gallant Deputy Commissioner of Rawulpindi may exchange the bench for the bar. We have no doubt that his acknowledged ability would enable him to realise a large income. If a few men of position, intimately acquainted with the people and known and trusted by them, were to practice in our courts, these might perhaps become more popular than they are at present.

THE SHINDOO COUNTRY.—It is proposed to carry an expedition into the Shindoo country, to the east of Chittagong, in the cold weather. The Kookees to the north of the district have been induced to keep quiet by police allowances made them, and by the remembrance of the punishment they received a few years ago. The Shindoos however hold aloof and keep their border in perpetual alarm. The villagers in fact are abandoning their homes on this account, and the area of cultivated land along the border has consequently decreased.

THE SUMBULPORE TERRITORY TO BE DIVIDED.—In consequence of the interminable disputes between the chiefs, called the Pat and That Rajahs of Sumbulpore, the Government has decided to divide the territory between them. The Rajahs have, in furtherance of this object, abandoned all claims to superiority as between themselves, and have consented that their interest shall henceforward be regarded as entirely separate. The annual tribute now levied will be divided for the future between them, proportionately to the share of the state each may receive.

PASSAGES IN H. M.'S INDIAN TROOP SHIPS.—The question having been put whether a passage to England may be granted in one of H. M.'s Indian troop ships at her own expense, for the wife of a soldier when the soldier himself remains in this country, the official answer has been given that none but officers and others entitled to passages at the public expense are to be admitted as passengers in her Majesty's Indian troop ships while employed in the conveyance of troops to England; and an advance to this decision has since been enjoined by the Secretary of State.

A REASONABLE COMPLAINT.—Mr. Roberts, the Calcutta police magistrate, took an opportunity the other day, when a native servant was before him charged with making use of abusive language to his mistress, to comment upon the unsatisfactory state of the law on the subject of master and servant. Servants receive ample satisfaction from the courts, and the decisions in the Small Cause Court show how freely they seek redress. The law, Mr. Roberts said, must not be all on one side. In every province, and almost every week, similar representations are made from the bench, but none of our many legislators will attempt to grapple with the difficulty.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES.—MUNICIPAL COMMISSIONERS.—The undermentioned gentlemen are appointed members of a committee for carrying out the purposes of Act VI. of 1868 (the Municipal Improvements, North-Western Provinces Act) in the town of Chunar, in the Benares Division:—The Magistrate of the District, President, the Magistrate in Chunar, Vice-President, the Tehseeldar, ex-officio; Major George Weld, commanding at Chuna; Capt. the Hon. Charles James Donald Arbuthnot; the Rev. Malcolm Lang (Secretary); and several native gentlemen.

EXAMINATIONS IN THE NATIVE LANGUAGES.—The undermentioned officers, hospital apprentices, and men are reported to have passed in the lower standard in Hindoostanee:—Lieutenants Chapman, Adjutant, Webster, and Taylor, 19th Hussars; Ensign Richardson, 38th Foot; Captain Morton, 55th Foot; Lieutenant Lee, 55th Foot; Captain Hesse, 58th Foot; Lieutenant Holley, Ensign Kirk, 101st Foot; Lieutenant Fletcher, General List, Cavalry; Hospital Apprentices Doyle, Toomey, and Gawke, Sub-Medical Department; Driver Tuhey, F. Battery C Brigade R.H.A.; Corporal Cosby, 5th Lancers.

OUR AGENT IN LADAKH.—Dr. Cayley's last published report is dated June 2. The Kullu and Rampore routes were at that time both closed and no news had been received from Yarkand. Merchandise worth nearly Rs. 18,000 had entered Ladakh from Cashmere and other parts of the Maharajah's territories, chiefly for exportation to Yarkand and Changtang. The exports during the past six months have amounted to Rs. 56,000, and were chiefly tea and cotton piece goods, with, however, a large quantity of miscellaneous articles. The direction of the exports was chiefly towards Kullu and Rampore, and a smaller portion went to Cashmere and Yarkand. The traders make no complaints of the new buyers.

SOLDIERS' CLOTHING.—The Commander-in-Chief in India having received several recommendations that the men of the Royal Artillery should be supplied with a serge coat as an intermediate dress, to be worn during the rains, his Excellency is pleased to accord sanction thereto, on the understanding that it is provided in the same manner as the white clothing, out of the compensation received in lieu of articles of cloth clothing. The Commander-in-Chief desires that care may be exercised in introducing this coat, so that the men may not be put to any undue expense, it being understood that the serge coat is in lieu of two white jackets or tunics. The serge coats should be perfectly loose and easy like the red serge coat worn by the infantry, there being no cutting in at the waist. It should be of a length not to touch the back of the horse when worn by a mounted man.

EXAMINATIONS IN THE NATIVE LANGUAGES.—The undermentioned officer is reported to have passed the Lower Standard in Hindoostanee on the 1st ult.:—Ensign O. B. Gordon, 79th Foot. Major Gill, Bengal Staff Corps, is reported to have passed an examination in the tests prescribed for appointment to the Judge Advocate General's Department; Ensign Voyle, 91st Foot (probationer Staff Corps), 2nd Wing Subaltern, 29th Infantry, was reported by the board of examiners at Fort William to have passed in the higher standard on the 6th April last. The undermentioned officers are reported to have passed the lower standard in Hindoostanee on the dates specified:—On the 4th June: Assistant Surgeon Heffernan, Indian Medical Service. On the 1st July: Lieutenants Radford, Royal Artillery; Lee, 38th Foot; Captain Galbraith and Ensign Burrell, 85th Foot; Staff Assistant Surgeon Browne, British Medical Staff; Assistant Surgeon Warburton, Indian Medical Service.

MOFUSSIL JUSTICE.—That boasted privilege of the Briton of freedom from arrest, except on the regular process of the Court, is sometimes looked upon by our up-country Solons as an absolute institution, and chits are substituted for writs. What would any traveller by the East Indian Railway say to being suddenly seized in a refreshment-room by a bailiff, armed with no better authority than the following document, written on a sheet of note-paper, without any seal or stamp of a Court upon it:—"In the Court of Small Causes. Whereas ——— has made affidavit that ———, against whom he has a decree, is about to leave the jurisdiction of this Court, this is to order that you shall bring up the said ——— before me to-morrow, if he does not furnish valid security to the extent of Rs. ———, or if he does not make over to you the said amount on account of the said decree. ———, Judge, Small Cause Court. To the Bailiff, Small Cause Court." And yet it was only a few days since that this actually occurred. The affidavit, stating that the traveller was about to leave the jurisdiction, must have been made before he had even arrived within the jurisdiction, and we cannot understand how a judge, with the knowledge of this fact, could ever have issued such an irregular and improper order.—Englishman.

RETIREMENT. C. S.—The Governor General in Council is pleased to permit Mr. James Vans Agnew and Mr. James Coombe to resign the Civil Service, the former from the 27th of February last, the latter from the 12th of August last.

AN APOLOGY.—The following apology appears in the columns of the Calcutta dailies:—"The editor of the Hindoo Patriot regrets that through an inadvertence an article was inserted in his last issue containing certain reflections on the female sex. He does not participate in the opinions expressed in the article referred to, and is sorry that it got admittance into his paper."

HARD LINES.—Lieutenant C. P. Elderton, of the Royal Artillery, has been convicted by a court-martial at Meerut of conduct prejudicial to good order and military discipline in having failed to dine at his mess without sufficient cause, and with having been drunk in his quarters when visited officially by two officers of his regiment. Lieutenant Elderton was sentenced to be reprimanded and reduced twenty steps in the list of lieutenants in his regiment. In confirming this sentence the Commander-in-Chief animadverted on several irregularities which occurred in the course of the trial, but which did not result in any real prejudice to the prisoner.

CHOLERA IN CENTRAL INDIA.—A short time ago the Central India Times stated that cholera had made its appearance among the European troops at Kamptee, and that up to date July 11th fifty cases had occurred, two-thirds of which had been fatal. Dr. Sinclair, the senior medical officer of the British troops at Kamptee, has written to contradict this statement. He says that up to the 11th instant only five cases occurred, of which four were fatal; from the 11th to the 18th only one case occurred, which terminated fatally. Dr. Sinclair adds that the movement of the troops into camp was not contemplated, as there was no necessity for the measure.

A COUNTER CHARGE.—A curious suit has been raised in the Allahabad Civil Courts by Lieutenant Lyne, the quarter-master of H.M.'s 107th, and his wife, against Colonel Patton, of that regiment. The plaintiffs seek to recover Rs. 10,000, in consequence of the defendant having slanderously said that the lady had received a bribe of Rs. 500 from one Hurree, a contractor, with Lieutenant Lyne's knowledge. Another action has been brought by Hurree Ram, commissariat contractor, against Colonel Patton for Rs. 1,000 as damages for illegal confinement. An officer cannot enjoy both civil and military law. The results of a court of inquiry on the lieutenant having been sent up to the Commander-in-Chief, the former must await the decision of a court-martial. The principal Sudder Ameen has postponed the hearing of the case till the military proceedings are known.

EUROPEAN SETTLEMENTS IN INDIA.—We are informed that the attention of the Home Government has been again directed towards the possibility of making European settlements in India. A report has been called for. It will be in the recollection of our readers that after the suppression of the Mutiny the Home authorities called for a report on the available waste lands in Bengal, the North-Western Provinces and the Punjab, which might be considered suitable for settlement by Europeans. Towards the end of 1862 these reports were submitted. While, however, the matter was under consideration, fresh reports were sent home on the climate of India, which was represented as exceedingly bad. These last reports caused the question of settlements to be dropped until quite recently, when, as we have stated, the Secretary of State called for the opinion of the authorities in India.—Englishman.

THE BURDWAN RAJAH'S CLAIM TO A ROYAL SALUTE.—The native press, represented by the Lucknow Times and the Hindoo Patriot, are opposed to the Rajah of Burdwan receiving from Government the honour of a salute which he has requested. We see no force in the objections urged, which probably only arise from the natural jealousy which one chief has of another. The Rajah of Burdwan has done good service to the State; he is a man of great wealth, and has probably more sympathy with the English and with English ideas than any prince in India. It is said that the Government will be creating a Frankenstein by complying with his petition, as it will not know how to refuse similar petitions from other chiefs equally and more deserving. Any precedent formed by honouring the Rajahs of Burdwan will be a good one; and, moreover, without wishing to play upon words, an old proverb tells us how "salutes go by favour," and the Government, which is the fountain of honour, is not bound to declare why it bestows, or why it withholds them.—Indian Public Opinion.

BAD NEWS FROM TIRHOOT.—We have received the following from a friend in Tirhoot:—"The usual topic of the weather generally stated annually as the 'like of which has not been known here for years,' may at present more accurately be described as such in this quarter. It is now the 20th of July and not a sign of the rains! Planters look with longing eyes at the clouds, each day hoping in vain for the reviving shower to their parched plant; while out-turns and commissions look not half so hopeful as they did a month ago. Stunted withered plant that would have recovered by a timely rain is getting irretrievably lost, and fine plant that lately was, is drooping, collapsing, and looking like green tea. Native crops, too, such as early paddy and Indian corn, and everything else, are withering out from such unnatural drought, and an ominous shadow of famine hovers over. Several outworks, depending on tanks for their water, have not been able to begin manufacture at all, and the plant is being dragged from great distances and with great labour into the head factories; and these also in more than one case are just at the last drop of their dried-up lakes. I hope this grand system of canal irrigation proposed here may when carried out, help to set the weather at defiance. Cholera is raging with sweeping effect over the north-west of the district, and gradually spreading."—Englishman.

MR. BLANDFORD IN ABYSSINIA.—At the last meeting of the Calcutta Asiatic Society a paper containing Mr. Blandford's notes on Abyssinia was read. Mr. Blandford had crossed the hills to Tekeonda and Halai, and thus obtained a considerable insight into the fauna of the country, as well as an acquaintance with its geology. He had collected upwards of 200 specimens of birds and mammals. Mr. Blandford describes Senafe as standing on sandstone, upon which a series of trachytes and basalts rest quite uniformly. The sandstone itself rests on metamorphics, which occupy all the lower ground and formed many of the hills as far as Goonagooa. Near Attegerat the metamorphics become almost conformable. In Abyssinia cotton soil abounds, but only on trap or on its immediate neighbourhood. It resembles the Indian regur, and is as sticky after rain and as full of holes as the black soil of Guzerat and Malwa. Large mammals are far fewer than in India. Mr. Blandford hoped to be able to bring home about 500 specimens of natural history. A more recent communication stated that he was about to start to the north-west from Massowah, an expedition in which he expected to meet with many novelties and make more additions to his collection.

THE TWENTY-FOUR PERGUNNAHS.—The worst anticipations regarding the state of those parts of the Twenty-four Pargunnahs flooded in the late rains have unfortunately been realised. Over the whole tract of country from Tolly's Nullah to the western border of the Sunderbunds and between the Hooghly and the Pallee, an area from twenty to thirty miles long by ten broad, the crops have been wholly destroyed. Following in such speedy succession upon the cyclone of last year, this disaster has reduced the people to great straits. From want of forage the ryots are compelled to sell their cattle below their value, and are now dependent for subsistence almost entirely upon fishing. Many of the labouring class are pouring into Calcutta; the ryots who cannot abandon their families and holdings are in a state of great despondency, and signs of absolute want were in some instances visible. Relief measures are being actively devised. As an example of what the ryots have to expect from their landlords, we may mention that a wealthy Calcutta zemindar, whose estates in Lower Bengal were among those that suffered most severely in the late floods, while tales of distress and suffering were daily pouring into Calcutta, despatched an order to his agent to raise among his tenantry a very large sum of money for the celebration of his mother's shradh.—Friend of India.

OUR GENTLE POLICE.—A correspondent writes to a Calcutta contemporary as follows:—"Unfortunately for my nerves and peace of mind a section of the Bengal police has recently located itself next door to where I reside. It has been my misfortune since to be frequently alarmed by the cries of unfortunate wretches whose evil fate has brought them within the clutches of the Darogah and his myrmidons, but never to such an extent as on the night of Sunday last, the 26th instant, when some poor devil cried out so loudly and piteously at the beating or other torture he was enduring at the Thannah that I and others in the house could not sleep for some hours, not only through the disturbance, but for thinking of the injustice of their ill-treating, perhaps, an innocent man, and whether the prisoner was not more than sufficiently punished for his crime—whatever it may have been short of murder—without having to go before judges to be further dealt with according to law. But this makes me naturally ask—Is this law? Is such cruelty general, or are these unnatural proceedings tolerated only in this section of the Bengal police? I think I remember an Inspector Nolan and his subordinate being punished for similar conduct; and is a native, perhaps of low origin, because he is now a Jack-in-office, to carry on with impunity such cruelties when Englishmen are justly punished for the same? I pause for a reply from somebody."

THE CALCUTTA POLICE AT HOME.—Under the title of the "Calcutta Police at Home" a writer in the Friend of India gives a rather graphic description of the Mangoe Lane Thannah, where he lately had occasion to lodge a complaint of theft. He tells us how he found the section house a disreputable den, more resembling an abode for thieves than for thieftcatchers; how the men were half-naked, and the place encumbered with charpoys, packed close together and covered with bedding fit for pigs; how the whole place smelt so offensively that he was obliged to seek refuge in the sun in the compound, which, however, smelt as badly; how he could find no Europeans to take his complaint, and was assured by the native who did so that the property could not be recovered; and how, finally, the property was not recovered. All this is very true, and very bad; and it must not be supposed that the state of the Mangoe Lane section house is any worse than that of its fellows. Similar sights and similar smells, and probably similar replies and results would meet the writer in any of the section houses. Much of this, however, is not the fault of the police, but of the accommodation with which they are provided. The men live on the premises; as the Police Report informs us, the premises are contracted, dilapidated, ill-ventilated. That they should also be dirty, and smell offensively, is a necessary consequence. Nor can it be expected that men should wear their uniform at home even when their house is a Thannah, and that Thannah so small that a separate room cannot be kept for the public. Still there is no excuse for there not being properly dressed men on duty, or for the off-hand and careless manner in which the public are treated. Had the writer not been a European, he would probably have had to complain of worse than indifference. There can be no doubt that one reason why our Police are so unsuccessful with the public is the manner in which they treat the public—we speak of the manner in which the native Police treat natives.—Englishman.

Hogg, Commissioner of Police and chairman of the Justices of the Peace for the town of Calcutta, is allowed one month's privilege leave, from the 16th July; Mr. J. R. P. Money, Judge of Mirzapore, has two months leave, from 16th June. Extensions of leave, on medical certificates, have been granted by the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India, to the following officers for the periods mentioned, viz.:—Mr. C. G. Baker, v.c., Deputy Inspector General of Police, First Circle, for four months; Mr. R. Thwaytes, B.A., Principal of the Hooghly College, for six months; Mr. H. T. Prinsep, C.S., reported his departure from India, per steamship Surat, which was left at sea by pilot on the 6th July; Mr. E. Macnaghten, C.S., has leave preparatory to furlough to Europe, from July 11th; leave of absence for two years, on medical certificate, has been granted to Mr. G. D. Anderson, Superintendent of Police, 5th grade, in British Burmah, with effect from the date on which he may avail himself of it; the leave of absence for twelve months, on medical certificate, granted by the Secretary of State to the Rev. J. Sharkey, Senior Chaplain on the Bengal Establishment, and notified on the 3rd December, 1867, and the 15th April last, is commuted to a furlough for that period, in extension of the furlough for eighteen months granted to him on the 9th of March, 1866; leave of absence for thirty days is granted to Captain C. L. R. Glasford, Deputy Commissioner, Upper Godavary district, from the 19th instant, preparatory to his obtaining leave of absence on furlough to Europe; two months' privilege leave of absence, under the orders of the Government of India, dated the 13th October, 1863, is granted to Lieutenant G. F. I. Graham, Officiating District Superintendent of Bareilly, with effect from 10th June, 1868; one month's privilege leave of absence is granted to Mr. George Boles Pasley, Magistrate and Collector of Ghazepore, in continuation of the leave granted to him by the notification of this department, No. 1,291, dated 19th March last; two months' privilege leave of absence is granted to Mr. Horace D'Oyly Moule, Assistant Magistrate and Collector of Pilibheet; two months' privilege leave of absence has been granted to the Rev. Jeremiah Fitz-Austin Gavin, B.A., Chaplain of Roorkee; the two months' privilege leave of absence is granted under notification No. 586, dated the 3rd ultimo, to Mr. G. Madras.

ROMOURED SUPERSESSION.—A report has reached the Madras Times that Mr. J. R. Kindersley, of the Madras Civil Service, who has so ably conducted the duties of Judicial Commissioner in Mysore, is to be superseded by the Private Secretary to Sir John Lawrence.

FURLOUGH TO EUROPE.—The undermentioned officer is permitted to proceed to Europe:—Captain Rose, Staff Corps, attached to 24th Regiment N.I., on urgent private affairs for six months, under Rule XI. of the furlough regulations of 1868, and to embark from Bombay.

THE GREAT SOUTHERN OF INDIA RAILWAY.—The traffic receipts for the week ending the 27th of June, 1868, amounted for passengers, &c., to Rs. 8,451-12-0, and for luggage, goods, &c., to Rs. 5,893-5-0, making together Rs. 14,345-1-0, or an average receipt per mile of Rs. 85-6-0. During the corresponding week in 1867 the receipts were Rs. 14,108-15-9, or an average receipt per mile of Rs. 111-1-6.

A NEW JOURNAL.—The Great South of India Times and Advertiser is the title of a new paper published in Madras. The first number has a good energetic business-like appearance that promises well. The editor prays to the "Eternal God of mercies for our support and enabling us to swim in this vast ocean into which we have launched;" and under the head of domestic occurrences regrets "that he has had nothing to insert in that number but hoped to be favoured by the public for our future issue very energetically."

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.—The undermentioned gentlemen have obtained leave of absence from their stations in July:—Mr. A. J. Stuart, Acting Head-assistant to the Collector and Magistrate of the Kistna District, three months' privilege leave, under Section 19 of the Civil Service Absentee Rules of 1868; Lieutenant C. J. Walker, Deputy-Conservator of Forests, in charge of the Salem Range, privilege leave for two months; Captain J. Goddard, R.E., Executive Engineer of the First Grade, privilege leave for three months, from August 1.

MILITARY.—We understand that Brigadier General Fenwick, now holding temporary command of the Central Division of the Madras Army, but whose permanent appointment is a brigadier of the second class, commanding at Cannanore, has been offered the command of the first-class brigade at Kamptee, rendered vacant by General Brice's death. Colonel Doveton Hodson, who now commands the 22nd Regiment at Palamcottah, will, we believe, get the vacant second-class brigade. Should Brigadier Fenwick continue in command of the Central Division, it is probable that Colonel Hodson will get the first-class brigade at Kamptee.—Madras Times.

THE MADRAS RAILWAY.—The traffic receipts of the South-west line for the week ending July 18, 1868, amounted for passengers, &c., to Rs. 29,897-4-5; for goods, &c., to Rs. 44,476-4-6, making together, Rs. 74,373-8-11, or an average receipt per mile of Rs. 151-2-8. During the corresponding week in 1867 the receipts were Rs. 63,766-13-4, or an average receipt per mile of Rs. 129-9-9. The receipts of the North-west line for the same week amounted for passengers, &c., to Rs. 5,286-15; for goods, &c., to Rs. 19,710-4-2; making together, Rs. 24,997-3-2, or an average receipt per mile of Rs. 163-6-1. During the corresponding week in 1867 the receipts were Rs. 19,607-5-1, or an average receipt per mile of Rs. 128-2-5.

THE BANGALORE BRANCH LINE.—On the morning of July 25 one of the piers of the iron-girder bridge at the one hundred and seventy-fifth mile, situated about three and a-half furlongs from the Colar-road railway station, was washed away by a heavy flood occasioned by the rains on the day before. The goods' train from Jolarpett and passengers' train from the Royapooram terminal station, which left for Bangalore that morning, were detained at Colar in consequence of the accident. The mails which were despatched by that opportunity were, on arrangements made by the postal authorities, sent on to Bangalore. No mails have been received from Bangalore for the past two days. The mails from Madras will, until further notice, be sent by the morning trains and not by the evening, as heretofore. We are not aware what arrangements have been made by the postal authorities at Bangalore for the transmission of their daily mails to the Presidency. The European and native passengers who were booked for Bangalore by the seven o'clock train on Saturday morning could not proceed to their destination. Mr. Anderson, the chief engineer, and Mr. Church, the traffic manager, proceeded by the five o'clock train on Saturday evening to Colar to make the necessary arrangements for the convenience of mails and passengers to and from Bangalore. Mr. Anderson reported yesterday, that passengers had been conveyed across the breach, and that he hoped to restore temporary communication by Wednesday.—Madras Times, July 29.

PEAL OF BELLS FOR THE CATHEDRAL.—We understand that the Venerable the Archdeacon has been promised upwards of Rs. 4,000 for the purchase of a peal of bells for the cathedral, and the erection of a tower for their reception. This sum will about suffice for defraying the cost of the bells. The cost of the tower has yet to be guaranteed.

CONCERNING BOOTS.—The Governor in Council, with a view to applying to this Presidency the rule laid down by his Excellency the Governor General in Council in a resolution "on boots," has directed that the following notification be published in the Fort St. George Gazette. It will be for the Honourable the Judges of the High Court to decide whether any rule on this subject is required as regards the High Court. "The Governor in Council is pleased to rule that all natives of India wearing boots or shoes of European fashion may appear thus habited before all the servants of Government, in all places within the Madras Presidency and its dependencies, on all official or semi-official occasions, including durbars of all descriptions. In the case of natives wearing shoes of Indian fashion, the old social practice, whereby such shoes must be taken off within the customary limits, will be maintained by the servants of Government in their official or semi-official capacities."—Madras Times.

A CLEVER DETECTIVE.—Madras is apparently more fortunate in the guardians of her public safety than the citizens of Calcutta. In the month of May a burglary was committed at the shop of a cloth merchant, and jewellery valued at Rs. 2,488 carried off. Veeraswamy, a native constable, was made aware of the robbery, and he immediately set himself to watch the movements of a gomashita and a groom who had been in the merchant's service, and had the satisfaction of seeing them pay frequent visits to a goldsmith's shop. After watching every motion of the suspected persons in true detective style, Veeraswamy at last went to the goldsmith, and, with considerable tact, wormed out of him that he had received some gold chains from the suspected persons, which he was melting down into other ornaments. Veeraswamy immediately procured assistance, searched the goldsmith's premises and found some of the stolen property. Steadily following up the clue, they arrested the gomashita and his colleague with two other accomplices, and recovered jewels to the amount of Rs. 1,934. The prisoners were all sentenced to six months' rigorous imprisonment and to pay fines of Rs. 200 and Rs. 300. A Veeraswamy in Calcutta would be worth his weight in silver.

CINCHONA IN THE NEILGHERY HILLS.—We are sorry to learn from the report of the Superintendent of Cinchona Plantations on the Neilgherry Hills that the past year has not been so favourable to the plantations as previous seasons. This is attributable principally to the almost entire absence of rain during the north-east monsoon, causing the young plants which had lately been transplanted to fail considerably. The older plants had not suffered at all from the want of moisture. A large falling off in the increase of plants during the year is also assigned partly to the same cause, and partly to the demand for plants having almost ceased, the monthly number of cuttings and seedlings having fallen from 60,950 during the previous year to 48,267 during the year under notice. The total number of plants on the 31st of March last was 2,353,370, showing an increase of over 425,000 during the year. The first plants that were permanently planted in 1862 have attained a height of seventeen or eighteen feet, and have assumed quite a tree-like appearance. These plants, as well as those of the two following years, now produce an annual supply of seed, for which there is a large demand, as the public are beginning to appreciate the profits to be derived from Cinchona plantations. The system of coating the trees with moss has been found most beneficial in increasing the quantity of alkaloids in the bark, the proportions having risen in trees thus treated from 0.761 to 2.21 during the year 1867. This has also caused a corresponding rise in the value of the bark, the prices at the public sales in England having been higher than those obtained for the same description of American bark. A new species, a variety of C. Calisaya, which had been presented to the Superintendent by Mr. Howard, the Government analyser, has been successfully propagated and promises well, yielding one of the best sort of yellow bark. Some other varieties from Java have also been received; and the Superintendent is anxious to make his collection as perfect as possible by the acquisition of other species, more particularly some of the best sorts from America.—Indian Daily News.

AN IMPORTANT QUESTION.—The Female Normal School to be established in the Madras Presidency through the liberality of the Maharajah of Vizianagram is an interesting and important experiment. It is to be hoped that it will be judiciously and successfully managed, but there appears to be one or two points on which serious mistakes might be made. The Director of Public Instruction, before seeking to obtain the co-operation of influential and educated Hindoos, has submitted the following questions to the Madras Government:—Is the Normal School to be open to females of all classes and sects, or only to caste Hindoo females? Is the study of English to be made compulsory, or to be left optional? Are the pupils to bind themselves to serve wherever they may be ordered to go as teachers? Is the Normal School to be managed by the Educational Department, like other Government institutions, or is it to be placed in any way under a committee of Hindoos and Europeans? Will the pupils be allowed to live with their friends and attend as day scholars, or will they be required to live in a boarding-house, under the supervision of the lady superintendent? The first question is an important one. "It must be allowed," says the director, "that the exclusion of all others than caste Hindoo females from a Government school is contrary to the principles on which we have hitherto acted. I doubt much however our securing the support of the Hindoo community if females of all castes and classes are to be admitted. I suggest therefore that at first admission to the Normal School be restricted to Hindoo caste females." The Madras Government however is of opinion "that the Normal School should be open to females of all classes and sects, provided they belong to families of respectable social station. At the same time, there will be no objection to commence the Normal School with a majority of caste Hindoo female students, should a sufficient number of such persons possessing the requisite attainments offer themselves for admission." The prudence of this decision is open to question, and the Madras Times, we see, considers it will "defeat one, if not the chief, of the objects which the Maharajah of Vizianagram, the founder of the school, must certainly have in view—namely, the education of the upper classes of Hindoo women."

COLONEL AITCHISON.—The Deputy-adjutant-general of the Bombay army, Colonel C. T. Aitchison, will proceed to England very shortly, on medical certificate.

NATIVE LIBERALITY.—Messrs. David Sassoon and Co. have, with their usual liberality, remitted a hundred pounds sterling to England, for the use of the family of the late Dr. Yuill.

ARRIVALS FROM FURLOUGH.—The undermentioned officer returned to duty, by permission of the Secretary of State for India, on July 18:—Capt. F. P. Forteach, Staff Corps.

RUMOURED DESIGNS OF PERSIA.—We hear from the Persian Gulf that the Shah of Persia has resolved on despatching a force to occupy Merv.—Englishman.

BARODA.—The Gaikwar is said to have granted a liberal pension to his brother, Mulhar Rao, who was lately suspected of plotting to seize the chiefship.

LORD NAPIER'S SHARE OF BATTA.—The share of six months' donation batta for service in Abyssinia, payable to his Excellency Sir Robert Napier, the Commander-in-Chief, will amount, it is believed, to Rs. 29,850.

ACTING APPOINTMENT.—We (Bombay Gazette) understand that Captain Edmund Southey will act as Controller of Public Works Accounts, in room of Captain A. Davidson, who proceeded to England by the last mail on sick leave.

COMPENSATION FOR HORSES LOST.—Upon the recommendation of Sir Robert Napier, the Government of India have been asked to grant compensation to officers of the Abyssinian Expeditionary Force for all horses they may have lost during the campaign.

AFTER-FRUIT OF CAMPAIGNING.—We are sorry to hear that many of the staff and non-commissioned officers who have just returned from Abyssinia in Bombay are now suffering from the hardships undergone in the campaign, being in hospital with fevers and dysentery. The distribution of the six months' batta is a great boon to the troops, but it is to be hoped there may be no delay in its distribution.

MEDICAL RETIRING FUND.—The Secretary of State for India has sanctioned the transfer of the assets, liabilities, and management of the Bombay Medical Retiring Fund to Government, by whom the business of the fund will hereafter be transacted.

CHOLERA.—Cholera has, we regret to say, appeared at Munmar and other places on the line of railway in the direction of Bombay. At Niphar the deaths are said to average twenty daily. There had been very little rain.

EXAMINATION IN PERSIAN.—Lieutenant B. Lovett, R.E., of the Persian Telegraph Department, passed an examination in the Persian language on April 29, 1868, according to the second standard laid down in G.O. No. 445, of September 23, 1864.

EXAMINATIONS IN THE NATIVE LANGUAGES.—The undermentioned are reported to have passed the required examination in Hindoostani according to the higher standard:—Lieutenant Price, Royal Artillery; Sergeant Gallagher, 108th Foot; Gunner Appleby, C Battery 18th Brigade R.A.; Private Taylor, 104th Foot.

THE PUNDERPORE FAIR.—The annual fair at Punderpore, on the border between Sholapore and Sattara, which used to be generally attended with cholera, has passed off this year without any sickness. More than 100,000 pilgrims were present, of whom 14,000 availed themselves of the camping ground which the authorities had provided. The fees received from pilgrims amounted to Rs. 19,000.

REWARD FOR SERVICE.—The Secretary of State for India has sanctioned the grant of a personal allowance of Rs. 100 a month to Mr. Pandorung Dinanath, Uncovenanted Assistant to the Commissary General at Bombay, in consideration of the strong testimony borne by the Commissary General to the value of Mr. Pandorung's services.

FORT PRESS COMPANY.—An extraordinary general meeting of the shareholders of the Fort Press Company (Limited) was held on July 28, at the office of Messrs. Ewart, Latham, and Co., secretaries and treasurers; Mr. Astley in the chair. It was unanimously resolved that an interim dividend of Rs. 1,000 per share be paid on and after the following day.

THE 46TH AND 91ST REGIMENTS.—The Bombay Government have received intimation from the Secretary of State for India that the 46th and 91st Regiments should be sent home overland during the approaching cold season. The G Battery 14th Brigade Royal Artillery, which was under orders to return home during the next season, are now to remain in this country, the order having been countermanded.

THE COMMISSARIAT.—The following reversions in the commissariat department are ordered, consequent on the return from Abyssinia of Conductors Lee and Pearson and Sub-Conductor Crowe:—Acting Conductors John Crumley and Patrick Leonard to revert to Sub-conductor, and Acting Sub-Conductor Nathan Walters to Sergeant, with effect from July 3; Acting Sub-Conductor Michael Hogan to revert to Sergeant, with effect from June 22; Shoeing Smith William Hossack, 18th Brigade Royal Artillery, employed in the ordnance department, is transferred to the unattached list, and promoted to Sergeant.

POLICE STATISTICS.—There is one fact in the Bombay police statistics for 1867-8 which strongly confirms one's suspicions that there must be a large number of vindictive and reprehensible criminal prosecutions carried on. Forty-four persons were charged with perjury or conspiracy during the year in question, and forty-three of them were discharged. It is a pity the law has not a few more terrors for men who bring groundless cases of that kind into court. Again, it is not a very satisfactory fact, wherever the fault may lie, that out of 17,599 persons tried before the magistrates no less than 7,252 should be brought up under such circumstances as to require that they should be discharged. It would be well to know the cause of this, and Government, we observe, have taken notice of the matter. Vindictive prosecutions are probably one great reason, but the native police may also be to blame.

THE TIMBER DUTIES.—In reference to a letter to the Government of Bombay of April 20 last, stating that only woods which are not wrought or manufactured would be exempt from duty under Act XI. of 1868; and also to a letter from Messrs. Gisborne and Co., dated May 26, enclosing a communication signed by the leading timber merchants of Calcutta, soliciting a reconsideration of the foregoing decision, the Government of India has passed the following resolution:—"The Governor-general in Council observes that as it would appear to be very difficult to maintain a just discrimination between the several items of sawn timber and woods included under that heading, and the unwrought timber and woods to which Act XI. of 1868 was intended to apply, while at the same time the total duty under timber and woods does not annually exceed half a lack of rupees, it would be best to declare the Act in question to apply generally to all timber and woods, and his Excellency in Council is accordingly pleased to do so now."

THE SIND RAILWAY EXTENSION.—It has been decided that the Public Works Department are to construct the line of railway to Peshawar, and the works on the first section from Lahore to Jelum will be commenced immediately after the arrival from England of the chief engineer, Mr. Lee Smith, who is expected here in the course of five or six weeks. The line will cross three large rivers—the Ravee, Chenab, and Jhelum. The country for the first eighty miles is quite flat, so that there will be no engineering difficulties to contend against. Government have made a very serious mistake in allowing the construction of the "missing link" from Mooltan to Kotree to remain so long in abeyance, as, until the Indus Valley Railway is completed, the Punjab will be almost as entirely cut off from sea-port communication as it was years ago. The opening of the Delhi line through to Lahore, two or three years hence, will certainly expedite trade with Eastern India to a very considerable extent, but Calcutta can never, under any circumstances, offer the same facilities to commercial and passenger traffic as Kurrachee. Umritsur, which may be said to be the Manchester of the Punjab for commerce and enterprising merchants, is about thirteen hundred miles from the former port, and only a little over seven hundred and fifty miles from the latter, besides which Kurrachee harbour presents, at all seasons of the year, a roadstead for the largest ships quite as commodious as any other roadstead in India. The holding ground of the anchorage is good, the tides regular, and the direction of the coast line such as to present little difficulty in getting to sea. The land-locked inner harbour is even now easily accessible at all seasons of the year to ships of 1,300 tons and under. Many experienced men are of opinion that for a very moderate outlay the harbour might be enlarged to such an extent as safely to accommodate vessels of two thousand tons and upwards. Since the opening of the Punjab Railway the traffic has been almost nominal, but if the line were open through to Kurrachee it would be without doubt the most paying railway in India. Labour is very cheap and plentiful in Scinde, where it is proposed to construct the Indus Valley Railway, and from its close proximity to the sea-port of Kurrachee the land carriage of the bridge, rolling-stock, and permanent-way material would be very inconsiderable, in comparison with the immense amounts that have been paid for freight to the East Indian Railway, Indus Flotilla Company, &c., on material for the Punjab and Delhi extensions of the Scinde Railway Company. The same extravagance, waste of stock, and delay in transit will be repeated during the construction of the Peshawur line. It cannot be said that this railway is to be opened on commercial grounds, as it will run through one of the most barren districts in India, and for military purposes it can never be of any great service to the country or State until the completion of the Indus Valley Railway, when troops can be landed at Lahore via Kurrachee within thirty days from the date of their departure from England. The trip from Mooltan to Kurrachee and vice versa at present occupies about four weeks, and the expense of travelling is enormous, besides at certain seasons of the year steamers frequently meet with very serious accidents, and are delayed for days or weeks en route.—Indian Daily News Correspondent.

COTTON PROSPECTS.—Mr. H. Rivett-Carnac, Cotton Commissioner for the Central Provinces and the Berars, writes as follows to the Chamber of Commerce, Bombay, from Nagpore, July 22nd:—"The accounts from the Berars are, I am thankful to say, equally cheering, and the district reports show that the change in the weather has been general. The rain did not return a day too soon, and it is hardly pleasant to think of the great damage that a continuance of the dry weather might have occasioned. The rain-fall at Khangaon during the last week was about three inches, and this may be taken to represent the state of the weather in the Poornah Valley during that period. My accounts from there represent the cultivators to be in high spirits. All are busy either sowing or resowing the cotton, and as fortunately the soil of the Berars is rich, and retains the moisture well, the latter operation will not be rendered generally necessary. The rain comes on in the evening; during the day there are occasional gleams of sunshine to comfort and encourage the young plants, which in most places are now looking fresh and healthy. On the whole, I am inclined to consider the present prospect of the crop to be favourable. We have had a narrow escape from a calamity, for, although it is true that even if the rain had held off for a fortnight longer, the resowings, which would then have become general, would have prevented the utter failure of the crop, still it is to be remembered that these operations would have entailed much trouble and expense on the cultivators, and would have tended to discourage them. Moreover, the sowings of the jowaree would have been still further delayed, and this might have told seriously against the grain crop. There are always landowners from all parts of the provinces at Nagpore, and during the last few days several have been to see me, and with them the prospects of the harvest have been discussed. The Koonbie cultivator is not, as a rule, inclined to take the brightest view of matters, and it is a favourable sign to find him in a good humour with the weather. My friends say that if the rain will only continue in a reasonable manner everything will go well. A Chanda man suggested that the rice had suffered, but the Wurdah Patels—I fear they had had no great interest in rice—said there was plenty of time now to resow, and the weather gave the rice people every chance. In the Hingunghat country the cotton was nearly all sown, they say early in June; the rain returned just in time, and the plants are doing well. In the Berars the delay in sowing a great part of the crop may, I fear, tell to some extent against the out-turn; but we must hope that the damage thus occasioned may be made up for by the continuance of the present weather, which is favourable to the cotton sown early in the season. All agree that the long break of fine weather gave the cultivators an opportunity of getting their fields into excellent order, and some think that the abundant leisure to prepare the ground that all have had may result in the area of the cultivation being extended. But in the great cotton fields of East and West Berar I fear this is hardly likely to be the case. On the contrary, it is an undoubted fact that some of the farmers who, during the last few years, took up much land are beginning to draw in their horns, but if more careful cultivation results from this move, the out-turn will hardly be effected. It is not possible, as yet, to give the returns of the area sown with cotton this season, but from the inquiries made, and from my own observation, I should think that matters will remain on about the same footing as last year, and that if the weather only continues as at present no diminution in the exports need be apprehended. The delay in the setting in of the rain will undoubtedly be of advantage to the crops of the spring harvest. The cultivators have had plenty of time to prepare their field for the 'Rubbee' crop, as this is called. Last year the heavy and continuous down-pour rendered all agricultural operation almost impossible, and the wheat suffered equally with the cotton and the crops of the autumn harvest."

COURT-MARTIAL.

LIEUT. C. E. ELDERTON.

Head Quarters, Simla, July 20.—At a general court-martial, assembled at Meean Meer on the 9th day of June, 1868, Lieut. Charles Pitt Elderton, of the Royal Artillery, was arraigned on the following charge:—

Charge. With conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline in the following instances:—

1st. In having, at Meean Meer, on April 2, 1868, without sufficient cause, failed to dine at the mess of the Royal Artillery, at Meean Meer, he having been repeatedly directed by his commanding officer to dine at mess, unless prevented by sufficient cause.

2nd. In having, at the place and on the day above set forth, been drunk in his quarters when visited officially by two officers of the Royal Artillery, sent by the commanding officer to ascertain the cause of his absence from the mess dinner.

Finding. Guilty.

Sentence. To be severely reprimanded, and in addition to loss of regimental rank, by reducing him twenty steps in the list of lieutenants of his regiment. (Signed) F. A. WILLIS, Colonel, President.

Meean Meer, June 13, 1868.

Confirmed.

The C. in C. regrets to observe that there were irregularities of procedure on this trial.

There is one which H.E. is constrained to notice, for the guidance of courts-martial.

It was highly irregular, as H.E. is advised, to interfere with the prisoner's cross-examination of certain witnesses for the prosecution—although the error was subsequently repaired in the examinations on the defence, and the prisoner, consequently, suffered no prejudice.

The ground on which the Court, with the advice of the Deputy Judge Advocate General, disallowed a certain question, appears to have been the notion that by cross-examination is meant questions directly bearing on matters which have been deposed to by the witness on his examination in chief.

This notion is erroneous, and H.E. feels bound to say that the adoption of such a principle is opposed to law, and would lead to great injustice.

The only proper limitations of cross-examination are, as regards purely irrelevant or scandalous questions, or questions which, if answered, would result in the admission of inadmissible evidence.

A prisoner is in no way limited to the case which is made against him. He may cross-examine (among other things) to elicit his defence; and it is no answer to say that he may afterwards call the witness himself, and elicit the facts by examination in chief.

It is only fortunate that in the present case there was in the result no real prejudice to the prisoner.

Lieut. Elderton is hereby reprimanded, in pursuance of his sentence. His name will also be transposed in the list of his rank, and will stand next below that of Lieut. John Fred. Free.

(Signed) W. R. MANSFIELD, General, C. in C. in India.

Head Quarters, Simla, July 11, 1868.

THE BRITISH ASSOCIATION.

On August 26th General Sir A. Scott Waugh read a report of a committee appointed at the Dundee meeting of the British Association, to promote the exploration of lines of overland communication between India and China. It stated that the yearly increasing importance of the British provinces of Assam and Cachar made it from day to day more essential to their prosperity that a communication should, if possible, be opened with China. There were two special reasons why the committee were desirous of pressing this subject at the present time:—1. Since the establishment of a French colony in Cochin China there is reason to believe that an exploratory expedition has been investigating the upper course of the Menom. As this course is within Chinese territory there is no reason to fear any collision between the two expeditions, and it would manifestly be to the advantage of both that they should meet. 2. It has come confidentially to the knowledge of the committee that an English traveller is at present organising an expedition for the purpose of exploring the upper course of the Yang-tse-kiang and of attempting to reach India. Were a similar attempt made from the Indian side at the same time his chances of success would be greatly increased. In many countries this exploration might be left to private enterprise, but there are strong reasons why the task should in Eastern India be undertaken by Government, which alone has the power of influencing the small savage tributary tribes by which Assam is surrounded. The gain to geographical and natural science would of itself repay all the cost. Colonel Sir A. Phayre observed that it was a very interesting country to explore between the eastern parts of India and the western point of China, more especially as the river Irrawadi, which flows through the country of Burmah, takes its rise in these mountains and its source is still a geographical problem that remains to be solved. General Sir V. Eyre said the proposed exploration was one of his own suggestion at Dundee last year, and was very warmly taken up by Sir Roderick Murchison. Shortly after the proposal was made it came to their knowledge that Mr. Cooper had already forestalled the idea, and had actually undertaken to advance from China to the very point which he had indicated as desirable to explore to the north-east of Assam. Mr. Cooper had, after some difficulties, been heard of as having accomplished his journey successfully within a short distance of Thibet. There was, therefore, some hope that this problem would now be set at rest. It was of very great importance to India that a practicable road should be obtained between China and Assam, inasmuch as Assam was becoming a very great tea country, and was much in want of labour; and it was believed that a great excess of labour was to be found in the western parts of China. Sir A. Scott Waugh believed Mr. Cooper had joined the embassy that had gone from Jung Bahadoor of Nepal to China; but it had been stopped by the Chinese. The Chinese authorities told him to deliver up his presents, and wanted the embassy to turn back. So that this was a stoppage altogether of the exploration for the present.

The following, among other sectional recommendations, was read and confirmed:—"That General Sir Andrew Waugh, Sir Arthur Phayre, General G. Balfour, General Sir Vincent Eyre, Captain Sherard Osborn, Mr. George Campbell, and Dr. Thomas Thomson be a committee for the purpose of representing to the Secretary of State for India the desirability of an exploration being made of the district between the Burhampooter, the Upper Irrawaddy, and the Yang-tse-kiang, with a view to a route being established between the navigable parts of those rivers."

Miscellaneous.

THE ORDER OF THE STAR OF INDIA.—(India-office, August 27.)—The Queen has been graciously pleased to nominate and appoint his Highness Ismail Pacha, Viceroy of Egypt, G.C.B., to be an Honorary Knight Grand Commander of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.

THE PUNJAB RAILWAY.—During the month of August the sum of £225,000 has been paid to the credit of the Secretary of State for India in Council on account of the capital of the Punjab Railway, the proprietors of shares in the undertaking having to a large extent availed themselves of the privilege of paying the amount of their shares in full.

EXPERIMENTS WITH THE CHASSEPOT RIFLE.—Some experiments have recently been made at the camp of Lyons on the bodies of dead and even of living horses, in order to ascertain the precise character of the wounds produced by conical bullets discharged from the Chassepot muskets. It is said that the aperture made by the ball at the moment it penetrates the flesh is commonly no larger than an ordinary pea, but that the spinning movement of the ball on its axis gradually enlarges its circles until it makes a hole into which a person could thrust both fists.

THE MONT CENIS RAILWAY.—In consequence of the damage done to the railway over Mont Cenis by the late heavy rains, which have rendered the line unserviceable for a time, the French mails for Italy have been delayed three days. The Herald correspondent at Florence, referring to this fact, is of opinion that this railway is inadequate to solve the problem of Alpine transit, and rejoices in the rapid progress which is being made with the tunnel. Of that great work it appears there is only a little more than two miles left to be cleared, and it is expected that it will be finished at the expiration of about two years from this date.

OPENING OF THE RAILWAY TO ISMAILIA.—A letter from Alexandria, in the Moniteur, says, that on the 15th August the railway from Suez to Ismailia was opened, and that in the evening M. de Lesseps gave a grand banquet of one hundred and fifty covers. "The development of the town of Suez," it adds, "assumes more and more remarkable proportions. Its population, which was only 3,000 inhabitants a few years ago, now amounts to 25,000. The French colony which the creation of the maritime canal has attracted to the place is already very numerous, and is generally in a prosperous condition. Our merchants and traders, who had very little capital when they established themselves at the commencement of the works, now do a large business, and for seven years not a single failure has taken place."

THE INTERNATIONAL TELEGRAPHIC CONGRESS.—An important congress has lately been held at Vienna which has almost escaped notice in the English press. We allude to the "Conférence Télégraphique Internationale," at which (amongst other trifling matters) the system of telegraphic communication between Europe and the East was resettled by the assembled delegates. The position which England occupied at the conference we will leave our readers to gather from the official report of the remarks of Colonel Goldsmid at the sitting of July 13:—M. le Colonel Goldsmid demande que des mesures soient prises pour améliorer ce fâcheux état de choses et assurer aux correspondances des Indes une transmission prompte et régulière. Si les délégués Anglais n'ont pas fait dans ce sens un amendement formel, c'est qu'ils n'ont reçu qu'à la dernière heure avis de la décision qui les admettait à prendre part aux travaux de la conférence, et que c'est à Vienne seulement qu'ils ont eu connaissance des propositions des divers Gouvernements. If we are to be thus left out in the cold in international congresses, might it not be well to take our own parts, and lay a direct deep-sea line for ourselves?—Pall Mall Gazette.

DEATH OF COLONEL FARRANT.—We have to announce the death of Colonel Francis Farrant, in the diplomatic service, which took place at Buckland House, Dover, in his 65th year. The late colonel was formerly a lieutenant in the 3rd Regiment of Light Cavalry, in the service of the East India Company, on the Bombay establishment, was selected by the late Lord William Bentinck, then Governor-general of India, to proceed to Persia in 1833 to organise a cavalry force for the then reigning monarch, Futtah Ali Shah. He was private secretary to Sir John McNeill, then her Majesty's Minister Plenipotentiary in Persia in 1837, accompanied him to Herat in 1838, and was present at the siege of that fort by the Persians. The late colonel was attached to the mission in Persia, in 1842, and in the same year was sent by Sir Justice Sheil, then her Majesty's Minister in Persia, to attend the commission ordered to assemble at Erzerum regarding the Turco-Persian question. On his arrival there he was commended by Sir Stratford Canning (now Viscount Stratford de Redcliffe), then her Majesty's Ambassador at Constantinople, to proceed to Bagdad and Rebellia, to report on the massacre of the Persian inhabitants by the Turkish army under Nejb Pacha, for which service he received the marked approbation of her Majesty's Government. In 1835 the insignia of the Royal Persian Order of the Lion and Sun, of the second class, was conferred on him by the Shah, as a recognition of his services; and in 1842 the insignia of the first class of the Royal Order of the Lion and Sun was conferred on him as a mark of his Majesty's approbation of his conduct whilst in actual service. He was appointed Secretary of Legation at the Court of Persia in 1844, and was Chargé d'Affaires from 1847 to 1849. He resigned his appointment at Teheran March 15, 1852, and was promoted to be colonel in the army in India in 1855.

THE TEXTILE MANUFACTURES AND THE COSTUMES OF THE PEOPLE OF INDIA

Prepared under the Authority of the Secretary of State for India in Council.

By J. FORBES WATSON, Reporter on the Products of India.

Imperial quarto, morocco back, cloth, with numerous coloured Photographs. £3. 5s.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

THE TIMES.—"On no point, perhaps, in regard to India, has greater ignorance prevailed in England than in respect to the clothing of her vast population. Late as it is, and for the first time within the last hundred years of our Indian domination, the work just completed by Dr. Forbes Watson supplies this great and almost unaccountable want of information, and supplies it, too, in a most complete and intelligible manner. It would be impossible to follow Dr. Watson's work in detail; but, whether to the manufacturer or to the general reader, the interest throughout will continue unbroken. His book is written in a clear and thoroughly intelligible style throughout; it is handsomely got up, and embellished by numerous coloured photographs, from which the various styles of costumes and portions of clothing, male and female, will be more readily understood than from mere descriptions."

THE ATHENÆUM.—"We may safely say that a more important work on the manufactures of India has never been given to the public, than the Industrial Museum, and this Commentary by Dr. Forbes Watson. Advantages are sometimes slow to follow, even when the channel for them has been skillfully made and clearly marked out, but we certainly do anticipate very great results from this work, and that before long its author will be acknowledged to deserve a place amongst the real benefactors of India."

THE EDINBURGH REVIEW.—"It is a matter of national importance to study and ascertain what the traditions of India in respect to dress really are. This task has been most ably performed by Dr. Forbes Watson in the volume before us. We call attention to the work and to the subject, not as a matter of mere curiosity, but as an inquiry of direct interest to the manufacturing industry of Europe. Dr. Watson has evidently brought his personal Indian experience to bear upon a mass of materials which, in less skilled hands, would most likely have proved wearisome and unintelligible. As he has arranged his details, they are as entertaining to the general reader as they are full of information and instruction to the manufacturer."

THE MORNING POST.—"The conception of this splendid work reflects the highest credit upon the wisdom of the department to which we are indebted for its publication; and the manner in which it has been executed by its author. No one can fully appreciate the value or this work without seeing it, because neither analysis nor extracts can give any idea of the immense mass of minute facts which it contains, and the admirable manner in which they are grouped and made subservient to the practical requirements of the manufacturer and the merchant, and the cravings of the student of ornamental art. The illustrations are as magnificent as they are appropriate. In fact, as mere productions of beauty and taste, they give the work the air of a book of art luxury, and we have no doubt that from this feature it will find many admirers and purchasers beyond the ranks of trade and commerce."

THE ART JOURNAL.—"The work, indeed, is as well fitted, as far as embellishment is concerned, for the drawing-room table as it is for the study; and its contents will be found far more interesting to the general reader than its mere designation would lead to a supposition that it might be. The motive and purpose of its publication is highly creditable to the present Home Government of India."

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE. The Public, therefore, are cautioned against using any other than DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

Remedial Uses and Action.

THIS INVALUABLE REMEDY produces quiet, refreshing sleep, relieves pain, calms the system, restores the deranged functions, and stimulates healthy action of the secretions of the body, without creating any of those unpleasant results attending the use of Opium. Old and young may take it at all hours and times when requisite. Thousands of persons testify to its marvellous good effects and wonderful cures, while medical men extol its virtues most extensively, using it in great quantities in the following diseases:—

Diseases in which eminently useful—Cholera, Dysentery, Diarrhoea, Colic, Coughs, Asthma, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Whooping Cough, Cramp, Hysteria, &c.

Those exhaustive diseases—Fever, Ague—so common in tropical climates, are rapidly arrested, and the cold stage in a few moments checked by a timely dose, when warmth and a general glow of the system is established, and comfort secured.

As a Sedative, Neurotic, and Antispasmodic, it is unequalled by any other known Medicine, and not to be surpassed in its specific effects.

Extracts from Medical Opinions.

The Right Hon. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians and J. T. Davenport that he had received information to the effect that the only remedy of any service in Cholera was Chlorodyne.—See Lancet, Dec. 31, 1864.

From A. Montgomery, Esq., late Inspector of Hospitals, Bombay.—"Chlorodyne is a most valuable remedy in Neuralgia, Asthma, and Dysentery. To it I fairly owe my restoration to health after eighteen months' severe suffering, and when other remedies had failed."

Dr. Lowe, Medical Missionary in India, reports (Dec. 1865) that in nearly every case of Cholera in which Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne was administered, the patient recovered.

Mrs. Forbes, wife of the Chaplain at Paris.—"I cannot speak too highly of Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne; I have not in any single instance been disappointed with the result, even in aggravated cases of Indian Cholera."

Extract from Medical Times, Jan. 12, 1866.—"Chlorodyne is prescribed by scores of orthodox medical practitioners. Of course it would not thus be singularly popular did it not supply a want and fill a place."

Extract from the General Board of Health, London, as to its efficacy in Cholera.—"So strongly are we convinced of the immense value of this remedy, that we cannot too forcibly urge the necessity of adopting it in all cases."

CHLORODYNE, the Great Remedy for CHOLERA.—See Report in the Times, Sept. 6, from the Malta Correspondent, who states, August 24th, that "108 cases and eighty-one deaths occurred at Messina; 50,000 people fled from the town, which is in a most deplorable condition; that Chlorodyne has been found most efficacious as a remedy, and a number of persons are reported to have been saved by its use."

Now as there are various imitations sold under the name of Chlorodyne, containing Indian Hemp, Morphine, &c., ingredients highly adverse to the cure of Cholera, the public are cautioned against the use of any compound under the name of Chlorodyne, unless it bears the name of Dr. J. Collis Browne, who coined the word Chlorodyne to designate his wonderful discovery, which he fully tested for many years in her Majesty's Service before introducing it to the public, the wonderful success of which has given rise to various imitations totally different to genuine Chlorodyne. See the decision of Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood, reported in the Times, July 13th, 1864.

The extraordinary medical reports on the efficacy of Chlorodyne renders it a subject of most vital importance that the public should obtain the genuine, which is now sold under the protection of the Government of Great Britain, authorising a stamp, bearing the words "Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne," without which none is genuine. Sold in bottles, 1s. 13d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d., by all Chemists. Sole Manufacturer, J. T. WILKINSON'S PREPARATION of GINGER and

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.

THE HOUR OF DANGER.—Disease commonly comes on with slight symptoms, which, when neglected, increase in intensity and gradually grow dangerous—a condition which betrays the grossest remissness, when the Pills, taken in accordance with their accompanying directions, would not only have checked, but conquered the incipient disorder. Patients daily forward details of the most remarkable and instructive cases, in which timely attention to Holloway's advice has undoubtedly saved them from severe illnesses. These Pills act primarily on the digestive organs, which they stimulate when slow and imperfect.

produced to such a degree, that the patient, retaining his consciousness, can watch the surgeon's knife as it cuts to cure, and yet be without the slightest sensation of physical suffering."—Daily Telegraph, July 13, 1868.

TEETH PAINLESSLY STOPPED with Permanent
Enamel Cement of the exact natural colour. Guaranteed
not to turn black, or make the Teeth look unsightly.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER AS A BASIS FOR
ARTIFICIAL TEETH.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER.—This material being soft and elastic, no springs or fastenings are required; the acids of the stomach produce no effect on it; it fits to the mouth with an accuracy which renders detection impossible, and it is entirely free from taste or smell.
Where the gums are in any way tender, and great absorption has taken place, this system will prove invaluable.

INSPECTION OF MODELS AND SPECIMENS.

Feeling that illustrative specimens of the above improvements would impart a more accurate appreciation of their object, effect, and value, than any written description, a number of models have been executed representing the adaptation of Teeth, and sets to several different shapes, sizes, and defects of the mouth and gums. These models furnish a clear, practical exposition of the principles adopted, and may be seen every day at Mr. WEBB'S residence, free of charge.

explains the above painless and inimitable system, free

THE PEOPLE OF INDIA:

A SERIES OF
PHOTOGRAPHIC ILLUSTRATIONS OF
THE RACES AND TRIBES OF HINDUSTAN,
ORIGINALLY PREPARED UNDER THE AUTHORITY OF
THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, AND REPRODUCED AT THE INDIA MUSEUM
BY ORDER OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL.
EDITED BY
J. FORBES WATSON AND JOHN WILLIAM KAYE.

MEMORANDUM.

In addition to the copies of this work prepared for the use of the Government, the Secretary of State for India in Council has authorised the publication of an edition for sale.

The work will contain about 450 Photographs on mounts, in eight volumes, super-royal 4to., and it will be issued at £2. 5s. per volume.
The First and Second Volumes are now ready for delivery.

PREFACE.

During the administration of Lord Canning, from 1856 to 1863, the interest which had been created in Europe by the remarkable development of the Photographic Art communicated itself to India, and originated the desire to turn it to account in the illustration of the topography, architecture, and ethnology of that country.

There were none, perhaps, in whom this interest was awakened more strongly than in Lord and Lady Canning. It was their wish to carry home with them, at the end of their sojourn in India, a collection, obtained by private means, of photographic illustrations, which might recall to their memory the peculiarities of Indian life.

The great convulsion of 1857-58, while it necessarily retarded for a time all scientific and artistic operations, imparted a new interest to the country which had been the scene of, and to the people who had been the actors in these remarkable events. When, therefore, the pacification of India had been accomplished, the officers of the Indian Services, who had made themselves acquainted with the principles and practice of photography, encouraged and patronised by the Governor-General, went forth, and traversed the land in search of interesting subjects.

In this way the design soon exceeded the dimensions of a mere private collection; but Lord Canning felt that its importance was sufficient to warrant official sanction and development, and, therefore, placed the matter in the hands of Mr. Clive Bayley, his Home Secretary. Some of the more important results appear in the present work.

The photographs were produced without any definite plan, according to local and personal circumstances, by different officers; and copies of each plate were sent home to the Secretary of State for India in Council.

After a time, it appeared that a sufficient number of illustrations had been received from various parts of India, fairly to represent the different varieties of the Indian races. The negatives remained in India; but from the plates sent home it was easy to produce fresh negatives, the prints of which might be multiplied to any extent. The Secretary of State in Council sanctioned this operation, and the work was executed by Mr. W. Griggs, at the India Museum, under the superintendence of Dr. Forbes Watson.

In many cases some descriptive account of the tribes represented accompanied the photographs sent from India. These varied greatly in amplitude and value. But, on the whole, it may be said that they were sufficient to constitute the basis of the sketches contributed by Mr. John R. Melville, Colonel Meadows Taylor, Mr. Kaye, Dr. Forbes Watson, and others. These sketches do not profess to be more than mere rough notes, suggestive rather than exhaustive, and they make no claim to scientific research or philosophic investigation. But although the work does not aspire to scientific eminence, it is hoped that, in an ethnological point of view, it will not be without interest and value.

C. LAZARUS and Co. invite particular attention to their large stock of Billiard Tables, the Cushions of which are constructed on an entirely new principle—their lengthened Indian experience enabling them, with their knowledge of the variations of temperature, to manufacture them in such a manner as effectually to stand the tests of an Indian climate.

IMPORTANT TO MESSSES AND BILLIARD CLUBS THROUGHOUT INDIA, CHINA, BURMAH, CEYLON, AND THE STRAITS.—Consequent on the numerous applications that C. LAZARUS and Co. have lately had from parties residing at a distance from Calcutta to have their Billiard Tables re-cushioned on C. L. and Co.'s new principle, and as sending the Tables to Calcutta for that purpose is attended with great delay, occasioning much inconvenience, C. L. and Co. have been inclined to keep a stock of Cushions (on their new principle) always on hand, which can be fitted to any Table, the accurate length and width of the slate bed only being required.

Up-country Messes and Clubs can, by thus securing a spare set of Cushions, ensure the constant use of the Table, a desideratum C. L. and Co. are satisfied they will not be slow to appreciate, as the inconvenience hitherto felt by the Table being unavailable for play during such time as the old cushions are under repair, has been admittedly very great.

New Cushions fitted to old Tables on the new principle. Billiard and Pool Balls, Billiard Cloth, Cues, Billiard and Pool Marking Boards, Tips, Chalks, and every requisite for the Billiard Table.

Summary and Review.

Our latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, August 11; Agra, August 8; Calcutta, August 6; Madras, August 5.

The three last sittings of the Bombay Bank Commission were devoted to the examination of Mr. Premchund Roychund, the evil genius of the old Bank. Of course the hall was crowded to hear the unwilling confessions of so great a sinner. Sir C. Jackson invited him to save the Commission all needless trouble, and himself any consequent annoyance, by speaking out at once to the point. He took the plain hint, and spoke out accordingly in very good English. The gist of his evidence was to show that he had been virtual promoter of ever so many public companies, shares in which were allotted to his many friends, including several directors and the manager of the Bombay Bank, and that all parties obliged each other in a way altogether at variance with the rules of sound banking. It was at his instigation that Mr. Blair began lending lakhs of rupees to himself and others on "personal security," with or without the sanction of the Bank directors. Mr. Premchund could not say which of the directors knew of such a practice, although he himself was acquainted with them all. Premchund's father used to manage loans for people who did not care to ask Premchund himself. The latter was Mr. Bullock's chief adviser in all that concerned the Kalbadavie branch. In many cases shares were given in other names to applicants who had special reasons for hiding their own. It was "very usual," he says, to give out shares in other people's names. With regard to any joint transactions between himself or any of his friends and any of the Government directors, he repeated the profession of his entire ignorance, adding only that Mr. A. D. Robertson must have had some dealings of the sort with Mr. Cassels, because "they were staying together and doing business together." The report of the third day's examination is not given; but Premchund was dismissed with a warning that he might have to be called up again. The Commission adjourned till the 26th of August, to look over documents, and to prepare for entering on another subject of inquiry just pointed out to them by the Secretary of State. This must refer to the questions raised by the letter from the English shareholders, on which we have commented elsewhere.

Most of the Indian papers comment approvingly on Mr. Maine's Bill for suppressing European vagrancy, in general accordance with the views suggested by the Madras Government. Ever since the mutiny the nuisance caused by these loafers, stray convicts from Australia, deserted sailors, discharged soldiers, and beggared adventurers of all kinds, has steadily increased, until it became evident that something ought to be done towards putting it down. Accordingly Mr. Maine has brought in a Bill to the following effect:—Any European vagrant may be taken before the nearest magistrate, who after due inquiry may send him to a Government workhouse. These workhouses are to be furnished by the local governments, who will also find food for their temporary inmates at a fixed scale. "Stringent rules of labour and discipline" are to be enforced on the captured vagrants. Employment will be found for them, if possible; and those who reject it will be liable to a month's imprisonment. Any breach of workhouse rules may be punished by imprisonment for three months. A vagrant for whom no employment can be found within a certain time will be deported to England, his passage paid, and one month's subsistence-money allowed him on landing. If he shall have been taken up within a year of his landing under engagement to any person or company, the cost of his deportation may be recovered from those who brought him out. Shipmasters knowingly importing ticket-of-leave men shall be liable to a fine of four hundred rupees. Anyone begging alms in a threatening manner may be punished with a month's imprisonment for the first offence, two months' for the second, and three for any subsequent back-sliding. These are stern measures; but the occasion seems to justify them. What the Home Government will say to the whole Bill, is another question.

COLONEL PELLY's visit to Shiraz has been successful. He has patched up the dispute between Persia and Oman, alias Muscat, regarding the port of Bunder Abbas. The lease of that port and the adjacent strip of land had been granted for twenty years to the late Imam, Syud Saeed, and his posterity. When Syud Salim, the present Imam, succeeded to the throne, the Shah set the lease aside on the plea that it spoke of "sons" only, not grandsons. As the Persian word used for "posterity" means also "sons," there was a slight pretence of justice in the plea. The Imam however did not see it, and threatened to blockade the port. An appeal from the Shah to the Indian Government led to the interference of Colonel Pelly, who forbade the Imam from breaking the peace, and went to talk over the matter with the Governor of Fars at Shiraz. The result is that Bunder Abbas has been leased to the Imam for seven years, at 25,000 tomans a-year, or more than a third added to the former lease.

THE dispute between Bahrein and Katar has still to be adjusted. Some months ago the Chief of Bahrein, in concert with the Sheikh of Abu Thabi, made a raid among the pearl-fishers of Katar, carrying off many people and property valued at Rs. 500,000. This outrage on the peace of the Persian Gulf was left unpunished during the Abyssinian war. At last however, on the 28th of July, Colonel Pelly's hands were strengthened by the despatch of the Vigilant to the scene of disturbance. Meanwhile the affair has been complicated by the people of Katar, who, tired of waiting for our promised help and disappointed of aid from another quarter, attacked the enemy on their own account, and got defeated with great loss. We trust however that Colonel Pelly and the Vigilant will exact full redress from the Lord of Bahrein for his act of unprovoked piracy against Katar.

THERE is a pretty little quarrel about boundaries between two small States, Jeypore and Bustar, dependent on the Governor of Madras. Each of them owns land on the wrong side of the River Kholab; and Colonel Saxton, the Viceregal Commissioner, recommends a partial exchange of ground between the two chiefs, whose natural boundary would then be the river itself. To this the Madras Government demurs, both on general principles, and also on the plea that Jeypore has only just bought some land on the other side of the river. In such a case however a little pressure from above would do no harm, we should think, to anybody; and the popular irritation foreboded by the Madras Government would hardly be strong enough to justify a forbearance otherwise undesirable in the interests of India at large.

ACCORDING to the Calcutta papers Sir John Lawrence will hold no durbar in the Upper Provinces; but early in November he will open the railway from Delhi to Umballa on his march down to Calcutta, whence he will probably embark for England in January next. According to the Allahabad Pioneer however, his Excellency's movements were still "quite undetermined." Which authority are we to believe?

THE closing debate on the Oudh Rent Bill was published in the Gazette of August 1. It is chiefly remarkable for the rather overdone praise of Sir J. Lawrence by Sir W. Mansfield and Mr. Strachey. Sir John may indeed claim a substantial victory over the thorough-going friends of the Talookdars, in the matter of the final compromise; but the assumed existence of a general tenant-right in Oudh was itself disproved by the inquiries that ended in an arrangement which acknowledges the superior title in most instances of the talookdar. Nevertheless the Oudh Rent Bill must long form a noble monument of the present viceroy's practical statesmanship.

THE Bombay Government, being on its defence in the matter of the Transport Train for Abyssinia, has written a minute in its own vindication. This document shows in the first place that Sir R. Napier himself withdrew his proposal to place the transport train under the Quartermaster General; and secondly, that Sir S. Fitzgerald's dislike to reorganise the train on a military footing, at the very commencement of a campaign, from amongst people wholly unaccustomed to such a form of military service, was amply borne out by the results. Sir Seymour had "expressed a fear that the belief entertained by many officers well acquainted with the class referred to—viz., that we should not find them willing to take such a semi-military service, would be found to be well-grounded." He foresaw too what confusion would arise, in the absence of a ready-formed train, "when officers from India without men, and men from Egypt and elsewhere without officers, met for the first time" at Zoolla. Sir R. Napier's scheme however was adopted, and, in spite of its successful working in the end, was for some time a signal failure. Even at the last it was found necessary to revert to the old organisation of muccadums, so well-known in Bombay, with respect to that part of the train which was placed under Colonel Lucas at Zoolla. Under this arrangement "the men were found to be docile, intelligent, and contented;" this part of the train was remarkable for its efficiency; and Colonel Lucas felt sure that under the same system the same results would have ensued elsewhere. Sir S. Fitzgerald ends by appealing to the successful working of the Punjab Train, which was just as little military as that which he would have sent from Bombay.

In a late number of the Friend of India Mr. Marshman gives an interesting account of the starting of the first native newspaper under the auspices of the Serampore Mission. It was a great event in the history of British India, and the venture was made with fear and much misgiving of the temper in which it would be greeted by the Indian Government. Up to the renewal of the Charter in 1813 nothing had been done or allowed by the East India Company, in the way of enlightening the native mind. In vain had Wilberforce in 1793 proposed that schoolmasters should be sent out to India. In 1813 however it was decreed that a lakh of rupees a year should be henceforth set aside from the Indian revenues for the encouragement of literature and science among the natives. Next year Dr. Marshman, one of the Serampore missionaries, published his "Hints for the Establishment of Native Schools." This was followed by the opening of several schools and the publication of a series of school-books, which Mr. Marshman, the doctor's son, translated into Bengallie. Then came the ticklish question of starting a native newspaper. While English journals were still under a stern censorship, was it likely that a native one would be allowed to appear at all? In April 1818 however, Dr. Marshman felt his way with the Dig-Dursun, a monthly magazine, each number of which ended with a page of political news. This being received with favour in high quarters, Dr. Marshman two months later made up his mind to issue the first number of a newspaper, called the Sumachar Durpun, or Mirror of News. Dr. Carey, his helpmate, took such fright at the risks involved in this step that Dr. Marshman agreed to lay the first number of the new journal before Mr. Edmonstone and another member of the Government, and accept the result of their opinion. All went well however in that direction. The paper made its first appearance. Lord Hastings, writing from the North-West, highly commended the new undertaking, and afterwards allowed the paper to travel by post at a fourth of the usual charge. A copy of the "Mirror" was sent to all the great Calcutta Baboos, of whom Dwarkanath Tagore was the first to enrol himself a subscriber. Only a fortnight after the first appearance of the Durpun, another paper, called the Timirunasuk or "Destroyer of Darkness," was ushered into a brief existence. Not long afterwards the Sumachar Chundrika or "Moon of Intelligence," edited by a Brahmin of great intellect, humour, and literary power, maintained the cause of orthodox Hinduism against the Durpun, which, during the subsequent fight about the abolition of Suttee, gained no small advantage over its rival by being published in English and Bengallie. Both journals have since gone the way of so many others, but their descendants in the present day may be counted by hundreds. A correspondent of the Bombay Times reminds us that the first native newspaper in Bombay, the Bombay Sumachar, was published in 1822 in Guzerati. Ten years later it became a daily newspaper. After a time it was published twice a week, and finally it has gone back to a weekly issue.

WE have given elsewhere the new Furlough Rules for Indian chaplains, as they have been issued in India "subject to confirmation" by the home powers. We trust they will give as much satisfaction as those for the other services seem to have done.

"ANOTHER SUFFERER BY THE AMALGAMATION SCHEME" will find his letter in the proper place. It is perhaps too strongly worded for the occasion, and the pertinence of part of it is not quite clear. But the very loudness of the outcry in this instance indicates the warmth of the irritation that smoulders throughout the old Indian army, at the way their just claims to bonus compensation have hitherto been met.

THE NEW FURLOUGH RULES FOR CHAPLAINS.

Financial Department, Simla, July 31.—No. 1,491.—Subject to confirmation by the Right Hon. the Secretary of State, the Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to promulgate the following rules regarding leave of absence to chaplains, in supersession of all previous rules and orders on the subject. The rules will take effect from the 1st August, 1868:—

Definitions.—1. In the following rules "actual service" includes the period during which a chaplain is on duty, also periods spent on privilege and subsidiary leave, and periods during which a chaplain not on leave may be out of employ in India.

"Extraordinary leave" means any leave granted otherwise than under these rules.

"Long extraordinary leave" means extraordinary leave extending beyond a period of three months.

"Long furlough" means furlough extending beyond a period of three months.

"Salary" includes acting allowances.

A chaplain's "station" means that station to which he stands appointed, or such other place as the Government to which he is subordinate may determine.

CHAPTER I.—FURLOUGH.

2. The maximum period of furlough which can be granted to any chaplain during the whole period of his service is limited to six years.

3. Subject to the above limit, two years' furlough shall be placed to the credit of each chaplain after the completion of the first seven years of actual service, and one year's furlough after the completion of every additional four years of actual service.

4. Except under Rule 8, no furlough shall be taken until at credit under Rule 3.

5. Except under Rule 8 (b), furlough shall not be repeated until three years from the date of the last return from long extraordinary leave or long furlough. Leave taken under Chapters II. and III., but no other leave, shall be reckoned as part of the said three years.

6. The maximum terms of furlough to be taken at any one time shall be two years.

7. Except under Rule 8, a chaplain when on furlough shall be granted allowances at the rates noted below:—Archdeacon and the senior chaplain of the Church of Scotland, £600 per annum; senior chaplains, and senior chaplains of the Church of Scotland, £500 per annum; junior ditto, £350 per annum.

8. Under medical certificate—

(a.) Furlough may be taken on the above conditions without reference to the amount at credit under Rule 3.

(b.) Furlough for a period not exceeding one year may be taken, even if less than three years have elapsed since the last return from long extraordinary leave or long furlough. When on furlough under this clause, a chaplain shall be entitled to only the allowances noted below, unless he has completed six months' actual service since his last return from long extraordinary leave, or long furlough, and there remains some leave to his credit under Rule III., in which case a chaplain shall draw the full allowances mentioned in Rule VII., until that credit be exhausted, but in no case for a period exceeding one year:—Archdeacon and the senior chaplain of the Church of Scotland, £480 per annum; senior chaplain, £384; junior chaplain, £300.

(c.) Furlough taken without medical certificate or under clause (a) of this rule may be extended beyond two years for a period not exceeding one year. During the period of extension of furlough beyond two years under this clause, a chaplain shall be entitled to the allowances mentioned in the margin of Rule VII. (b).

9. Furlough taken or extended under Rule VIII. shall be subject to the provision of Rule II.

10. Furlough taken in India shall be reckoned from the date of the chaplain quitting his station to the date of his return thereto. Furlough taken out of India shall be reckoned from the date of embarkation to the date of return.

In the event of the furlough being taken partly in India and partly out of India, the commencement and termination of the furlough shall be determined by the above rules, according as the furlough begins or ends in or out of India.

11. For the interval elapsing between departure from his station and the commencement of furlough, and between the termination of furlough and the re-arrival at his station, a chaplain shall be allowed subsidiary leave not ordinarily exceeding in each case thirty days. During those periods his allowances shall be the same as during the furlough to which the said leave is subsidiary.

12. Subject to the exigencies of the service, both as regards the number of furloughs available at any one time, and as regards individual applications, of which exigencies the Government of India, Madras, or Bombay, as the case may be, shall be exclusively the judge, furloughs shall be granted under those rules.

13. All applications for furlough under medical certificate, in accordance with these rules, shall be granted without restriction.

14. If, owing to the exigencies of the service, it may be necessary to place any limit on the number of chaplains who may be absent on furlough at the same time, applications not supported by medical certificate shall be granted in the following order:—

The applicant to whose credit the greatest amount of furlough remains under Rule 3 shall have the preference.

If two or more applicants are on an equality in this respect, the preference shall be given to the applicant whose actual service in India is longest, reckoning, in the case of a chaplain who has not taken long extraordinary leave, or long furlough, from the date of his arrival in India, and in the case of a chaplain who has taken long extraordinary leave or long furlough from the date of his last return from such leave or furlough.

If two or more applicants are equal in both respects, the preference shall be given to the senior in the gradation list.

CHAPTER II.—PRIVILEGE LEAVE.

15. Subject to the exigencies of the State, a chaplain who has completed five months' continuous duty may take privilege leave for one month without deduction from his salary or house-rent, but with loss of conveyance and jail allowances.

16. In the same manner, and under the same conditions, two or three months' privilege leave may be taken when a chaplain has completed continuous duty of ten months and fifteen months respectively.

17. If a chaplain shall overstay his privilege leave, he shall forfeit all salary during the time of his remaining so absent.

CHAPTER III.—SPECIAL LEAVE.

18. Special leave on urgent private affairs may be granted, at the discretion of the Government, for a period not exceeding six months. In respect of allowances to be drawn during the leave and of subsidiary leave, the conditions of special leave shall be the same as those prescribed for furlough under Rules 7 and 11.

19. Rule 17 shall, mutatis mutandis, apply to a chaplain overstaying special leave.

20. Special leave may be repeated without allowances after intervals of at least six years' actual service.

CHAPTER IV.—GENERAL.

21. Applications for leave shall in all cases be submitted in such manner as the Governor-general of India in Council may from time to time prescribe.

22. Furlough, privilege leave, and special leave shall not be taken as such in continuation of each other; but if a chaplain absent on one of these classes of leave be allowed to change it for another, the whole period of his absence shall be held to be under the class of leave for which it was changed.

23. Subject to considerations of State, there shall be no restriction as to the places where a chaplain may reside when on leave.

24. Leave allowance shall be payable monthly if payment is taken in India, and quarterly if payment is taken in England. When furlough is taken in England an advance of the first quarter's allowance may be made in India; such advance shall not be recoverable in case of death.

25. The term of residence qualifying for pension shall be, in the case of chaplains appointed before January 11, 1854, fifteen years, and in the case of chaplains appointed on or after that date, seventeen years; but no leave, except privilege leave and subsidiary leave, shall count as residence.

26. The term of service qualifying for pension shall be, in the case of chaplains appointed before January 11, 1854, eighteen years, and in the case of chaplains appointed on or after that date, twenty years. Leave of absence in India taken prior to August 25, 1864, shall count as service for pension, and shall not be reckoned as furlough under these rules.

THE LATE ABYSSINIAN CAMPAIGN.—DESPATCHES TO THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL OF INDIA, AND THE GOVERNORS OF MADRAS AND BOMBAY.

July 30.—H.E. the Viceroy and Gov. gen. in Council has much satisfaction in directing the publication of the following despatches from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India, communicating to the Government of India, and to the Governments of Madras and Bombay, and to H.E. Lieut. gen. Sir Robert Napier, G.C.B., G.C.S.I., the expression of H.M.'s most gracious acknowledgment of the services rendered by the commander and the troops during the recent campaign in Abyssinia, as well as by the several Governments, H.E. the C. in C. in India, and the various authorities employed in equipping and despatching the forces sent from India.

H.E. the C. in C. in India is requested to be good enough to cause the despatch to the Govt. of India to be read at the head of every garrison or body of troops in the Bengal Presidency.

India-office, London, July 3, 1868.

To H.E. the Right Hon. the Gov. gen. for India in Council.

Sir,—Intelligence of the complete and most satisfactory termination of the campaign in Abyssinia having been received and submitted to her Majesty, I am commanded to convey to your Excellency's Government the deep sense which her Majesty entertains of the service which has been rendered to the Empire by the Government and army of India.

2. The highly efficient manner in which the force was organised, equipped, and forwarded to the seat of operations, and the gallantry, perseverance, and good discipline exhibited by the troops when in the field have contributed to the attainment of a success of no ordinary character.

3. It is with special gratification that I find myself charged with the duty of conveying through your Excellency her Majesty's thanks to the gallant army of India, and I am commanded to desire that those thanks may be communicated in the most public manner to the entire service.

4. I have separately addressed the Governments of Madras and Bombay on the share which the armies of those Presidencies have borne in the campaign; and I take occasion to request your Excellency to express to the Commander-in-Chief in India and to the army of Bengal the high sense entertained by her Majesty of the very efficient manner in which the Bengal Contingent was equipped and despatched to the Red Sea.

5. I take this opportunity of forwarding to your Excellency a copy of a letter, dated the 1st inst., which, in accordance with the commands of her Majesty, I have addressed to Lieut.-general Sir Robert Napier on the termination of the operations of the Abyssinian Expeditionary Force.—I have, &c., (Signed) STAFFORD H. NORTHCOTE.

From the Right Hon. Sir Stafford H. Northcote, H.M.'s Secretary of State for India, to H.E. the Right Hon. the Governor in Council, Fort St. George, Military, No. 70, dated July 3, 1868.

I transmit for the information of your lordship's Government a copy of a despatch, No. 233, which, in accordance with the commands of her Majesty, I have this day addressed to the Governor general in Council, conveying to the Government and the army of India the thanks of her Majesty for the services rendered by them in the conduct of the operations in Abyssinia, the termination of which, in the most satisfactory manner, has been recently reported to H.M.'s Government.

2. In making this communication I take the opportunity of conveying to your lordship the hearty thanks of H.M.'s Government for the promptitude with which the demands of the Governor general in Council and of the Government of Bombay were met by the Madras Government, and for the cordial spirit of co-operation evinced by the several departments concerned in carrying your lordships instructions into effect.

3. I especially desire to record the high sense which H.M.'s Government entertain of the zeal and alacrity displayed in the despatch of the detachment of the Madras sappers and miners to take part in the expedition, and of the excellent services rendered by that body of men during the campaign, in the course of which they well maintained the high reputation of the Madras army, no less than of the distinguished corps which they represented.

From the Right Hon. Sir Stafford H. Northcote, her Majesty's Secretary of State for India, to his Excellency the Right Hon. the Governor in Council, Bombay.—(Military), No. 129, dated July 3, 1868.

I transmit, for the information of your Excellency in Council, a copy of a despatch [No. 233] which I have this day addressed, by her Majesty's commands, to the Government of India, on receiving the intelligence of the complete and most satisfactory termination of the campaign in Abyssinia.

2. In doing so, I take the opportunity of tendering to your Excellency the cordial thanks of H.M.'s Government for the exertions on the part of the Government of Bombay which have so largely contributed to this important result.

3. The energetic and able measures taken by you on the receipt of the instructions which I had the honour to communicate to you in my several telegraphic messages of the 1st, 13th, and 14th of August last, and in my secret despatch of the 16th of the same month, rendered it possible for the Expeditionary Force to take the field in sufficient time to accomplish the object of the campaign within the season during which active military operations could be carried on in Abyssinia.

4. I notice that, in your Excellency's telegraphic message of the 29th July, you stated, in answer to a question which I had addressed to you, that "the operations ought to commence by January in order to be finished in one season," and that you "could have the force ready in time, provided only that you could obtain animals, which should be collected immediately."

5. The authority to collect transport animals was conveyed to you by my telegraphic message of the 1st August, and the result was that Sir Robert Napier was enabled to land at Zoulla, and to assume the command of the Expeditionary Force on the 3rd of January.

6. The precision with which the plans laid for the conduct of the Expedition were carried into execution has been throughout one of its most remarkable characteristics.

7. H.M.'s Government have not failed to notice and to appreciate your Excellency's personal and indefatigable exertions in the conduct of these preparations. They desire also to acknowledge the great zeal and efficiency displayed by the several departments in carrying out the instructions of your Excellency's Government, and of the admirable behaviour of the troops of the Bombay Presidency, both European and Native.

[Here follows the complimentary despatch from the Right Hon. Sir Stafford H. Northcote, H.M.'s Sec. of State for India to H.E. Lieut. gen. Sir Robert Napier, No. 3,712a, dated July 1, 1868, which has already appeared in the Mail.]

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

WEDNESDAY, September 9, 1868.

THE OLD BANK OF BOMBAY.

THE shareholders of the late Bank of Bombay are determined to keep their grievances alive and stirring. They have written to the Under-Secretary of State for India a rather peremptory letter, reproaching Sir S. Northcote with having prejudged their claims by repudiating the liability of the Indian Government to make them good. Being willing however "to accept that statement as intended to be applicable only to existing circumstances," they set before him a few "heads of inquiry, on which full information is essential." The heads are as follow:—First, the connection between any of the directors and the transactions that led to the ultimate loss. Secondly, a full and detailed account of the alteration in the Bank Charter; who proposed it, for what reasons, by whom it was considered, and when adopted? How did the alterations become law? Who is responsible? Thirdly, a careful scrutiny into the use made of the altered powers, with reference to past or future transactions, and to the persons who sanctioned the misuse of those powers. Fourthly, how much did the Government officers in Bombay or Calcutta know of the Bank's affairs?

A copy of this letter has been forwarded by the India-office to Bombay to be laid before the Commission of Inquiry. Meanwhile the letter has been published in company with a lengthier document, furnished by "a gentleman of considerable public and legal experience." The writer declares that a careful perusal of the Blue-book on the Bombay Bank affairs has "entirely confirmed" his first impression as to the responsibility of the Indian Government for the losses sustained by the shareholders of the Bank. This view is shown not to rest so much on the known connection between the Government and the Bank, as on the fact of the former's sanctioning that alteration in the Bank Charter, "which alone enabled the directors to ruin the Bank." Hoc fonte derivata clades: from the introduction of one fatal clause in the Bank Charter sprang all the ensuing mischiefs. That the clause found its way there by accident is the excuse put in by the Bombay Government; but, as the writer goes on to show, the excuse itself is at variance with known facts, which tend to show that the Bombay Government must have had some inkling of the changes made in the wording of the new Charter.

It is certainly curious that Sir C. Wood's letter of June, 1865, pointing out the difference between the Charter of the Bombay Bank and those of the Bengal and Madras Banks, should have drawn forth no clear and pertinent reply from Bombay. His second letter of September, in the same year, complained still more pointedly of the difference in question, as a thing that ought not to be. Not a word however of explanation came from Bombay, until Lord Cranborne's stern demand for further knowledge reached the Government in the beginning of 1867.

Even then no real explanation was given, nor has any been given from that day to this. But a lengthy and involved "summary," appended to a letter from Mr. A. D. Robertson, the Government Director, who took charge of the Bill for the renewal of the Charter, tries to make out that nobody except the draftsman knew anything about the origin of the fatal clause; that the Government never meant to grant nor the Directors to ask for the powers therein contained; and that, if the Government had known what was happening, they would never have let the clause pass.

Mr. Robertson, for his part, declares that the words pointed out by Lord Cranborne attracted no attention at the time, and must have "crept into the Bill" by sheer inadvertence, through "the phraseology of the English Joint-stock Companies Act having been followed in the preparation of the draft." And yet, according to the Summary itself, Mr. Robertson at first objected to using the phraseology of that same Act, and sent the directors a copy of the draft, "with its deviations from the Bengal Charter marked upon it." Strange that both then, and afterwards in speaking before the Legislative Council on the Bill for sanctioning the new Charter, he should have utterly overlooked the more than verbal difference between the Bengal and Bombay Charters, which ought to have stared him in the face! Nor is it less surprising that the Bombay Government should plead total ignorance of a clause which, by their own admission, meant "a radical change in the business programme of the Bank."

"There is nothing on record to show that" they "were aware" of the change made from the original draft of the new Charter. Granted for the moment; but even so, thinks the eminent jurist above-mentioned, the liability of the Government seems to be put "beyond question." By their own showing, they "omitted the plain duty of considering the terms of the charter before it was passed," and must therefore be held responsible for what ensued from "their gross neglect of simple and ordinary precautions." And this is the unsought opinion not of a partial friend or an unskilled lawyer, but of an authority of acknowledged weight among his brethren. Possibly it may prove to be doubtful law; but anyone can see that it is sound justice.

But what if this explanation does not explain the whole truth? Has the Bombay Government ever made careful inquiry into the matter? The writer of the opinion maintains that the inquiry was steadily shirked, and that the mischievous words inserted in the amended draft of the charter were not inserted by mistake. There is nothing, he says, in the English Joint-Stock Act which could account for the alleged mistake. A comparison of the original with the amended draft shows that the words could not have "crept in" by mere inadvertence; for a subsequent clause in the second draft repeats and amplifies the provisions regarding advances on the shares of "other public companies in India." Somebody therefore must have known what all this really meant. At a meeting of the shareholders in August, 1865, Mr. Hannay, one of the commercial directors, declared that the Act of 1863 was "carefully considered at the Council Board and by Special Committees, and the result was the passing of it without restrictions as to amount, and with permission, when deemed advisable, to advance on shares in public companies." The same speaker afterwards declared that Mr. Robertson's brother directors had found him "exceedingly obstructive, not only in objecting to some clauses now in the Bill, but also to some others which, but for him, might have been there." Here at any rate is a flat contradiction to the defence made both by Mr. Robertson and the Bombay Government. Where the truth lies, time will doubtless make clear. Meanwhile the impartial reader will draw his own conclusions; will perceive among other things that the Bombay Government in 1857 had forgotten Mr. Hannay's speech of 1865. What a misfortune it is to have a bad memory, when things that you wish forgotten turn up to shame you at inconvenient times!

"I cannot thread my way through these unhappy contradictions. The impression produced on my own mind—amounting indeed to conviction—is that the charter could not have been inadvertently, and was designedly altered." So says the author of the legal opinion. It is certainly very hard to believe that some two millions were squandered in as many years, while the Government and the Government directors continued in happy ignorance of the primary excuses for all that waste. There are limits to the faith of the most credulous. If any rational being still supposes that the Bombay Government in 1865 had no idea of the mischief sanctioned by themselves in 1863, we can only regard him as another wonder of the world.

It may still however be a question how far the Government's liability rests on the mere passing of an improper Act. Was the clause that caused so much mischief in itself an illegal clause? Be that as it may however, the way in which the Bill was hurried through Council, without sufficient notice given to the shareholders, must materially strengthen the claim against the Government. And there can, we imagine, be no doubt whatever that the Government is strictly liable, through the negligence of its representatives in the Bank, for all loans advanced on bad or no security in the teeth of the express provisions in the Bank Charter.

One more plea in behalf of the shareholders ought not to be overlooked. If it be true that the Government kept the Bank going, by advances from the public treasury, for six months after the bulk of shareholders had urged the immediate winding-up of an insolvent concern, the responsibility for such a step must in fairness remain with those who thus assumed it.

ENGLISH SETTLEMENTS IN INDIA.

IF it were possible for Englishmen to colonise India as they have colonised the New World and are fast colonising Australasia, one great source of anxiety to English statesmen would speedily be done away. The question of our hold on British India could then be safely trusted to solve itself. A strong garrison of British settlers would assure the continuance of British rule in those broad regions, whatever effects it might have in checking the political progress of the natives themselves. One salient difficulty would be lifted out of the way, to be replaced by others ultimately perhaps as great, but of little account in the immediate future. Visions of India colonised and made fruitful to almost any extent by British immigrants have always filled the minds of speculative Englishmen, looking far away to the beautiful distances that rise beyond the less tempting region of demonstrable facts. It is always a pity to spoil such dreams of a possible future by reference to past and present facts; but somehow the results of a hundred years' dominion have left those dreams as far from any approach towards fulfilment as when they were first imagined. Many more Englishmen indeed now go out to India; but of those who make that country their home, the number at this moment is probably less than ever. No Englishman of the third generation has yet grown up there, and no mixed race of Anglo-Indians has hitherto struck its roots in that soil, as mixed races seem to have done in the West Indies and in America. The rich Anglo-Saxon blood—to use a term popularly understood—has hitherto shown no signs of true vitality even in the genial air of the Himalayas.

Far be it from us however to throw cold water on dreams which may yet prove no wilder than hundreds of others, that have grown with the process of the suns into splendid realities. Nature works very slowly as a rule, forming a continent at the rate of a few feet a year, and continuing the same types of men and animals unchanged through fifty centuries at the least. It is not impossible, let us say, that India may be colonised by Englishmen a thousand years hence. It is not very unlikely that long before that time British colonies may have really taken root in the many ranges of hills that fill no inconsiderable space in the map of British India. Even in the plains of Upper India, from Umballa to Sealkote, our countrymen may find it possible some day to live and multiply. It is only indeed of late years that English enterprise has turned itself freely and intelligently to seeking for the golden apples of the Indian Hesperides; and who knows what may come of the new fields already opened to it in the production of cotton, tea, silk, and coffee, in the building of railways, bridges, docks, in the digging of canals, and so forth? Even if India should never become the abiding home of English families, it may still be made the standing camp of an endless succession of British workers devoting the best years of their lives to the twofold labour of developing its resources, and growing rich enough to end their days comfortably at home. Statesmen like Lord William Bentinck and Lord Metcalfe hoped much from the future increase of British settlers in India; and in some such way as this, if in no other, their hopes may yet be realised to the full.

All things considered then, we are ready to go a long way with the views put forth in Dr. Graham's pamphlet on the Development of India's Resources by European Settlers.* The author of this little work, republished mainly from his contributions to a Scotch newspaper, spent a good part of his life in India, and devoted his spare time to inquiries bearing on the question which he has here discussed with a due admixture of zeal and practical knowledge. Discreetly confining himself to the Indian hill-ranges, he attempts to show how easily European colonies could live and flourish in the temperate air of regions now scantily peopled, but rich in all the possibilities of almost boundless development under the nursing care of English enterprise. Arguing from what has already been done by that means in spots like Kangra, Kumaon, Darjeeling, and in the valley of the Brahmaputra, Dr. Graham fairly enough infers the feasibility of founding permanent colonies in all parts of the Indian hills. There are the Khasia Hills, for instance, to the south of Assam and north of Sylhet, which divide the mountain land of the Garrows on the west from that of the Nagas to the east. These hills range in height from 4,500 to 6,500 feet above the sea-level. Their tops form so many tablelands, some of them overlooking views of marvellous compass, framed in by the snow-capped Himalayas. Their steep sides are thickly covered with everlasting verdure. The rainfall, heavy at Cherrapoonjee on one of the southern spurs, becomes in other places little heavier than that of a wet English summer; and the rain runs off so quickly that no harm to one's health or comfort need be feared. Some English officers lived through a monsoon here in tents. In the hottest part of the year the temperature of these hills averages twenty degrees less than the plains of Bengal; the mean temperature of Cherrapoonjee being about sixteen degrees below that of Calcutta. Coal, lime, iron, and other minerals abound here; potatoes may be had for the digging of them; fruits of all kinds grow profusely; rich pastures support fine cattle; grain is plentiful, and broad belts of valuable forest cover the hill-sides. Of water also there is no lack. It is altogether a pleasant, fertile, and healthy land, in which Englishmen could live and labour out of doors with as much impunity as in any part of Australia. So at least say those, including Dr. Hooker, who know it best.

The Khasiahs themselves are a wild aboriginal race of Tartar affinities, sturdy and honest like most of the hill-men on that side of India; good sportsmen, not averse from labour, and thoroughly English in their carnivorous habits. They look down on the Bengalees of the plain, and are excellent friends with the English who live among them. With proper inducements to settle here, a colony of Englishmen, hardy, intelligent, sober, and inured to manual toil, might speedily rival the progress already made by their fellow-workers in other colonial fields.

What has been said in favour of the Khasiah Hills applies with equal pertinence to the tea-growing ranges of Cachar and to the coffee-bearing Nilgherries of Southern India; with still greater pertinence to the whole length of the Himalayas, from Darjeeling up to Kangra. The last-named district is already famous for its excellent tea, the supply of which, for want of more workmen, cannot keep pace with the demand. An importation of English spinners and English looms would soon make this valley a flourishing mart for the manufacture of its native wools. In Kemaon again, besides its well-established trade in tea, a wide field of usefulness lies open, in its mines of the richest iron, in its immense forests of pine and fir best fitted for smelting the iron, in its beds of stone, slate, and gypsum, and in the abundance of its water-supply. The climate of these districts must be better suited on the whole to the average Briton than the moister and warmer air of the Khasiah Hills. Here at any rate, as in the Nilgherries, the white man may work out of doors all day, or the greater part of it, the whole year round. To Kangra and Kemaon therefore Dr. Graham would first direct the stream of British immigration. Chumba also, lying north of Kangra, might become the centre of a busy trade in silk.

All this sounds encouraging enough, and we should like to see the experiment of thus colonising parts of India fairly tried. But how about the question of manual labour? There, we fear, lies the rub. Colonel Blair Reid, writing about Chumba, holds that Europeans could "never compete with the natives in mere manual labour," however well it might pay them to take up land and employ natives to cultivate it for them. You will never get Englishmen to work in India for wages that would suffice the native. Even in the most thinly peopled districts it would be cheaper to import native workmen from a distance than to hire half as many Europeans on the spot. We much fear that all the inducements in the world, including a free grant of land to each emigrant, would tempt very few English workmen to leave their own land, or give up the seeming certainty of a prosperous career in America or Australia, for the chance of founding new homes for their families in any part of British India. Men of some capital and energy will doubtless go thither in ever-increasing numbers, as employers of labour and pioneers of new roads to wealth. Overseers, foremen, schoolmasters, gardeners, with a sprinkling of trained artisans and farm-labourers, will always find their account in swelling the tide of emigration to the still fruitful East. But the founding of genuine settlements in our Indian highlands must still, we fear, be reckoned among the problems of a distant future.

BONUS COMPENSATION.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—Permit me to assure you that the case to which you have called attention in your last issue—scandalous and inexplicable as it appears to be—is not by any means an exceptional one. I happen to know of several officers, whose claims have been rejected off hand by the Bengal Compensation Committee, upon equally unjust and frivolous grounds; and my own treatment at their hands has been little less irrational and outrageous. The proposals contained in your article for setting this question at rest commend themselves by their moderation to the notice of Sir Stafford Northcote, who can hardly be indifferent to the existence of the wide-spread feeling of dissatisfaction which exists upon this matter. Like a vast number of military men, I am by birth and association a Conservative, and have hitherto viewed with dismay the advance in this country of principles and doctrines opposed to those of that party: but the jobbery and corruption which has of late seemed to prevail—the indifference of the Government to all complaints, which they are not forced by self-interest to consider, have caused me somewhat to modify my views, and to ask seriously whether reform is not after all imperatively needed, and whether a new Parliament, such as that we are about to have, is not absolutely necessary to purge the avenues of justice from the time-honoured obstructions which now encumber them, and to render access to the authorities less difficult to applicants for redress than at present.

With regard to this particular question, which has been so long before the public, that the public must be quite sick of hearing about it, nothing but a grinding sense of injustice and oppression, and the indignation consequent thereon, could, I am quite sure, induce a body of English gentlemen such as those of the late Indian army, to persistently air their grievances in the public press, and if their cries, instead of ceasing, rather increase in volume, it can be accounted for by the fact that no notice is taken of them.

I sincerely hope that ere it hands over the reins of Government the present ministry will make some concession, however slight, in this matter. The knowledge that it acknowledged the hardships which you have exposed, and was prepared to consider the matter, and to afford some relief to however limited an extent, would evidence that it was not deaf, after all, to well founded applications for redress, and would allay the irritation which not unreasonably now exists.—I am, Sir, yours obediently,

THE CASE OF CAPTAIN CAMERON.

The Madras Times allows that theoretically there can be no doubt that an officer whom two brother officers affirm to have been drunk on duty, who disturbs the peace of a club, to which he does not belong, while drunk on duty, and who omits to visit an important guard, and yet reports that he has visited it, has placed himself in a very difficult position to defend. But when the case comes to be looked at in a less stringent way, the gravity of the colours tones down considerably. Supposing he were drunk, there was, at any rate, conflicting testimony on the point, while it was pretty evident that his intoxication must have ensued upon very moderate potions. Suppose he did neglect the Arsenal guard, there is nothing to show that the neglect was in any degree wilful; or that he had habitually neglected such matters. Supposing he had entered the club uninvited in search of acquaintances, the practice is said to be common enough in Poona, while of the disturbance complained, the accounts are so extremely vague that it is not easy to gather that the disturbance in question was very much outside the bounds of ordinary conviviality. As to the fourth charge, it fell to the ground. Yet Sir William Mansfield, who had the option, confirms the sentence, which the Court, on the proving of the first charge, had no option whatever in the necessity of passing. In the face of the Commander-in-Chief in India's late clemency towards one or two offenders, on a much higher scale than Captain Cameron (whose chief fault seems to have been a weak thoughtlessness), a severe reprimand one would have supposed sufficient to have met his offence. One is almost disposed to suspect that, as with a colony of rooks, of which one must be shot to scare the rest, the turning point in the tide of clemency had been reached, and the next case which arose was doomed to be made an example of, and Captain Cameron being that one, thus met with an inelastic application of the strictest letter of the law. We do not for a moment say that the letter has not met with the strictest legal justice; but we do say that we think that he has been exceedingly unfortunate.

EXCESSIVE CROWING.

The Madras Times observes that General George Pollock, who commanded the British army that recovered the British captives in Afghanistan in 1841, was rewarded with the Grand Cross of the Bath, £1,000 per annum, and a gala sword. But he did more than merely recover those captives, he succeeded in vindicating the much tarnished honour of the British army, and in restoring British prestige on both sides of the Indus. It would be difficult to find a precedent for such an annihilation of a British force as that recorded by Lady Sale. If the present excitement at home about the Abyssinian Expedition is reasonable, what might not have been done in honour of a force that reoccupied Cabul after such a disaster? A precedent has been now established which may be very inconvenient some day. There will be a reaction of public opinion at home, and then Abyssinian heroes will be at a cruel discount. Nelson declared that "England expects each man to do his duty;" but it would almost seem that now-a-days she expects no such thing, and is so surprised at his doing it that she then abandons herself to boundless self-gratulation. It surely is no rare thing for British soldiers to try, like Sir Henry Lawrence, to do their duty. "What are you shouting for?" asked a London democrat of another disciple of Beales in Trafalgar-square the other day, on the occasion of a Reform demonstration. "I'm sure I don't know," said the other, "but everyone else shouts." History will not shout; it will record that the Abyssinian Expedition was highly creditable to Sir Robert Napier's generalship, but it will not for one moment rank the campaign with any of the others in which the general has seen such active service. The fact is that the London press, almost unanimously, deprecated the expedition being sent, then employed endless arguments to prove that it would result in signal ruin, then exulted over failure here and failure there, and when, despite its croakings, all the results aimed at were gloriously achieved, it veered round and started on the other tack, and is now as unduly jubilant as it was a few weeks ago unduly alarmed. Yet in ten years, if not much earlier, if war breaks out in Europe, the expedition will be virtually forgotten, save by those who took part in it. Had we had a good stand up fight, man against man, rifle against rifle, steel gun against steel gun, science against science, and had we come off victors, we might well be proud; but it is surely no surprising thing to have thrashed a foe so little worthy of our steel as the Abyssinians.

THE STAR OF INDIA.

The Times of India is very doubtful whether the institution of the Star of India afforded a legitimate means of bestowing honorary distinction upon men for service rendered out of India. We confess that we are extremely jealous of the integrity of this Indian order. It was instituted, on the recommendation of Lord Canning, for the purpose of rewarding men who had done good service in, or to India; and chiefly, we apprehend, for those who had by acts of beneficence contributed to the prosperity of the country, and to the welfare of the people of India. Certainly, it was not intended to be a military order, and its application was expressly confined to services rendered "in" or "to" India. The statutes appear to be very distinct and authoritative upon these points. The first class, or grand commandership of the order, may be given to anyone who has rendered good service to India, but the second and third classes are open only to those who have rendered such service in India. Now this Abyssinian expedition may have been beneficial to India, but by no forced construction can it be considered service in India. So it would seem that according to the statute, as it originally existed, no K.C.S.I. or C.S.I. could be created, on account of this Abyssinian service. Of course, however, the Queen can alter the statute by a stroke of the pen, can cause the word in to appear henceforth as to, or make any other emendations that her Majesty may think fit to decree. The question then is whether it is desirable to make these alterations. We have said that the first-class of the order may be given for eminent services to India. The object of this, perhaps, was to include a Secretary of State for India, who might be a very fit recipient of the decoration, without ever having been in India at all. But it need not be said that there may be others besides Secretaries of State who may also render good service to India, whilst residing in other parts of the world. We see no good reason for the distinction, and the only objection that can be offered to the general substitution of the word to, is that it is capable of such latitude of construction as may lead to abuse. On the whole, however, it may be said that the alteration is one which will not radically affect the constitution of the order, and, therefore, it might be decreed without danger. But we should be sorry to see any greater extension of the margin. It will be a mistake for the Star of India to become anything but a strictly Indian order. The fear which we entertain is that the Horse Guards will make a convenience of it. Now, we are afraid we cannot altogether deny that, in the eyes of the authorities at home, though certainly not in those of the Indian statesmen who recommended it, the Star of India was established for the purpose of "relieving the Bath;" and there have certainly been some recent indications that his Royal Highness the Commander-in-Chief is disposed to convert it to such uses. We have seen added to the list the names of men who doubtless have done good service of a purely military character, and who would, in all probability, have got the Bath, if the Star of India had not been instituted. Military men would much rather receive the Bath than the Star of India, and whenever the latter is given to a soldier in preference to the former, the recipient himself is disappointed, while there are numbers of officers, civil or political, who consider that such grants of the Star of India are palpable misappropriations.

STATION TALK.

ALLAHABAD, August 3.—It is extremely difficult to send you any news from this station at present. We are all so quiet, and what with the heat and prickly heat, but few are inclined to move about. However, I got a few items yesterday, which I communicate, but do not vouch for their accuracy. Mr. M. H. Court, our able and well-liked Commissioner, who felt much his supersession by Mr. Reid, is, I hear, to go into the Board. It is said Mr. Simson succeeds him, and Mr. Reid, Mr. Simson. If these arrangements do take place no one can grumble. The Commissioner's office will be delighted to get such a worthy successor to Mr. Court, who is as much liked as Mr. Simson, and the secretariat will fling up their hats at getting Mr. Reid, who is as good as Mr. Simson, and that is saying a great deal. I hear also that Mr. Robertson, the able junior secretary, goes on privilege leave for three months, in October, and after that goes on leave to Europe. I suppose he will be succeeded by Mr. Henvey, the under secretary, who will be replaced, it is said, by Mr. D. M. Smeaton, a very promising young officer. I believe that sanction has, or is soon to come, giving four uncovenanted deputy collectors Rs. 800 a month. Of the fortunate four I can, I believe, mention Kooer Lutchmun Pershed and Mr. G. G. Billings, of Meerut, as two of the successful men. The Lieutenant-governor, it is said, leaves Nynce Tal in September, for Mussoorie, via the hill route. Sir William's rule seems to have had a galvanising effect on some, for never were reports, &c., sent in with such punctuality.

SAUGOR, July 30.—Captain Richardes, barrack master of this station, proceeded yesterday, on leave of absence, on medical certificate, vid Bombay, to England. He was in a very delicate state of health, and it was with great difficulty that he could leave the station, from which his departure is deeply regretted by many. Fresh cases of cholera are occurring daily in the city, but through the strenuous exertions of the medical authorities and the free use of medicines, no more deaths have taken place. The monsoon of this year appears to be of a very different character to those of preceding years; the rains have hitherto been mere showers, and this day has broke forth with a bright sun and an unclouded sky like a spring day in England after a light shower. The hospital which is being built on the post-office road promises to be a magnificent building, and it is being gradually extended and commences to show its giant proportions; the clink of the mason's hammer is going incessantly during the day, and crowds of natives, women, and little children are employed at high rates of wages, which must be of great benefit to them at this season of the year, when grain is so very high in price. The new barracks are also progressing rapidly, and much credit is, I think, due to the executive engineer, Captain Tabor, for his indefatigable exertions on these buildings. He is to be seen every day at the works, guiding, instructing, and supervising the rearing up of these massive structures, which, when completed, will be without doubt the best and most comfortable barracks in India. When barracks such as these are built throughout India, changes of stations of regiments should be discontinued, and a great saving to Government and to the men themselves would be the result, for no soldier would desire to leave such comfortable quarters where he has his sleeping and bath-rooms on the upper story, and dining-rooms, recreation-rooms, library, and reading-room on the ground floor—in fact, every comfort which any soldier could desire. Since writing the above, I hear that more cases of cholera have occurred, and one has proved fatal. A new charitable dispensary is being built here from local funds, under the supervision of the "darogah," who was formerly in the Public Works Department, and when completed it will be an ornament to the city. It is built on the banks of the lake, and will be a very picturesque building.

BERHAMPORE, August 1.—Just a week ago I had the good luck to witness the splendid phenomenon which crossed our heavens at half-past eight P.M. precisely. I believe I was the only European in this station who saw it. I do not call it a "meteor," it was rather a gigantic specimen of the ignis fatuus type; its course S.S. by W. to N.N.E. by accurate observation, time about thirty or forty seconds in transit; course, a segment of the hemisphere. Cholera has been haunting our European troops and our bazaars for some weeks past. The mysterious visitor took the apparent route of all our putrid marshes, fishy jheels, and sickly lowlands. Sheet lightning was very prevalent all through the evening from sunset, and one of these flashes of electricity appeared to me the igniting power; then, a flaming body as large as the sun and yielding nearly as much light, rushed rapidly through space, leaving scattered fiery embers in its track (just like the incandescent cinders from a railway engine by night); towards the final disappearance, the flame was of the most indescribably splendid blue and violet hues, suddenly subsiding without crepitation or any report into the darkness of night! (I could read diamond print while it lasted!) I consider it to have been a stream of phosphorated hydrogen gas, exploded by electricity. I believe I can produce a miniature similitude from a bladder of that gaseous compound. I would not have missed this rare phenomenon for any exchange whatever. "Wills-o'-the-wisp," or "ignis fatui"

I have seen by dozens; they were all dwarfs in comparison to this giant.—Delhi Gazette Correspondent.

Yates, to remain at Simla, from July 11 to Aug. 10.

THE CROPS IN THE NORTH-WEST.—Since the commencement of the first fall of rain in the North-Western Provinces we have daily received letters of a more favourable tone, as regards the crops in general, but especially as regards the indigo outturn, which all our correspondents agree in saying promises to give a most favourable crop.—Englishman.

PUBLIC WORKS ESTABLISHMENT.—The Governor-general in Council having sanctioned the appointment of Assistant Controllers to the Accounts Establishment of the Public Works Department, the following appointments and postings are notified: Assistant Controllers First Grade, Mr. R. B. Landale, to Bengal; Mr. D. C. Gordon, to North-West Provinces; Mr. W. G. Bayly, B.A., to Punjab.

NEWS FROM CABUL.—The Delhi Gazette publishes news of Cabul from Peshawur up to July 23. Jellalabad is in insurrection. Azim Khan and his son, Surwar Khan, hold only Cabul and Ghuzni. Shere Ali Khan's force, under Yakoob Khan, is besieging Ghuzni, and the people are with him. Abdul Rahman Khan is himself in so difficult a position in Balkh that he can render no assistance.

HUMBLER THOUGHTS.—When the King of Oudh was first domiciled in Garden Reach, it required considerable persuasion to induce him to drop the grandiloquent title of "Sultan-i-aalum." We learn from the Englishman that he has preferred a request to Government to be allowed to drop the affix "Shah" and to sign himself plain "Wajid Ali."

A SUCCESSFUL EAST INDIAN.—The college career of Mr. Lewis Mendes, of Calcutta, reflects great credit on the East Indian community. Educated at the Doveton College, he has taken the highest honours in the University of London, has been called to the bar, and has just gained that University's degree of Doctor of Laws.

APPOINTMENTS.—BRITISH BURMAH.—The Governor-general in Council has made the following appointments to fill existing vacancies:—Mr. W. S. Oliphant, R.E., Superintending Engineer, Second Class, First Grade, British Burmah, and Major W. S. Trevor, R.E., Superintending Engineer, Second Class, Second Grade, Bengal, to officiate as Superintending Engineers of the First Class, with effect from March 10 and April 9 respectively.

SERVICE FOR RETIRING PENSION.—The following paragraph of a military letter from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India, No. 380, dated 9th December, 1867, is published:—Para. 3: Lieut.-Colonel C. D. Newmarch, Royal (Bengal) Engineers, served under her Majesty's Government in Ireland from 11th September, 1866, to 16th May, 1867. He has been permitted to count half of this period as service for the retiring pension.

THE COMMISSION OF THE PEACE.—Supplementary Commissions of the Peace for the town of Calcutta were issued by the High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal, on the 20th July, directed to the following gentlemen, viz.:—Messrs. Knowles, Sutherland, and Wilson. Commissions were issued on the 29th July, directed to the following gentlemen:—Messrs. Hawes and Campbell, Chota Nagpore; Mr. White, Pooree.

EXAMINATION OF MILITARY OFFICERS IN THE NATIVE LANGUAGES.—The undermentioned officers are reported, by the board of examiners, Fort William, to have passed the prescribed tests agreeably to G.G.O. No. 734 of 1864:—High proficiency in Hindee according to Clause XII.: Lieut. C. Ransford, general list, infantry. Higher standard in Hindoostanee: Cornet H. S. Williamson, 5th Lancers: Captain and Local Major F. Eteson, 1st Battalion 3rd Foot.

PRIVILEGE OF FRANKING OFFICIAL LETTERS.—FINANCIAL DEPARTMENT, SIMLA, JULY 29TH.—Pending the publication of a revised list of officers privileged to frank official covers without actual payment of postage, the Governor General in Council is pleased to notify the following additions to the existing list:—The Staff Officers of the Punjab Frontier Force to be included in the existing entry of "Adjutant General," and the Staff Surgeons Major of Allahabad and Gwalior under that of "Deputy Inspector General of Hospitals."

TROUBLES IN JOUDHPORE.—A correspondent of the Pioneer states that the Maharajah of Joudhpore has sent a force of 300 sowars to protect his frontier on the Sirohee side against the incursions of the Thakoor of Bytana, who is now in the field in rebellion. The Resaldar Habibulla, with his retainers, has been dismissed from the Joudhpore State, without having been brought to task for the discrepancies in his accounts, to which we some time ago made allusion. How long are we to abstain from interference?

EARTHQUAKE AT HAZAREEBAUGH.—A correspondent writing from Hazareebaugh on the 31st July says:—"It may be interesting to some of your readers to know that a sharp shock of an earthquake was felt here to-day at 11.45 A.M. It seemed to pass from east to west. Pucka floors shook and doors and windows rattled a good deal. I also observed that the fowls seemed frightened and ran about for a few minutes. The day is fine, wind from the east and some heavy clouds overhead. It would be interesting to know if this shock has been felt in other places on the plateau."

THE WEATHER IN ASSAM.—A letter from Assam describes the weather there as extraordinary. During March, April, and May they had dry weather and high winds, and now the country is deluged with rain. At Jorehaut the people go about in boats from house to house, and the water in the writer's garden was waist deep. We are sorry to hear that the cattle plague is prevalent, and it appears increasing; buffalos, oxen, and cows suffer alike, and no one seems to know or to try any remedy. Those that were published in the papers at the time it raged in England cannot be got now they are wanted.—Delhi Gazette, August 6.

THE REV. E. TEMPLEMAN.—We learn that the Rev. E. Templeman, late chaplain of Bareilly and Moradabad, will in all probability not return to India. He has been offered the living of Higham Ferrers, Northamptonshire, one of the most desirable parishes in England, in the gift of the Hon. E. W. Fitzwilliam. Mr. Templeman left this country much broken in health by the climate. While among us he held the stations of Shahjehanpore, Darjeeling, Futtebghurh, Bareilly, and Moradabad—all favourite stations. As a staunch advocate of strict temperance he did considerable good among the very many within the influence of his teaching addicted to the pernicious use of "fire water."—Delhi Gazette.

COMPLAINTS AGAINST BENGAL ZEMINDARS.—On Thursday last about four hundred men from the southern districts of Calcutta waited upon the Commissioner, to complain of the treatment of the zemindars, and to press upon Government the need of help in the prospect of distress which they already feel. This is an expressive fact, and tells of something more than present distress arising from the rains. When will the zemindars acknowledge their obligation to the occupiers of the land, or the Government cause them to do so? This is a question that cannot sleep, and drifting is dangerous.—Indian Daily News, August 1.

EARTHQUAKE IN MAUNBHOO.—A shock of an earthquake seems to have been experienced in Maunbhoom district a few minutes before noon on July 31. The shock, which lasted nearly a minute, apparently travelled from east to west. Dr. Wilson, of Maunbhoom, describes the sound and feeling as that of a railway train when first set in motion. The sky was particularly cloudy at the time, and there was a cool breeze blowing from the east. At Bancoorah it was accompanied by a loud rumbling noise, which was loudest during the vibrations, and lasted for fully a minute and a-half. The actual vibrations lasted only about ten seconds. Similar shocks were experienced in the Sonthal Pergunnahs.

BURMESE POLITICS.—A correspondent informs the Rangoon Gazette that the King of Burmah has been the object of another conspiracy. The officials concerned are the relatives of the disgraced Governor of Bhamo, who was himself supposed to be implicated in the matter, and was severely beaten. The King feels very insecure, and is taking strict measures to insure his personal safety. Native prophecies point to the present and coming year as being most unpropitious to the Burmese dynasty. Another European adventurer, who calls himself a Russian, has turned up and offered his services as a cavalry officer. An English officer, now in Rangoon, is said to have been offered an appointment in the King's army; and the King is stated to have expressed a wish to the Jesuit Abona to obtain French, Italian, and Prussian officers for his service.

CIVIL FURLONGS TO EUROPE.—The following civil servants have obtained furlough to Europe:—Mr. Herschel reported his departure from India by the mail steamer which left Bombay on the 14th July; Surgeon Hayes, Deputy Commissioner of Singbhoon, for thirty days, preparatory to furlough; Mr. Turner, Assistant Engineer, 2nd grade, in Oudh, has been granted preparatory leave to proceed to Calcutta on m.c., July 29; Mr. Aitchison, Officiating Foreign Secretary, fifteen months on m.c., with usual preparatory leave from date on which he may make over charge to Mr. Seton Karr; leave of absence to Europe on m.c. for twelve months has been granted to Mr. Anderson, Assistant Engineer, 1st grade, Central Provinces, with effect from the 7th July; Mr. Lamb, Deputy Commissioner of Durrung, for a period not exceeding thirty days, preparatory to proceeding to Europe on furlough, July 31.

APPLICATION BY THE SONS OF THE LATE KING OF DELHI.—The Englishman is informed that the sons of the late Bahadur Shah, the last King of Delhi, some time back forwarded a petition to the Home Government, in which after depicting their state in the most mournful colours they asked for permission to reside in the North-Western Provinces, instead of at Rangoon and Kurrachee. The Secretary of State has, however, disallowed the prayer of the petition, on the ground that State prisoners cannot, for reasons of State, be allowed to select their own places of residence. The local governments alone are competent to decide such matters. The Government would do well to see if some plan could not be hit upon by which State pensioners, such as the colony at Hoomayon's tomb, near Delhi, might readily and speedily mix with, and be lost in, the mass of the population.

LEGISLATION AGAINST VAGRANTS.—At the meeting of the Legislative Council on July 22 Mr. Maine brought in a Bill to be called a Bill to provide against European vagrancy, by which any police officer will be empowered to require any person who is apparently a vagrant to appear before the magistrate, who, after inquiry, may direct the man to be taken to the workhouse, or if it appear that he is likely to obtain employment at any particular place he may forward the vagrant through the police to the spot. Workhouses will be established, and efforts will be made to provide employment for the inmates, and if after the lapse of a reasonable time no suitable employment can be found, they may be deported to England or elsewhere at the expense of Government. If a European imported to this country by any employer becomes chargeable to the State as a "vagrant" within one year, the employer will be liable for the expense of his deportation and all incidental expenses. Such is the outline of the proposed measure, which it appears to us will meet the requirements of the case. One peculiar clause may be referred to, and that is a clause which is to denationalise the vagrant. A man who after inquiry is registered as a vagrant, is to lose his privileges as a European British subject and becomes amenable in the Mofussil to the civil procedure code, as if he were not a European British subject. Some such clause as this was necessary to enable magistrates to deal with this class of men, and although we might regard it with some jealousy as the introduction of the thin end of the wedge of a black act, yet the emergency of the case, and the necessity of dealing effectually with the intolerable nuisance overrides all such considerations.—Delhi Gazette.

MILITARY FURLONGS.—The following officers have obtained furloughs to Europe:—Lieut. Warburton, No. 6 Battery, 25th Brigade, R.A.; Lieut.-colonel Swinburne, 4th Hussars, for six months, from date of embarkation, on urgent private affairs; Brevet-colonel the Hon. C. D. Plunkett, 1st Foot, overland, from date of embarkation; Major Williams, 11th Foot, from date of embarkation; Captain Medhurst, 12th Foot, overland, from date of embarkation; Captain Thomas, 24th Foot, overland, from date of embarkation; Lieutenant Parker, 60th Foot, overland, from date of embarkation, to appear before a medical board; Major Pond, Staff Corps, to Calcutta, for one month, from date of availing himself of it. The undermentioned officers and warrant officer have reported their departure on the date specified to their names:—Captain Harris, Bengal Staff Corps, Surgeon Dale, of the Medical Department, and Conductor Williams, of the Ordnance Commissariat Department—Simla, July 20. Surgeon Major Tucker, of the Medical Department, is permitted to proceed to Australia, for two years, under the old regulations; Lieut. Wither, Assistant Engineer, 1st Grade Public Works Department, for twenty months, from July 20; Major Woodcock, Wing Officer, 23rd (Punjab) Regiment N.I., for twelve months; Major Waterfield, Bengal Staff Corps; Captain Fellowes, Bengal Staff Corps, brigade major on the establishment; Captain Currie, Bengal Staff Corps, 2nd in command and wing officer, 23rd (Punjab) Regiment of N.I. OUR CIVILISATION.—In consequence of the attempted outrage on a native woman by a European of the name of Horne, which resulted in the female committing suicide by leaping from the window, Government have called upon the railway companies to make arrangements for obtaining separate third-class accommodation for native and European passengers.

OOTACAMUND.—We are informed of a tragical occurrence which took place here on the 14th inst. about midday. On the date referred to a child about three months old was left unattended by its mother in her house situated in the bazaar, whilst she went out to the market. The other inmates were also absent at the time. Two dogs belonging to them got into the house, where the child was suspended by a cloth, the ends of which were tied to the beam of the roof (a substitute for a cradle), and worried the poor thing, eating up parts of the face, neck, and arms. On the arrival of the mother she found the dogs in the act of eating the child, when she at once gave the alarm. One of the dogs disappeared immediately, and has not been since seen; the other attacked the woman and bit her, but he was soon despatched by those who came to her assistance. The remains of the child were soon after buried, but, at the instance of the police, the body was exhumed for the purpose of holding an inquest. The parents of the poor infant are of the Malabar caste.—Neilgherry Excelsior, July 25.

MR. JAMES FERGUSSON'S PROPOSALS.—On the 19th July the Secretary of State for India forwarded to the Local Government a copy of a letter, dated the 10th instant, from Mr. James Fergusson, suggesting that, when the operations connected with the observation near Masulipatam of the solar eclipse, expected to occur on the 18th of August, shall be completed, the photographers engaged for that duty should be employed to photograph the Amravati Sculptures, as well as certain caves and temples in the same neighbourhood, and others at a distance, indicated by him. "I desire that your Excellency in Council will, as soon as possible, take the necessary measures for giving effect, as far as may be practicable, to Mr. Fergusson's suggestions, with a view to taking every advantage of this opportunity of obtaining good illustrations, together with plans and records of the interesting architectural remains referred to by Mr. Fergusson." After photographing the Amravati Sculptures, Mr. Fergusson thinks it "would also be most desirable if, after this, they could be detached to photograph some of the caves and temples in that neighbourhood. There are extensive caves at Dachapully, in the Palnad district, about forty miles west of Amravati; and a short distance further west about twenty miles, on the Kistna, there are the beautiful and ancient temples of Streechellum. At Mungulgerry and Oondavully there are other caverns—one at the latter place said to have an architectural elevation four stories in height. At Jilkaragodum, in the Ellore district, there are other excavations said to be of great interest. Indeed, the whole country up to Worangul is full of antiquities of great interest, but utterly unknown to Europeans. Worangul itself is surrounded by the remains of an old capital of the Andra country, which it would be extremely interesting to know more about if the operations of the expedition could be extended so far. This country, being nearly equally remote from the three Presidency capitals of India, and quite out of the route of travellers, is less likely to be visited by travellers or amateur photographers than almost any other district in India; and, unless some such opportunity as the present is availed of, I fear we may long remain ignorant of its antiquities. At the same time, I consider that recent researches justify me in saying that its antiquities are as important to enable us to understand the ancient history of India as those of almost any other district of that country."

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.—His Royal Highness the Field Marshal Commanding-in-Chief has granted leave of absence to Lieutenant Alexander, Royal Horse Artillery, from June 5, 1868, to June 5, 1869, at the recommendation of a medical board. STATION TALK.

KURRACHEE, July 31.—Captain C. Basevi, of the 18th Brigade Royal Artillery, a talented officer, is experimenting here with an elongated projectile of his own invention from a nine-pounder smooth bore gun. The weight of the projectile is 18 lbs. 6 oz.; it is about nine inches in length, and is made of cast iron. The crew of the transport Mandalay have been discharged, the vessel having been pronounced "unseaworthy" and condemned. The Mandalay, it will be remembered, left Annesley Bay on the 9th ultimo with the A division of the Transport Train in charge of Captain Griffith, bound for Bombay, but owing to stress of weather and her disabled condition was obliged to make for this port. I have a notable death to chronicle—that of "General Moore"—the oldest alligator at Muggur Peer. His remains were interred last week with due honours by the fakcers of the place, who have raised a tomb over him, at which they now worship under the impression that the defunct alligator has become a saint.

POONA, July 31.—The sentence passed upon Captain Cameron, of the Madras Staff Corps, which has, as you know, been confirmed by the Commander-in-Chief in India, has occasioned a good deal of sympathy for that officer in Poona circles. Of course everybody who read the evidence knew what the sentence would inevitably be. He was declared, by witnesses whose evidence could not be ignored, to have been drunk on duty, and the Queen's Regulations prescribe but one penalty for such a transgression. That penalty the court-martial had no option whatever in passing, independent of the approval or failure of any of the other charges, and independent also of the period when, during his twenty-four hours' duty as officer of the day, he was in that state. He might have been perfectly sober when he omitted to visit the Arsenal guard, which omission formed the third charge; he might have been innocent of any disturbance in the Club of Western India, but the one fact of his having been proved to have been drunk during those twenty-four hours on duty, as officer of the day, left the Court no alternative, and he was sentenced to be cashiered as a matter of common necessity. But, as it was generally felt, that when all was said and done, his offence did admit of being reduced to this proportion; and as it was felt that he had been very unlucky in the attendant circumstances, there was a widely-felt hope that the Commander-in-Chief in India, following up the precedents he had recently set in one or two decisions, upon judgments which had come before him for confirmation, would be content with ordering that a severe reprimand, or possibly a reduction to the bottom of the list of captains, be substituted for the penalty of cashiering. Sir William Mansfield has, however, disappointed public expectation, and Captain Cameron finds himself, after twelve years' service, on the threshold of life a second time, to do what he can—a poor prospect in these days in such circumstances.

Miscellaneous.

SIR ALEXANDER GRANT, BART., Director of Public Instruction, has been appointed a member of the Bombay Legislative Council from the 4th August.

CANARA DISTRICT SUB-REGISTRARS.—The following appointments of Probationary Special Sub-Registrars are made in the Canara District.—Mr. Saldanha to be Probationary Special Sub-Registrar of Coomta; Mr. Theodore to be Probationary Special Sub-Registrar of Honore.

PARSEE LIBERALITY.—The age of endowments has not yet altogether passed away from Bombay, it seems, for we learn from Government that Mr. Cowasjee Jehangeer Readymoney presented it a few days ago with the sum of Rs. 50,000 towards the erection of a lunatic asylum at Hyderabad, in Sind.—Times of India.

NEWS FROM ADEN.—Advices from Aden inform us that the Azarbas, a sect of the great Abdallee tribe, recently attacked a caravan proceeding from Aden to Lahedj, and killed several camels. The matter was of course represented to the Sultan, but before the letter reached him he had set out with a strong party for the scene of the outrage, with the view of inflicting condign punishment on the offending tribe. As soon as the Sultan's approach was announced the Azarbas fled. The matter did not, however, end there, for his Highness proceeded to occupy their territory, and to take every advantage arising from his being in the field in person to punish the tribe. The security of the caravan route between Aden and Lahedj will depend far more upon such action as that taken by the Sultan than upon the fear of possible expeditions on the part of the garrison of Aden.—Englishman.

SOLDIERS' SAVINGS BANKS, ABYSSINIAN CAMPAIGN.—Commanding officers of regiments and batteries from which any man went to Abyssinia and proceeded thence to England, are officially directed to forward to the military accountant, without delay, the necessary statements of savings bank balances due to such men, the Secretary of State for India having made an urgent call for the same.

THE BOMBAY MEDICAL RETIRING FUND.—Under instructions from H.M.'s Secretary of State for India, Government have from this day, August 1, formally accepted, under Act XXIX. of Victoria, Chapter XVIII. of 30th April 1866, from the Committee of Management of the Bombay Medical Retiring Fund, the Assets, Liabilities, and Management of that Institution, for the Secretary of State for India in Council. The duties of the above Fund will in future, or until further orders, be performed by the Secretary to the Bombay Military Fund, Poona, to whom all communications and returns should be addressed.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.—The following officers obtained leave of absence in July last:—Ensign Gyll, 2nd battalion 1st Foot; Ensign Ward, 1st battalion 23rd Foot, from 5th August, 1868, to 5th October, 1868, in extension; Second Captain Gibb, 18th brigade R.A., from 2nd June, 1868, to 23rd October, 1868, in extension; the leave granted 15th July to Captain Bogle, 25th brigade Royal Artillery, is to bear date as follows, and not as stated: from 28th July, 1868, to 28th January, 1869; the Rev. E. N. Dickinson, Chaplain of Rutnagherry, has been granted privilege leave for two months from the date of his quitting his station; Lieutenant Daniell, Superintendent of Police, Kaira, is allowed privilege leave of absence for two months from the 1st August; Surgeon Rimington, Residency Surgeon, Baroda, is allowed privilege leave of absence for three months.

FURLONGS TO EUROPE.—The Commander-in-Chief in India has been pleased to grant leave of absence as follows:—Colonel the Hon. F. A. Thesiger, 95th Foot, from date of arrival at Suez to 28th February, 1869, to England, on private affairs; Captain Wood, 91st Foot, to proceed to England by the overland route, for the purpose of appearing before a medical board (this officer is not available for duty with troops, and will, on arrival, report himself to the Adjutant-General, Horse Guards); Surgeon Cook, M.D., Medical Establishment, is allowed furlough to Europe for twenty months, on medical certificate; Colonel Abbott, Bengal Infantry, for twenty months; Captain Davidson, Royal (Bombay) Engineers, Controller of Public Works Accounts, for two years; Lieutenant Little, Bengal Staff Corps Assistant Engineer, Nimar, for twenty months; Captain Newport, staff corps, is allowed a furlough to Europe, on medical certificate, for two years; Mr. Hadow, Revenue and Police Commissioner, Southern Division, has been allowed an extension for six months, on medical certificate, of the leave granted him on March 31 last; Surgeon McKellar, Bengal Medical Establishment, is allowed furlough to Europe for two years, on medical certificate; Lieut. Lee, Royal Engineers, is allowed furlough to Europe for two years, from June 13 last; Assistant Surgeon Kearney is permitted to proceed to Europe, to appear before a medical board; Capt. Sturt, Royal Engineers, is under instructions from Horse Guards, directed to proceed to England, and will, on arrival, report himself to the Deputy Adjutant-General, Royal Engineers, Horse Guards, July 30.

THE GAIKWAR'S EXTORTIONS.—The Guzerat Mitra continues to adduce instances of extortion on the part of the Gaikwar. Wunmaly, an innocent Showkar, was cast into gaol and the sum of Rs. 73,000 was demanded from him. No accusation was preferred. The Resident ordered him with his brother and son to be released on giving security that they would pay up to Rs. 4,000, if they should be found to be indebted to the Gaikwar. The Fouzdar, however, extracted a bond for Rs. 5,000 from Wunmaly, who alone obtained his release; the others were not set free until after repeated complaints to the Resident and giving bonds for considerable sums. Another Showkar, named Menthabbhai, was fined Rs. 50,000, because he had a quarrel in his house. A young man who obtained his sunnud from the durbar on the payment of Rs. 2,000 is now told that his whole property will be confiscated unless he pay Rs. 12,000 more. The following instance deserves to be put upon record as a piece of "neat" financing. A firm becomes insolvent and the Gaikwar ranks among the creditors. As his dividend he receives a list of debts, most of them about a century old, and he is now extorting money from his subjects to pay the debts of their great-grandfathers, and will thus recoup himself for ten times his original loss. Rupees by the ten thousand are being extracted from his helpless subjects, many of whom are reduced to destitution and commit suicide to avoid their fate. The words "Zalim, Zalim" are said to be loudly ringing in every part of the Gaikwar's country, and the natives reproach us that such oppression could only be committed under the shadow of our paramount power.

POLITICS IN THE PERSIAN GULF.—The tenor of Colonel Pelly's despatch on the civil war in Nejd would leave (says the Englishman) the impression on the mind that the result is of no interest to India. He, however, admits that the struggle must take off from the pressure exercised by the Wahabee power on our good allies at Muscat, and thus indirectly proves that India is interested. The Sultan of Muscat is in fact a feudatory of Nejd, and it is possible that a new arrangement may relieve him of a burden which has been, indeed, a severe weight to him and his family hitherto. Punctual in the exaction of tribute, the Wahabee chiefs could never refrain from showing how fiercely they longed to annex the whole of Oman as they had annexed Koweil and Kateef. Hitherto our policy in the Gulf of Arabia has been to support the falling fortunes of Muscat, in spite of that State being rendered a tributary of Nejd. On the one hand we have felt compelled, repeatedly, to interfere between the Ameer of Nejd and the Sultan, and on the other between the Sultan and the Shah of Persia. Based on the old fear of piracies in the Gulf, our idea has been to keep the Wahabees away from the seashore as much as possible. It is needless to say that our success has been but partial and unsatisfactory. The result of the contest at Riad may open up a new phase in the relation of all the neighbouring States with the central power at Nejd, and hence we cannot regard the contest as a matter for such absolute indifference as Colonel Pelly would suggest. The Colonel's oft-repeated visits to Muscat and his journeys to Riad ought to have prevented him from writing so carelessly. Palgrave gives the military strength of Nejd at 47,300 men, supplemented by a Bedouin levy of about 76,500.

DESTRUCTION BY FIRE OF THE SHIP "MAI BLUME."—We have to report the total loss by fire of the ship Mai Blume, in Bombay harbour, on the morning of the 5th August. This vessel, which was of North American build, and quite new, was one of the earliest chartered for the Abyssinian Expedition. She was of 1,191 tons burthen, and was commanded by Captain Berryman. The fire was discovered shortly before one o'clock by the third officer of the Mai Blume, when all on board were quickly aroused. An attempt was first made to learn the extent of the fire, but a removal of one of the hatches—which, however, was promptly replaced—showed that the fire had such a complete hold of the vessel that any attempt to check its progress must prove futile. Fortunately a lighter, into which a number of the iron tanks had been put the previous afternoon, was alongside, and into this everything within reach was placed, including all the clothes of the crew; but nearly all the personal effects of the captain were lost. By the time this was accomplished the fire had made such progress that it was no longer possible to stay on board, the captain, his wife, and child proceeding to one of the neighbouring vessels. The first to render assistance was the captain of the Glendevon, who, with commendable promptitude, immediately on the first alarm took a number of his crew on board, and then went for the aid of the harbour authorities. The first to respond was the Bombay marine steamer Camel, in charge of Mr. Peters, which fortunately had its fires banked, but by the time she reached the Mai Blume, although less than an hour from the time when the fire was discovered, the latter was one mass of flame from stem to stern. The Camel was unable to do more than steam among the shipping in the neighbourhood, and keep the fire-bell ringing. Mr. Jolly, of the pilot department, was next at the scene of the disaster, followed by Mr. Pryce, master attendant, and Mr. Corke, 1st assistant, with the steamers Dromedary and Elephanta; but assistance to the burning ship was out of the question, and their efforts were chiefly directed to the safety of vessels in its neighbourhood, one of which had to be towed out of danger. The flames spread with astonishing rapidity, and the heat was so intense that nothing could approach the vessel within a considerable distance. Shortly after three o'clock the foremast went down, followed at a quarter to three by the main and mizen masts, which fell together. It was not until after daybreak that the fire abated sufficiently to enable the fire-engines to proceed alongside, when both, one on each side, poured into her a copious stream of water, and continued doing so throughout the whole day. Numerous reports are current as to the origin of the fire, but we leave its cause to be determined by a Marine Court of Enquiry.—Times of India.

COURT-MARTIAL.

LIEUT. H. J. MACDONNELL, H.M.'s 12TH REGIMENT.

At a general court-martial, assembled at Chinsurah, on the 4th day of July, 1868, Lieut. Henry Joseph MacDonnell, of the 2nd battalion 12th Regiment, was arraigned on the following charge:—

Charge.—With conduct unbecoming an officer and to the prejudice of good order and military discipline in the following instances:—

1st. In having, at Chinsurah, on the 1st, 2nd, and 3rd of June, 1868, disobeyed the Chinsurah depot order of May 23, 1868, to which attention was called in depot order of May 30, 1868, and by which officers commanding sections were directed to ascertain personally that each man of their sections respectively had a cholera belt on, and to note the same on the back of the parade state.

2nd. In having, at Chinsurah, on June 1, 1868, on the request of the commanding officer being conveyed to him that he would personally comply with the order of May 30, 1868, addressed to the adjutant of the Chinsurah depot, for communication to the commanding officer, an insubordinate memorandum, viz., as follows:—

“To the Adjutant, Depot H.M.'s British Forces.

“The undersigned returns the duty state of E section, and cannot find it laid down in any book of regulations that it is the duty of gentlemen to make a daily inspection of half-naked soldiers, to ascertain whether or not they are wearing flannel belts. When a soldier comes into the presence of an officer he should be properly dressed. Such is the principle which has guided the undersigned through life in the soldiers' regard, and with God's help he will be guided by the same principle as long as he has the honour to hold a commission in her Majesty's service. The duty of inspecting half-nude soldiers is surely the duty of a non-commissioned officer, not the duty of a gentleman. The bringing of an officer into so close a contact with his men is the beginning of that familiarity which is the destruction of discipline, and an order to be obeyed must be just as well as legal.

(Signed) “H. J. MACDONNELL, Lieut. 2-12th Regt.”

The Court found the prisoner guilty of the first instance of the charge, with the exception of the words the 1st (that is, the 1st June), of which it acquits him; Guilty of the second instance of the charge; and Guilty of the preamble of the charge; and sentenced him to be reprimanded.

(Signed) F. W. BURROUGHS, Colonel, President.

Chinsurah, July 4, 1868.

Confirmed.

The C. in C. remarks that the prisoner was found guilty of conduct unbecoming an officer and to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, 1st, in disobedience of orders; 2nd, in having addressed an insubordinate memorandum for communication to his commanding officer.

A more flagrant and deliberate instance of insolence and insubordination, persevered in notwithstanding due warning and counsel from the general officer commanding the division, to obey orders in the spirit intended by the commanding officer, and to retract the insubordinate memorandum, has never been brought to the notice of the superior military authorities.

The Court, in refraining from inflicting a substantial punishment for such very serious offences, has, in the opinion of the C. in C. in India, failed in its duty.

A perusal of G.O. shows how differently the crimes of disobedience and insubordination have been viewed by other courts-martial in the cases both of officers and soldiers.

The defence of the prisoner is utterly untenable.

A disobedience of orders on the part of the private soldiers having been noted by his commanding officer, which was especially likely to cause immediate disease and mortality amongst the men, he most properly gave an order to ensure the sanitary precaution by the personal inspection of the officers' sections, the absence of which precaution had been reported by the surgeon, notwithstanding the army orders enforcing it.

As a matter of fact, the order objected to by the prisoner is in complete accord with the custom of the service in well ordered regiments; it having been often felt and ascertained by commanding officers that they could not always trust to inspections executed by sergeants and corporals with reference to sanitary precautions and the cleanliness of the person.

Such was the custom of the service when H.E. was a regimental officer, and he has been at pains to ascertain lately that like precautions are not forgotten in the present day when the health, it may be said the lives, of the young soldiers are directly concerned.

But even if the orders were unusual, which H.E. believes not to be the case, it is evident that the service cannot be carried on if subordinate officers are to refuse to obey orders which are legal, and in no manner affect the personal honour of the officer concerned, because he may disapprove of them.

Whenever there is ground for such disapproval it is open to an officer to appeal to superior authority, but it is the elementary rule of H.M.'s service, according to the principle laid down in the Mutiny Act and Articles of War, that officers and soldiers must obey legal orders given by constituted authority in the first instance, and make their appeal afterwards, if they see cause.

H.E. entirely agrees with Capt. Browne in his opinion, as now sanctioned by the verdict of the Court, that the order given by him was according to law, and H.E. further thinks that it was fully required by the circumstances of the Chinsurah depot in a time of cholera.

H.E. also concurs with Capt. Browne in considering that the order may be duly carried out without any infraction of decency or even delicacy on the part of the officers concerned.

The prisoner is hereby reprimanded, in accordance with the sentence of the Court. He may now be released from arrest and return to his duty. (Signed) W. R. MANSFIELD, Gen., C. in C. in India.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

DEPUTATION ALLOWANCES TO MILITARY OFFICERS IN CIVIL EMPLOY.

Financial Dept., Simla, July 29.—No. 1,490.—Read—Letter from the depy. accountant gen., Central Provinces, No. 1,146, dated June 25, enquiring whether deputation allowances to milly. officers in civil employ acting in appts. the salary of which is consolidated, are to be regulated according to the rules for covenanted civil servants.

Letter from acct. gen., British Burmah, No. 1,541, dated July 7, on the same subject.

Read again—Orders in this dept., No. 534, dated June 16, authorising revised rates of acting allowances for covenanted civil officers.

Observations.—The G. G. in Council observes that civil appts. held by milly. officers are of two kinds:—

1st. Those of which the salary is consolidated.

2nd. Those which carry staff allowances.

A milly. officer acting in either of these kinds of appts. may substantively be himself in one of the three following positions:—

1st. Simply a regtl. or staff corps officer out of employ, and drawing only the pay of his rank.

2nd. In staff employ, civil or milly., drawing staff allowances in add. to the pay of his rank.

3rd. Holding an appt., of which the pay is consolidated.

The G. G. in Council is of opinion that milly. officers when acting in civil appts. the pay of which is consolidated, should draw acting allowances, so far as possible, under civil rules; and that when acting in civil appts. carrying a staff salary, they should draw acting allowances as if acting in a milly. appt. carrying a staff salary.

Resolution.—The following rules regulating the acting allowances of milly. officers acting in civil appts. shall be adopted with effect from July 1:—

I. A milly. officer acting in a civil appt. the salary of which is consolidated, shall, in respect of acting allowances, be subject to the rules promulgated, in orders No. 534 of the Financial Dept., dated June 16, regarding the acting allowances of covenanted civil officers. If such officer hold a substantive appt. carrying staff allowances, and not consolidated, he will lose half the staff allowance of that appt.

II. The subsistence allowance referred to in Rule II. of the said rules shall be the Indian pay and allowances of the rank of the officer. Provided that in no case shall a milly. officer draw under that rule a greater or smaller salary than would be drawn by a covenanted civil servant of the corresponding grade, as noted below:—

Cpts. and subalts. correspond with covenanted civil servants of less than 8 years' standing.

Majors correspond with covenanted civil servants of 8 years' and less than 12 years' standing.

Officers above the rank of majors correspond with covenanted civil servants of 12 or more years' standing.

III. A milly. officer acting in a civil appt., to which staff allowances are attached and are not consolidated, shall, in respect of acting allowances, be subject to the rules which govern the acting allowances of milly. officers acting in milly. appts., to which staff allowances are attached.

IV. If a milly. officer acting in a civil appt. hold a substantive appt. the salary of which is consolidated, the difference between the Indian pay and allowance of his rank, and the full salary of his substantive appt., shall, for the purposes of Rule III., be held to be his staff allowance.

EXTENSION OF FURLOUGH.

India Office, London, June 25, 1868.

To H.E. the Right Hon. the Gov. Gen. of India in Council.

Sir,—Your letter dated March 23, No. 123, recommends that officers who may be at home on furlough or on leave on sick certificate may be allowed the full benefit of any extended leave, with retention of staff appointment, which can be granted them under the provisions of the contemplated new furlough rules.

With the view of carrying out this proposal, those officers who are now on furlough on private affairs with retention of appointment, will be in all cases informed, on being granted an extension of the six months given them in India, that they can retain their appointments for the full period to which they may be entitled under the proposed new rules. As regards those on leave on sick certificate, it will rest with the various Governments to keep open their appointments for the full period to be allowed under these rules.—I have, &c., (Sd.) THE INTERNATIONAL TELEGRAPH CONFERENCE.

In a letter to the Pall Mall Gazette Colonel Goldsmid thus expresses himself regarding a paragraph quoted in our last issue:—"Sir,—I have only this morning seen a paragraph in the Pall Mall Gazette of Friday last quoting some remarks made by me at the recent Telegraphic Conference of Vienna. As you have noticed one point in the published proceedings, I think it fair to call your attention to the general results of the meeting, so far as regards British India and telegraphic communication with the East. A little further on than the passage quoted will be found recorded the unanimous adoption by the Conference of a declaration drawn up by the French delegate expressive of the interests and sympathy of the European States in securing an efficient means of communication. In the Appendix to the Table of Rates may be observed the practical use of the above declaration. The question was one on which much attention and care were bestowed by the Congress generally, and in a remarkable manner by certain members. Passing over, however, the discussions held, and the expressions of welcome in the inaugural address of M. de Beust, on account of the adhesion to the European Congress of British India, I will come to something more than words and promises. There are to be eight distinct and defined routes for telegrams between London and Calcutta, through the Continent of Europe—five 'Indo-Ottoman,' passing into the Government cable at its extremity in Turkish Arabia, and three 'Russo-Persian,' meeting the cable lower down the Persian Gulf at Bushire. From January 1, 1869, the cost of a single message by any of these will not exceed £2. 17s. One of the five Indo-Ottoman lines will be worked under a special convention (which I have seen) between France, Austria, Switzerland, Servia, and Turkey; and one of the three 'Russo-Persian' lines will be that of Messrs. Siemens Brothers. As regards the lateness of the invitation to British India to take part in the Congress, it was to the existence rather than the cause of the delay that my remarks referred. On the latter head explanation had been given in the earlier part of the proceedings, and appears on the record."

Miscellaneous.

THE ANGLO-INDIAN TELEGRAPH, which will traverse Russia, will certainly be completed in the course of next year. The material has already arrived at St. Petersburg. A number of skilled workmen are already on their way to Persia, and in the month of May the Persian portion of the line will be at work.

CONGRATULATORY ADDRESSES TO THE QUEEN.—India Office, August 29th.—Addresses of congratulation to the Queen from the inhabitants of Calcutta, Madras, Lahore, Lucknow, Dacca, and of the Province of Oude, on the escape of his Royal Highness the Duke of Edinburgh from assassination in Australia, have been laid before her Majesty, and have been graciously received.

BILLS ON INDIA.—The biddings for bills on India took place on Wednesday, the 2nd inst., at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were: To Calcutta, £188,900; and to Madras, £11,100. The minimum price was fixed, as before, at 1s. 10½d. on both Presidencies, and tenders at 1s. 11d. will receive about 56 per cent. No tenders on Bombay were invited. The result shows a slight increase in the demand for remittances.

ARRIVAL OF INVALIDS, &c.—PORTSMOUTH, September 1.—The Golden Fleece, steam transport, arrived at Spithead this morning, with the remnant of the Abyssinian expedition, in the shape of naval and military invalids. The naval invalids were brought into harbour and forwarded to the Royal Naval Hospital at Haslar, and the military sick were taken to the Royal Victoria Hospital at Netley in the Florence Nightingale, in tow of the paddle-wheel tug vessel Camel.

ACCIDENT TO THE P. AND O. COMPANY'S STEAMSHIP "MASSILIA."—SOUTHAMPTON, Sept. 5.—The Peninsular and Oriental Company's steamship Massilia, Captain Almond, with the heavy portion of the Bombay mail, in coming up the river in a dense fog, went ashore on a mud bank off Cadlands, three miles inside Calshot Castle. The Massilia went ashore at high water, and steamers were sent to receive her cargo. After discharging 1,806 bales raw silk and the greater portion of the other cargo, hawsers were made fast to the steam-tugs Phoenix and Aid, and the steamers Medina and Alliance. At first it was doubtful whether these efforts would be successful, but ultimately, and at high tide, the Massilia gradually came off, and was towed into the docks. It is not thought she has sustained any damage whatever.

ARRIVAL OF TROOPS FROM INDIA.—PORTSMOUTH, Sept. 7.—The Corona, hired transport ship, of 1,200 tons, Captain William S. Crondie, arrived at Spithead from Bombay this morning. She left that place on June 2, rounded the Cape of Good Hope on July 19, and crossed the Equator in long. 22.30 W. on the 5th ult. The Corona also touched at Port Elizabeth, Algoa Bay. She brings home about 320 of all ranks from Bombay, viz. :—13 officers, 173 men, 82 women, and 44 children of the 3rd Dragoon Guards, and 30 men, 12 women, and 22 children, from several other regiments in the Presidency—the whole being under the command of Major Frederick J. S. Sandys, of the 3rd (Prince of Wales') Dragoon Guards. The Corona came into harbour about four o'clock, and was berthed alongside the dockyard. The Dragoons proceed to Winchester, to join those brought home about three months since in the Crocodile, and who formed part of the force employed in the Abyssinian Expedition.

RUSSIA IN THE EAST.

The Times observes that what is called the question of Russia in the East, plainly stated, comes to this—Shall we, some day or other, have to fight with Russia for the possession of India? If so, would it be for our advantage to select the time and place for ourselves, to choose our own battle-field and, perhaps, precipitate the contest before our enemy's preparations are matured? It is thought in India, we are told, that a day may really come when it may be necessary to warn the Russians off Afghanistan—in other words, to inform the Russian Government that the Affghans would receive the support of the British Government against any invaders. But this communication, if it ever were made, would be pretty well superfluous. The Russians must already know that our present policy consists in leaving to them, if they are bent upon aggression, the costly work of crossing Afghanistan, and it would be well understood, without our saying it, that the Affghans would not be left unassisted in their resistance to the enemy. Under these circumstances, if they ever occurred, the battle for India would indeed be fought in Afghanistan, but not in Afghanistan as a province of our Indian Empire. The country would be an independent country attacked from without, and we should be supporting the mass of the nation against a declared foe. The Times is not disposed to make light of the danger of Russian aggression, and is not overcredulous on the subject of Russian forbearance, but come what will we can gain nothing by precipitating the collision, while we should be almost certain to lose by making further advances to meet the enemy. If the great fight is to be fought out in Afghanistan, we had better have the Affghans as friends than foes, and we should infallibly make them our foes by invading their country. Our true policy lies in vigilance and preparation. At the present moment it may be taken as certain that our own real danger would consist in our rushing to meet an anticipated danger half-way.

THE PROPER LINE OF TELEGRAPH TO INDIA.

The Pall Mall Gazette asks if we are really going to sit down quietly, contented with a state of things in which we are absolutely in the power of one or other European Power or Turkey for our direct intercourse with our chief dependency? There can be no serious doubt as to the answer. Sooner or later, and the sooner the better in order that we may at least do all that we can not to lose India, a direct telegraphic line to Bombay, worked exclusively by ourselves, along the whole route, we assuredly must have, and, if this be so, what excuse is there for delay? The line by the Cape of Good Hope is scarcely less important. There is no difference of opinion that we know of as to the possibility of laying down these lines amongst scientific men, or as to the vast and immediate benefits which they would confer amongst any of the rest of the community who have given the matter a moment's serious thought. We cannot, therefore, think we are over-sanguine in believing that before long the business may be taken in hand in earnest. If this is to be done, however, at once, it must be done by the Government. It is true the Government has refused to guarantee a minimum interest on the necessary outlay, notwithstanding the precedent of the Indian railways. Competent judges think that but for the railways the struggle of nine years since might have ended differently, would certainly have lasted longer, and cost far more than it did in men and money; but had it not been for Lord Dalhousie's strenuous persistence we should have had no Indian railways in 1859. The safety of our Eastern empire may yet depend more on telegraphic communication than on railways, but our rulers would still seem to be in the same mind as in 1854, and unluckily there is no Lord Dalhousie at hand just now to carry things his own way with a high hand. Is there any reason, then, why the Government should not undertake, and successfully accomplish, this work? We cannot suggest any, unless it be that it, in common with the nation, has utterly lost nerve in the panic of the last two years. On the other hand, we can suggest many reasons why it should be done, and done at once. It will give more security to our commerce and our empire than a dozen extra ironclads, and will not only be self-supporting, but a great source of revenue to the country, for no merchant in his senses will do his business through Turkish or Russian overland lines when he may use an English deep-sea line at the same or less cost. One would suppose that in the Telegraphs Act of last session there is encouragement enough to induce even timid rulers to make the venture. The nation has made up its mind that the English telegraphs must become national property, and has with some demur agreed to a price which will double the capital of the lucky shareholders in the present companies. Why should not the Government get the profit in the first instance? A direct line of telegraph with our Indian empire and Australian colonies must sooner or later "crown the edifice." And as to the economical question, such a line is certain to be at least as remunerative as that of the Société du Cable Transatlantique Français (Limited), and we cannot but hope that the example of Mr. Lowe and his coadjutors, French and English, will inspire the Minister to undertake this great and most pressing work for the honour and advantage of England.

EXTRACT FROM PREFACE.

"I am not without a hope that these memoirs may be regarded, in some sort, as a Biographical History of India from the days of Cornwallis to the days of Canning. * * I have not attempted, indeed, to write History; the work has grown up spontaneously out of the Lives of the great men who make history * * and, unless the ability of the execution has fallen far short of the sincerity of the design, I have done something, in these pages, to do honour to a race of public servants unsurpassed in the history of the world. * * I have striven to show how youths, from the middle-class families of our British Islands, have gone forth into the great Eastern world, and by their own unaided exertions carved their way to fame and fortune.

"J. W. KAYE."

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

From the ATHENÆUM.

"We say at once that more admirably-written and interesting narratives are scarcely to be found in any literature. We do not envy the man who could read without deep emotion the lives here given of Conolly, Lawrence, and Nicholson; and we doubt whether the whole range of history can show more perfect characters.
Nobler subjects of biography could not have been chosen, and higher praise it is impossible to bestow on a writer than to say, as we do of this author, that he is fully equal to such a theme. * * Mr. Kaye's 'Lives of Indian Officers' will take a high place among the standard books of England."

From the SPECTATOR.

"A cadet, an artillery officer, an editor, an employee of the first rank, a successful historian, Mr. Kaye unites in his own person all the qualifications requisite to the biographer of the great Indian soldiers."

From the EXAMINER.

"Two stout volumes of biography, which, arranged chronologically, have, in addition to their biographical interest, great historical value as illustrations of the progress of political government, warlike exercise, and philanthropic effort in India during the last three generations. It is a work of remarkable interest; the interest being due not only to the stirring subjects of which it treats, but also to the admirable way in which the subjects are treated."

THE TEXTILE MANUFACTURES AND THE COSTUMES OF THE PEOPLE OF INDIA

Prepared under the Authority of the Secretary of State for India in Council.

By J. FORBES WATSON, Reporter on the Products of India.

Imperial quarto, morocco back, cloth, with numerous coloured Photographs. £3. 6s.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

THE TIMES.—"On no point, perhaps, in regard to India, has greater ignorance prevailed in England than in respect to the clothing of her vast population. Late as it is, and for the first time within the last hundred years of our Indian domination, the work just completed by Dr. Forbes Watson supplies this great and almost unaccountable want of information, and supplies it, too, in a most complete and intelligible manner. It would be impossible to follow Dr. Watson's work in detail; but, whether to the manufacturer or to the general reader, the interest throughout will continue unbroken. His book is written in a clear and thoroughly intelligible style throughout; it is handsomely got up, and embellished by numerous coloured photographs, from which the various styles of costumes and portions of clothing, male and female, will be more readily understood than from mere descriptions."

THE ATHENÆUM.—"We may safely say that a more important work on the manufactures of India has never been given to the public, than the Industrial Museum, and this Commentary by Dr. Forbes Watson. Advantages are sometimes slow to follow, even when the channel for them has been skillfully made and clearly marked out, but we certainly do anticipate very great results from this work, and that before long its author will be acknowledged to deserve a place amongst the real benefactors of India."

THE EDINBURGH REVIEW.—"It is a matter of national importance to study and ascertain what the traditions of India in respect to dress really are. This task has been most ably performed by Dr. Forbes Watson in the volume before us. We call attention to the work and to the subject, not as a matter of mere curiosity, but as an inquiry of direct interest to the manufacturing industry of Europe. Dr. Watson has evidently brought his personal Indian experience to bear upon a mass of materials which, in less skilled hands, would most likely have proved wearisome and unintelligible. As he has arranged his details, they are as entertaining to the general reader as they are full of information and instruction to the manufacturer."

THE MORNING POST.—"The conception of this splendid work reflects the highest credit upon the wisdom of the department to which we are indebted for its publication; and the manner in which it has been executed by its author. No one can fully appreciate the value of this work without seeing it, because neither analysis nor extracts can give any idea of the immense mass of minute facts which it contains, and the admirable manner in which they are grouped and made subservient to the practical requirements of the manufacturer and the merchant, and the cravings of the student of ornamental art. The illustrations are as magnificent as they are appropriate. In fact, as mere productions of beauty and taste, they give the work the air of a book of art luxury, and we have no doubt that from this feature it will find many admirers and purchasers beyond the ranks of trade and commerce."

THE ART JOURNAL.—"The work, indeed, is as well fitted, as far as embellishment is concerned, for the drawing-room table as it is for the study; and its contents will be found far more interesting to the general reader than its mere designation would lead to a supposition that it might be. The motive and purpose of its publication is highly creditable to the present Home Government of India."

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.

DROPSICAL SWELLINGS.—Whatever may be the remote cause of collections of water in the human body, it must be prudent to disperse them as soon as possible. The readiest means of accomplishing this end are supplied by using Holloway's Ointment to increase the activity of the absorbents. When this Ointment is well rubbed upon the skin it removes all venous congestions, overcomes all mechanical obstructions to the free return of the blood, and prevents the deposit of serum and water. Holloway's Pills likewise augment the absorbing power; they act remotely on the capillaries through the circulation, while his Ointment acts directly through the skin. Both should be employed in dropsies and diseases of the kidneys.

PAINFUL TEETH, or DISEASED STUMPS EXTRACTED WITHOUT PAIN. No chloroform, and perfectly safe.

"There is no shame to our manhood if we distrust our own ability to endure the anguish of the body. . . . It is no secret that of late local anesthesia has been produced to such a degree that the patient, retaining his consciousness, can watch the surgeon's knife as it cuts to cure, and yet be without the slightest sensation of physical suffering."—Daily Telegraph, July 13, 1868.

TEETH PAINLESSLY STOPPED with Permanent Enamel Cement of the exact natural colour. Guaranteed not to turn black, or make the Teeth look unsightly.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER AS A BASIS FOR ARTIFICIAL TEETH.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER.—This material being soft and elastic, no springs or fastenings are required; the acids of the stomach produce no effect on it; it fits to the mouth with an accuracy which renders detection impossible, and it is entirely free from taste or smell. Where the gums are in any way tender, and great absorption has taken place, this system will prove invaluable.

INSPECTION OF MODELS AND SPECIMENS.

Feeling that illustrative specimens of the above improvements would impart a more accurate appreciation of their object, effect, and value, than any written description, a number of models have been executed representing the adaptation of Teeth, and sets to several different shapes, sizes, and defects of the mouth and gums. These models furnish a clear, practical exposition of the principles adopted, and may be seen every day at Mr. Webb's residence, free of charge.

His Treatise, "Dental Mechanics and Surgery," which explains the above painless and inimitable system, free by post, or on application to Mr. WEBB, 27, NEW BOND-STREET (late with Mr. ESKELL, Surgeon-Dentist, 8, Grosvenor-street).

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, August 18; Agra, August 13; Calcutta, August 12; Madras, August 11.

No detailed news has yet come to hand regarding the eclipse from any part of India, although the Bombay mail left that very day. All we know at present is that the Governor of Bombay had gone off to Beejapore, where the four German astronomers were waiting for the critical moment to take their observations; that another party of astronomers, under Mr. Pogson, were making ready to see what they could from Madras, Masulipatam, Guntoor, and Davercondah; and that the 18th of August was to be observed as a holiday in the Law Courts and some Public Offices of Bombay. At Madras and Calcutta steamers had been advertised to carry sightseers to some favourable standpoint; but it seems that no one in the former place cared enough for science to bespeak a berth, and so the intended trip was likely to end in nothing. The weather in Bombay was inauspiciously overcast, as the telegrams have already told us. A letter in Monday's Times, from the captain of the P. and O. Company's steamer Carnatic, details what he saw of the eclipse on his way to Suez, in lat. 16 N. long. 54°15' E. There, too, the effect was spoiled at first by clouds, through which only hasty glimpses could be caught of what was going on, until the clouds finally dispersing left the view clear. Two-thirds of the sun's disc was then obscured, leaving a bright crescent visible, which sent forth a light at once remarkably pale and very brilliant. "The high sea running appeared like huge waves of liquid lead, and the ghastly paleness of the light thrown upon it and all around revealed a scene which, for its weirdlike effect, it would be as impossible to depict as it is to describe." The spectroscope revealed first several dark lines across the sun's disc, and next "a roughness on the concave edge of the crescent of sunlight left visible." Of the prismatic rays "those between red and green predominated over those between green and violet." A small black spot was seen in the upper right limb of the sun's disc. The temperature of the day before the eclipse was unusually low, but no change took place in the force or direction of the monsoon wind. There was a thick haze on the horizon, with a clear sky, and at night the sea was "highly luminous."

A RAID of hill-men into Upper Hazara has led to the movement of a pretty strong force in that direction. It seems that on the 30th July a body of marauders several hundred strong came down on the police-station of Agroah, about thirty miles north of Abbotabad, and after a sharp fight with the policemen, who behaved well and had several of their number badly wounded, made off with all the plunder they could pick up, leaving six of their own body dead on the ground. It is supposed that they were abetted in their movements by a neighbouring Khan whose loyalty had long been more than doubtful, and who gave no timely warning to the police. Be that as it may, he and another Khan have since been put into confinement, and a force of several regiments has been got together under Major-general Wilde for some purpose not yet revealed. Colonel Rothney's Ghoorkahs and Hughes's mountain guns were the first to reach Agroah, under the guidance of Captain Ommanney, the Deputy-Commissioner. The Commissioner himself, Major Pollock, soon followed, to reward the brave Thannadar who had commanded the defence, and to order the arrest of the suspected Khans. The 2nd Ghoorkahs, a wing of the 16th Bengal Cavalry, a squadron of Guides, the 20th and 23rd Punjabies, the 6th Foot armed with Sniders, a troop of Horse Artillery from Rawul-Pindi, and several hundred of the 19th and 77th Foot, were all moving or about to move towards the scene of danger. Things looked so serious, from the known temper of the hill tribes in that direction and the supposed complicity of some of our subject chiefs, that one correspondent foresees another Umbeylah campaign. It is to be hoped that the next mail will belie the forebodings suggested by the last. Agroah, the scene of outrage, is the furthest outpost on the Salt Customs line, and before last year had remained unvisited by a European. It is said that affairs are not looking too peaceful on the side of Kohat also.

SOME of our Indian contemporaries are never tired of denouncing the yearly flight of the Supreme Government from Calcutta to Simla. Differing to any extent on other questions, they agree on this. Whatever objections some of them may urge against Calcutta as the seat of government, the waste of time and public money involved in the journey to the hills and the atmosphere of idleness in which Indian rulers lounge up there are the constant theme of their complaints. The Englishman cries aloud at the extravagant outlay on journeys which deprive Calcutta for six months in the year of the light of the viceregal countenance. The Friend of India thinks that if Sir Charles Jackson should succeed the present law-member of the Indian Government, "he will be too conscientious to sacrifice his duty for Simla every year." The Times of India, which laughs at the notion of retaining Calcutta for the capital of India, laughs still more scornfully at Sir W. Mansfield's attempts to justify the yearly trip to Simla. And yet we should have thought that by this time the advantages of a hot weather retreat from such a place as Calcutta had passed beyond discussion. It may be a mistake for the viceroy to "vibrate like a mere pendulum between Calcutta and the Capua of the Hills;" but until some healthier place than the former be made the seat of government, what better can he do than refresh his jaded powers by a yearly sojourn in a more genial clime? There are other hills indeed than those north of Deyrah, and he might as well visit each in turn. But against the principle which takes him yearly to Simla we cannot see what any unprejudiced person has to say. Even in this country our statesmen take their holiday, and the Queen exchanges Windsor for Balmoral. And in India the change of air brings with it very little rest from work. Sir John Lawrence and his colleagues take the cares of office with them into the Himalayas. Legislation goes on at Simla pretty much as it did in Calcutta. Every mail brings fresh proof that the Government holiday is no time of rest from public work. As for the expenses of the journey to and fro, and the time consumed in it, we can only answer the complainants on that score by Mr. Burchell's favourite word, "Fudge."

TOUCHING Captain Cameron's court-martial, the nearer we look at it, the less does it take our fancy. Captain Cameron, being out as officer of the day in his forage-cap on one of the hottest days of an Indian April, got upset by the heat, lay down in his tent, where he drank a bottle of soda-water; went by-and-by to the mess, which he left quite sober, having drunk nothing at dinner but some beer and lemonade. Still feeling a pain in his head, he looked in at the Club-house to consult the doctor, who was staying there, and has since died. The doctor pressed him to take "a peg" of gin and soda. Somebody, when the captain's back was turned, stiffened the "peg" with a double allowance of spirit, and Captain Cameron, drinking the mixture down at a draught, soon betrayed evidence of its strength. He grew somewhat noisy, dropped his glass, and aroused the displeasure of some whist-players in the verandah. Next day he refused to apologise to the latter, who reported him as drunk and disorderly in a club of which he was not a member. Hence the trial, which ended in his dismissal from the service. He had done all his duty for the day, forgetting only to visit one guard, an oversight which he forgot to mention in his report. The Court's verdict however frees him from the blame of wilful falsehood on that score; so that he has really been cashiered for taking too much drink unawares at a private club, after his round of duty had been virtually completed. This may be strict military justice, although a sergeant, who being in liquor had beaten his wife to death, had just before got off unscathed. But might not the justice have been tempered with a little of that mercy of which the greater culprit received so plentiful a dose?

ONE of the subjects which the holiday-makers of Simlah have lately been discussing is the Oudh Rent Bill. In bringing the Report of the Select Committee before the Legislative Council, Mr. Strachey alluded to a curious judgment of the High Court of Agra on a question of tenant-right in the North-West Provinces. According to that judgment, a tenant who dug even a kuchcha well without his landlord's leave made himself liable to ejectment. Grossly unjust as such a decision seems, and conscious as the Court were of such injustice, they were bound to administer the law as they found it. And a harder one against the tenant does not exist even in Great Britain. The kuchcha wells are generally mere holes a few feet deep and three or four feet across, the digging of which for purposes of irrigation is known to be as necessary as ploughing itself for the raising of any crops at all. And the injustice is greatly sharpened by the fact that so many tenants in the North-west have a hereditary right to the land they occupy, a kind of part-ownership which is thus made liable to forfeiture on so absurd a pretence. The Government should see that this wrong gets righted without delay. Under the new Bill for Oudh no such law can possibly be enforced in that province.

LIEUTENANT GOOLD has been convicted in the Criminal Sessions Court of Calcutta of having fraudulently uttered three forged cheques for £200, £90, and £60. For these trifling offences he has been sentenced to two years' rigorous imprisonment, although the judge who tried him owned that he had power to punish him with transportation for life, or with ten years' penal servitude and a fine to boot. Such punishments, especially the former, his lordship is wont to inflict in a country where forgery is so rife. But Lieutenant Goold's crime being "that kind of forgery which was induced by the reckless enjoyment of the present moment," the judge awards him a sentence "as light as is consistent with the serious nature of the offence." We recommend this plea of "reckless enjoyment" to the next criminal of a grade lower than that of officer and gentleman. According to the new doctrine however, the plea might not avail him much, for it seems that the excuses for crime are to carry weight in direct proportion to the rank of the criminal.

MADRAS is actually going to get her long-needed breakwater. At least the local Government have directed the Public Works Department to prepare plans and estimates, which in course of time will be laid before the Supreme Government and the India Office for final consideration. This first step to a most desirable consummation seems to have been inspired by the urgent entreaties of the Madras Chamber of Commerce in behalf of a scheme whose necessity, in view of the growing trade of that city and of the wretched anchorage along that part of the coast, it seems absurd to question.

OF other Madras news there is little enough. The troubles in Keonghur are not, for any reference made to them in the overland summaries. The Governor was to return from the Pulneys in another week, and the Bishop of Madras was on the eve of starting on his visitation-tour through most of his diocese. The heat in Madras was once more very great, but heavy rains were still falling in various directions. Sixty miles of the Madras Irrigation Company's canal were full, and the works stood well.

MYSORE is over-burdened with soldiery; of the 10,000 troops within its humble limits more than 5,000 are local horse and foot. Thinking this too much of a good thing, the Commissioner has at length gained leave from the Indian Government to cut down the Mysore Horse from 2,500 to 1,500 sabres, and devote the consequent savings to the improvement of the police. It is said that a reduction in the strength of the European Cavalry will shortly follow.

THE rains in India are pretty sure to touch some of the railway and road works. Heavy floods have done much damage to several sections of the Bombay and Central India Railway, carrying away four spans of the Nerbudda viaduct, two of the Meshwa bridge, breaking down several hundred yards of embankment, and destroying a number of smaller bridges. In Tirhoot the Gunduck river has burst its banks and bunds, swept away bridges, and overwhelmed some twenty or thirty square miles of country, causing no apparent loss of life, but doing untold damage to crops. The rest of the province however seems to have escaped disaster, for the general outturn is reported "very good."

ACCORDING to the Bombay papers the Ameer of Bokhara has engaged to pay the Russians a yearly tribute, and to let them build cantonments at Kermineh, Charjui, and Karshi, of which places the first commands the road from Samarkand to Herat, the third lies on the road from Samarkand to Bokhara, and the second helps to command the khanate of Bokhara from the south of the Oxus. The treaty further contemplates the erection of a strong post on the Zerefshan, and the building of a road at the Ameer's cost from Samarkand to Bokhara. Later news from St. Petersburg however forces us to conclude that the treaty has not been confirmed.

SIR HENRY DURAND is coming home for three months on account of ill-health, with the intention of returning in December. Colonel Norman acts in his place.

The opening of the new line of railway from Alexandria to Suez will deprive many travellers of a glimpse at Cairo, the most eastern of all Eastern cities; but will reduce the journey to Suez to ten hours at most. Those who wish to see Cairo however can run thither by rail from Benha. The new line has easier gradients than the other, and can be kept more easily in good repair.

THE INDIAN POST-OFFICE.

THE official report on the Indian Post-office for the year 1866-7 contains some interesting tokens of the progress recently made in the department over which Mr. Riddell held efficient sway, from its reorganisation in 1854 till his retirement in March of last year.

In the year under review a separate postal circle was established in the Central Provinces, whose Post-office work had hitherto been divided among the Postmasters-general of the three Presidencies and the North-West. The result has proved a clear gain both for the province and the officers, who were thus relieved of work outside their proper domain. In May of this year a new Act increased the weight allowed for newspapers to ten tolas, and reduced that for books to ten tolas the single rate. It removed the old restrictions as to the class of articles that might be sent by book-post, and in the scale of letter-postage it altered the old charge on every additional tola to a reduced one on each half tola.

Another wise reform carried out by Mr. Riddell has already reduced the charges on official postage from fifty lakhs in 1865-6 to about twenty-nine lakhs in the year following. Under the old system there was no limit to the numbers or the bulk of service-letters. Anything could be sent under a service-cover to anybody. The new arrangement limits the wholly free correspondence to a much smaller number of offices, and enforces payment of all other service-letters by means of a separate service stamp. How many abuses have thus been checked, may be gathered from the fact that the daily average of service-letters passing through the Bombay Post-office in a certain week of last year was less than half that of the same week in the year before. The establishment of branch-offices was also conceded; and a scheme for improving the pay of postmen and postmasters in the Central, North-Western, and Bengal circles, on the principles already applied to Bombay and Madras, was commended by Mr. Riddell to the favourable notice of the Government.

One incident connected with the working of the Post-office is worth mentioning by-the-way. An epidemic broke out in the autumn of 1866 among the horses along two of the main lines where horsed mail-carts were still running. Nine hundred and twenty-one horses died in about a month. Their owners, who contracted to carry the mails at their own risk, were not strictly entitled to any compensation for the loss, but the Government,

"deeming it proper" to compensate them "to a limited extent," divided among them Rs. 30,758, or about Rs. 33-6-4, for each animal.

Four hundred and eighty-eight new post-offices and letter-boxes were opened during the year, making an increase of 1,137 in the last two years, and of 1,574 in the last five. The mileage of the year was 47,929 miles, or 931½ above that of the year before. Of this increase the railways claim about 382 miles, chiefly in the Madras and Central circles. In British Burmah the whole mileage is still traversed by runners or boats, and the same primitive methods still largely predominate in the returns for all the other provinces. The Punjab has proportionally fewer miles of runner and more of horse dawk than the rest; while Bombay shows about 400 more miles of railway than either Madras or Bengal.

In the carriage of letters, newspapers, books, and parcels, the last year's returns show a marked increase on any former year. The Indian Post-office like our own is steadily developing its powers of production. In letters alone the increase amounts to 4,173,987. Even in newspapers, of which more are now sent in one cover, it is set down at 129,466. The stamps sold in 1866-7 realised 83¼ per cent. above the profits of the year preceding, in spite of the lower rates of postage on letters weighing more than one tola. After all deductions the nett receipts of the year from all sources amounted to Rs. 21,56,607, or 39 per cent. above the total expenditure, which for various reasons was heavier than usual, while the revenue of the year from letters was naturally affected by the same cause which kept down the profits from stamps. If we deduct the charges on franked and service letters, we find that the postage on private correspondence alone covers 83 per cent. of the whole outlay. In view of results so cheering to the believers in the principles first enforced by Rowland Hill, the present Director-general deems it "a matter of true policy to place the Establishments on a footing in respect of pay, which will make the Department not the resource of the ill-educated and dishonest, but a sphere in which those able and willing to do good service may look forward to obtain the reasonable emoluments and rewards of their service."

Whatever grounds there are for the complaint thus obliquely uttered, the instances of dishonesty punished legally or departmentally during the year do not seem alarmingly numerous. They amount to sixty-two and twenty-five. With all allowance for crimes undiscovered or unproven, these figures speak well for the honesty of the 20,800 persons in the service, as measured at least by our English experiences. The largest number of sinners pertains to Bengal, while not one case is entered against British Burmah, and only six against Madras. And the 87 offences recorded show a decrease of nine on the former year. Equally encouraging was the decrease in the number of mail robberies on the highway; 43 being recorded against 51 of the year before. Here again British Burmah has a clean sheet to show, and the Punjab is nearly innocent, while Bombay and the North-West Provinces take the lead in crime. The returns for these last however include crimes done on non-British ground; and these again have sensibly diminished since the Act of July, 1866, which compels the native States to pay the full value of all property plundered within their limits.

More than 607,000 letters were returned to the senders during the year, while over a million more were left on the hands of the Post-office. Of the 1,746 complaints made to the authorities by the public, more than a third proved to be groundless, and 554 were followed up by vain inquiries.

The last two tables appended to the Report offer in themselves a brief history of Postal progress since the first introduction of a low uniform postage. Between 1854 and 1866 the number of letters posted rose steadily from 28,797,600 to 64,235,357. The receipts on private correspondence, which in 1853-4 under the old system were Rs. 20,48,454, fell two years later to Rs. 15,90,524. From that time however they began to rise, overtopping their old level in 1858-9, and all but doubling themselves in 1866-7. Nor is it likely that the rate of increase will diminish for many years to come, so wonderful is the elasticity of a system that appeals to the convenience of the greatest number. Its results cannot so far be compared with those of our own Post-office, where the rate of increase has of course been much greater. But after all a nett surplus of more than £200,000 a-year is something to boast of, as the fruit of an experiment only twelve years old, when we remember that the normal expenditure during that time had risen from 24 to nearly 44 lakhs of rupees, and that no returns from money-order offices figure in the balance-sheet of the years under review.

INDIA'S TRUE WORTH TO ENGLAND.

IN a comprehensive article, published in the last number of Colburn's New Monthly, on "England and her Eastern Question," Captain Venner discusses the moral and material value of our Indian Empire to the nation under whose auspices it has grown to its present size and imposing appearance. After showing by a series of carefully collected facts and figures that India is not only likely to pay, but will ere long be paying handsomely as an investment for British capital and enterprise, he proceeds to point out the political advantages of such an empire with regard to our own political greatness in the future.

The two questions indeed run so closely together that it is difficult to consider them entirely apart. It is India's paying capacity that more or less underlies all our reasoning as to the question of her political value. So rich and many are the sources of her actual and prospective growth in trade and general industry, that every year sees fresh links and stronger ties added to those which already bind the interests of England to those of her vast dependency in the East. The more capital we sink in Indian investments, the more deeply do we pledge ourselves to maintain the rule under which alone our outgoings are likely to realise a large and sure return. Every penny laid out in that direction, every Englishman added to the army of industrial pioneers on Indian ground, tends insensibly to simplify the question whether it is worth our while to labour for the continuance of our political sway over some two hundred millions of conquered Asiatics. Mr. Disraeli's bold paradox that Great Britain will henceforth be more of an Eastern than an European Power has just enough of truth in it to check the ridicule it seemed at first sight to justify. We cannot give up India without a struggle, if we would, either to the natives or to some foreign invader. It is too precious a conquest to be lightly thrown away. Do not our very fears of Russian ambition imply our sense of India's real value to ourselves? Grant that the Russians hanker after so great a prize, is it not pretty clear that what they deem worth the winning must on our part be more or less worth the keeping? It may be said indeed that pride alone would make us fight to the last for such a prize against any armed invader; but that would not be the whole or even the main reason for our resistance. Were India not worth the keeping on political and material grounds, we should find some convenient excuses for pocketing our pride.

Keeping these points in view, we need not pay much heed to the assumption that India is to us a source of weakness, because we have to keep up a large British garrison there, besides a fleet sufficient to guard the Indian seaboard and the lines of communication between the two countries. As Captain Venner justly maintains, these sources of apparent weakness may from another point of view be regarded as elements of actual strength; India being an excellent training-ground for our soldiers and a useful outlet for the energies of a great many Englishmen of our upper and middle classes. Moreover, the demand for recruits for Indian service has hitherto been met, "not only without inconvenience, but with positive benefit to the community at large." It withdraws so many hands from the English labour-market and gives in its turn a fresh impetus to our Indian trade.

As for the notion that we are morally bound to surrender the government of India in due time to the natives themselves, we had better let the discussion of it stand over to the next century or the Greek Kalends; for it cannot possibly affect our mode of dealing with any emergent question of the day. It is one thing to govern India in such a way as to develop the native capacity for political work, and to admit as many of the natives as we safely can to a share in the government of their own country. But the talk about surrendering India entirely into native hands seems to spring from sheer forgetfulness of the strange destiny that brought her into our own, and of the processes which are daily working more and more urgently to keep her there. The country is ours, won by the strength of our right arms and held by the greatness of our prestige, and we cannot lightly rid ourselves of the burden which for India's weal or woe has thus fallen to our share. If we import pure morality at all into the question, we are bound to strike a fair balance between the justice due to our own countrymen and the justice due to the Indian people; and any frank attempt to do so must either involve us in a maze of contradictions, or land us pretty much where we stood before. Would it be right for instance to abandon India to her own devices, with the almost certainty that such a step would cause her no end of immediate suffering, to be followed by her subjection to some foreign rule as much worse than our own, as Jeroboam's scorpions were worse than his father's whips? All Pharisaic cant apart, is it not evident that our duty to India forbids our surrendering that post of perilous honour, if also of practical profit, which self-interest, pride, and prudent statesmanship call upon us to defend?

That the severance of our connection with India would involve, among other things, "a terrible loss of prestige," we see no grounds for disputing. But that consideration, taken by itself, need not count for much in the general reckoning. The lost prestige might soon be recovered, and a good deal of our Indian trade might still flow along the accustomed channels. At worst the talent and enterprise that now seek fit careers in India would turn aside to more accessible fields in the Pacific or the Atlantic Ocean. The mere dread of losing prestige in Europe need not deter us from abandoning India, if any valid pleas of justice or sound policy could be adduced in favour of such a course. As one however of many good reasons for staying where we are, the argument about prestige should not be overlooked.

With regard to our prestige in India itself, we are inclined to think that the author has made much too little of so important a safeguard for the continuance of our rule. We hold India, he argues, by the sword alone; an assertion which seems to put out of view a whole body of evidence pointing to a conclusion wider and less brutally simple than his own. At best the assertion is only half a truth. Our moral influence, our prestige in short, founded may be on the success of our arms, but indefinitely strengthened by our mode of governing the peoples whom our arms subdued, must surely be taken into account in analysing the sources of our past progress and present supremacy. A thousand resolute British soldiers might have walked through India during the troubles of 1857; but how many myriads would it need to ensure our hold upon the vast Peninsula for a twelvemonth, if once the great body of the people rose up in arms against their present masters? Our Indian prestige never perhaps stood higher than it has done since the great mutiny, which was also, let us own, a partial rebellion; but let anything happen to upset that moral bulwark of our rule, and we should find our swords but weak instruments against the uprising of a united people, aided as they would be by some powerful foreign ally.

All this however is of course no argument for setting too much trust in native loyalty, or for neglecting to keep up that show of armed strength, the want of which helped to bring about the crisis of 1857. It would be madness not to make the most of the warnings forced upon us in that terrible year. Nothing should ever tempt us again to reduce our Indian garrisons to a number inadequate for ordinary needs, or to leave any important fort or arsenal once more in native hands. At the same time there is no use in burdening the Indian exchequer with too many British troops, in view of the evergrowing facilities for despatching more from home. With the Euphrates Valley Railway and the line from Kurrachee to Peshawar once completed, our Indian garrisons might safely be weakened by a third or so of their present numbers. On parts of the latter line engineers are already working; but the other, which is equally necessary to strengthen the chain that binds the two countries, still waits for the guarantee which English statesmen are still perversely unwilling to give.

Looking at the late turn of events in Turkistan and at the clouds on Europe's political horizon, we should like to see both these undertakings pressed forward without further delay. A line that would bring Kurrachee within twelve and Lahore within fifteen days' journey of England ought to recommend itself, whether for political or commercial uses. It is with the political we have now to deal. Such a line is wanted against the not wholly improbable event of a war with France, and the rather more probable event of a war with Russia. On the latter question indeed our author's views are perhaps too deeply tinged with the hues which Mr. Vambéry would make as popular in England as they are in France and Germany. Nevertheless, under the conditions of our Indian rule, it is well for us to stand forearmed against the chances of an inroad on our North-Western frontier. Russia has plenty of work cut out for her on the Oxus for many years to come, and will certainly think very long before trying to force her way over the Hindu-Khoosh or the Suleiman. Still, by way of mere precaution, it may well behove us to keep our rifles handy and the powder dry. Captain Venner rightly deprecates the notion of occupying Quettah, Herat, or Cabul, as tending "to embroil us with the Afghan people;" but his own idea of building, within Afghan and Cashmeerie borders, forts commanding the passes into India seems to our thinking hardly more practicable. All such measures would only breed ill-will among our immediate neighbours, and provoke suspicious countermoves on the part of our Northern rival. Nor do we like the notion of entangling India in an offensive alliance with Afghanistan. A wiser policy would rather lead us to complete our lines of railways and strong posts from the sea to Peshawar, and to cultivate the goodwill of frontier tribes and princes by means of subsidies, missions, and commercial treaties. It will be time enough to talk of more active measures when a Russian army begins its march on Herat or Cashmere.

Correspondence.

THE OLD BANK OF BOMBAY.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—Being the counsel who drew the memorial of the shareholders of the Bank of Bombay, which is printed in the Blue-book, I should be glad if you would kindly allow me space for a few remarks on the article in your last issue on the subject.

A great legal authority in Scotland has no doubt given an opinion that sufficient stress was not laid in the memorial on the Government's admitting the clause regarding the loan on shares of public companies into the altered Bank Act, and that this will suffice to render it legally liable for all losses to the shareholders; but I am sure he never would have expressed such an opinion if he had been as well acquainted with the circumstances as I am. For what are the circumstances? Why, that in 1862, long before the gambling mania had set in at Bombay, a proposal was made by the directors of the Bank to extend the Bank's lending powers, with a view to an increase of its business; six of those directors being the shareholders' own nominees, and three the nominees of the Government. To this request of the shareholders themselves, the Government, after some delay, seems to have assented, and the necessary Act was introduced in 1863 for the purpose. It was duly passed through all its stages and became law; and it was then published in the Gazette, and in all the Indian almanacs and calendars, without, be it observed, a single word of objection on the part of anyone. As soon as it became law, the shareholders were called together in general meeting by the directors, and asked to double their capital, to meet the intended business opened up under the Act, and they did so. They were afterwards invited to double the doubled capital, and they assented. Shares went up, everything seemed to be going on swimmingly, when some five years and a-half after its being first proposed to alter the Act, and some four years and a-half after its being actually altered, the Bank was found to be ruined.

This being so, no ingenuity (as I from the first told the shareholders) can get over the legal presumption of acquiescence on the part of the shareholders then established; and I will venture to say that the eminent legal authority in question, as well as every other legal authority in England and Scotland, will quite agree with me.

As to the endeavour now being made to establish the theory that the insertion of the clause in question was procured by the fraud of some of the mercantile members of the then direction, I can only repeat here what I have said over and over again before, that in nothing put before me when the memorial was being prepared, or that has come to my knowledge since, can I see the slightest warrant for it. If I had done so, I should have thrown up the case as a hopeless one; and if it now be proved to have been so, there is an end of it. If the ruin of the bank was attributable to this clause, and if this clause was inserted through the fraud of the nominees of the shareholders, it is as clear as daylight that their claim on the Government is gone; and there is a complete end to the case set up by the memorial.—I have the honour to remain, Sir, your most obedient servant,

LEX.

Temple, September 12, 1868.

[Lawyers like doctors are apt to differ, but we cannot see that "Lex" has here proved himself the better lawyer of the two. Is it true that the shareholders were fully acquainted with the changes actually made in the Bank Charter? If so, how could the Bombay Government have remained ignorant of what was done with their own sanction? If they were not ignorant, are they not liable for the results?—ED. A. I. M.]

MR. MAINE'S BILL AGAINST LOAFERS.

The Friend of India thinks that Mr. Maine's new Bill promises to put down loafing and protect society with the minimum of interference and expense on the part of the State. Following the recommendations of the Madras Government, which are based on the analogies of the English law of pauper removal, he would establish workhouses under governors, or license those already in existence; would commit to such places all vagrants of European extraction; and would force them to work, or, failing that, would deport them to England with a month's subsistence allowance in their pocket on landing. He would stop the source of supply by preventing ship-masters from bringing to India persons of so well-defined a class as time-expired convicts and ticket-of-leave men. He would associate benevolent persons with the proposed workhouses—which should rather be termed "houses of industry" to prevent prejudices arising—as a committee, and would place the governor under that body. Thus institutions like those in the three Presidency cities for such vagrants would be improved and strengthened without being interfered with. The whole cost of the houses of industry and of deportation, so far as not provided by charitable persons, would be met by the State except in the case of vagrants who have not been in India a year. The private employers of labour, who imported such persons, would be required to pay the expense of their deportation, which would not probably exceed £30. When committed to a house of industry vagrants who are European British subjects would not be allowed to plead their privilege. The Bill is not likely to meet with opposition in this country from any of the classes interested. Such large importers of European labour as the railways generally make three years' contracts with their servants, we believe, under which the latter are entitled to return passages on medical certificate. Other importers cannot object to a provision which makes them pay so little for the error of selecting servants who break down physically or morally within so short a period as twelve months. Alluding to the extraordinary views expressed by Sir W. Mansfield when in Bombay, Mr. Maine very justly remarks in his Statement of Objects and Reasons, that the one year's provision "is not open to the objections which might be taken to an extreme view, and indeed is so manifestly fair as to preclude the necessity of going into the abstract question." The loafer himself may object to be deprived of his privilege as a European British subject, of being committed only by a European justice of the peace and tried by a High, or Chief, or Recorder's Court Judge. None can be more jealous than we are of the slightest attempt to introduce whatever savours of the Black Act. The justification of opposition to such an Act as this, that the more it is resisted the sooner the native tribunals will be raised to the level of those to which the Englishman has a right in whatever part of her Majesty's dominions he may be. But in so small a question as a charge of vagrancy, involving no worse sentence than work for daily bread or a free passage to England and a month's subsistence allowance, any talk of the Black Act would be out of place. At any rate European vagrancy will not be effectually remedied in India, unless the Englishman who is so degraded as to choose a vagrant's life is treated like the American, German or Frenchman who does the same. The almost shadowy risk of seeming to favour a Black Act may be incurred rather than that the burden of vagrancy should be longer endured. We are not so sure of the assent of England and the Colonies to this measure. Objections have been made more than once in Parliament to the shipment of lunatics from India to England, a humane duty on our part which cost India £7,762 last year. Vagrants are in a very different position from lunatics; their number is comparatively small, they belong to a class which is fed by the army, the mercantile marine and the jails of England, and they cause serious political evil in India. The Australian Colonies have no ground of objection.

A RED SEA TELEGRAPH.

The Times of India does not think that India is at all likely to be lost to England for want of a Red Sea Telegraph; but it can imagine many cases in which a swift and sure means of communication entirely in English hands would be of great political value. Sir Stafford Northcote's arguments in defence of the present lines were applicable only to the immediate situation of affairs. But neither did he deny that there might come a time when, through some European conflagration, the sole existing means of communication between the two countries should be in the hands of our enemies, and all the value of the lines would be lost to us in a political point of view, if not in a commercial one also. The fact is he was fettered by his two-fold position in the House. As Secretary for India he owned himself without any means applicable to such a purpose, and as a Cabinet Minister he could not impugn the decision which the Government had come to with regard to guarantees in general. If Government co-operation is desired, it will be necessary to go to the fountain-head and boldly impugn before Parliament the State policy of refusing to admit any exceptions to the rule laid down. Let this, then, be the course pursued; and though we cannot augur success, at least we shall have the satisfaction of hearing something like an explanation of the advantage to be derived from subordinating political expediency to stubborn adherence to a general principle arbitrarily adopted. On the other hand, it is for the commercial community to consider whether they, too, are not cutting their own throats by waiting for an Imperial guarantee, because they conceive that as a matter of justice the State should co-operate, as being partaker to a large extent of the expected benefits of the line. If the line will pay as a speculation—and all the estimates seem to agree on this point—why pause because others will be profited who have borne no share of the expense? Am I not to improve the staple of my cotton, and, sending it to the market in the most perfect state of cleanliness, secure an extra price for it, because the English consignee will also, at no additional expense, secure an extra farthing profit? Am I not to plant trees on my estate, if it will pay me to do so, because somebody else passing by will enjoy their shade? Fortunately for the world there are numberless cases in which a man in profiting himself cannot help benefiting others at the same time, and when the other party benefited is our own country, are we not in a sort of way doubly advantaging ourselves? Therefore, although we might fairly have expected the State to lend a helping hand, when we see that it absolutely refuses to co-operate, and there is no probability of any change being wrought in the official heart, it becomes a question whether an independent course of action should not be at once adopted. It has been argued, indeed, that the existing line through Persia, being worked by the Government, would operate as a bar to the success of another undertaking. But we believe that this would prove a fallacy. The most efficient line would be sure to monopolise the traffic, let it be in whose hands it might. Of all things in the world, a dilatory system of telegraphy is about the most useless, and a line which could guarantee the delivery of a message in Bombay, say twelve hours after it left London, would have no cause to fear the rivalry of a line which is subject to all the changes and chances which a passage through divers nations and tongues entails. Something to this effect was owned by the Secretary of State when he hinted that it would be suicidal for the Government to try to cut out the Persian line by another through Egypt, and so render useless all the heavy expenditure of the past. The argument is not a good one, and of course would be indefensible if seriously propounded as reason for refusing to promote the new scheme; but it conveys a certain amount of assurance to those for whose benefit it was not intended. The scheme in its entirety is no doubt a large one, and would require a very considerable amount of capital. But even if the cis-Egyptian portion alone were worked out, an immense gain would be effected, and tolerable accuracy, pace, and security ensured, and this would probably satisfy all the requirements of the commercial world, which would be the principal customer, and doubtless the Government itself would soon follow suit in making use of it.

A DIFFICULT QUESTION.

The Friend of India remarks that some time ago the High Court of Madras, upsetting a conviction by the Judge of Guntur, decided that an apostate from Christianity, who has married a Christian wife, may on his return to Hindooism marry as many wives as are allowed by Hindoo law without being guilty of bigamy. The judgment has excited the indignation of the Bishop of Madras and the missionaries of Southern India against the Court, as if the Christian marriage had been annulled. Practically it may be so, but legally the Christian wife is entitled to all her rights, whatever they may be worth in the case of an apostate husband with a second and Hindoo wife. Where the judgment is to blame, it seems to us, is in the levity with which the question of reversion to Hindooism is treated. It is not enough to look upon it as a matter of religious equality. Obviously the bribe which Hindooism can hold out, of power to live in polygamy, has no counterpart in the inverse case. Many of the best legal authorities believe that no sufficient authority can be given for the position that a Hindoo convert to Christianity can be readmitted to caste. But it is a curious proof of the way in which Hindooism, in spite of its pretended immobility, does accommodate itself to circumstances, that the Southern Brahmins have invented their doctrine of reconversion, the ceremonial of readmission with them consisting, we are told, in branding with a hot iron the tongue which has confessed Christ. We fear we are not politically strong enough to disaffirm legislatively the doctrine of the Court and declare the second marriage invalid. Indeed it is not to be thought of as practicable. The necessity is all the greater that relief be given by the legislature to the injured Christian wife. How this is to be done without recognising the legality of the return of a so-called Christian to Hindooism we leave it to Mr. Maine to discover. The most intolerant Hindoo will allow the wrong done to the Christian wife and the justice of giving her relief. The question is both most curious in the history of marriage laws and customs and is of vital importance to the infant Native Church, not only in Madras but all over India.

THE DUTIES OF A PARAMOUNT POWER.

The Times of India holds that we dare not, we cannot, shake off our responsibility as the Paramount Power. Our true policy is to look that responsibility fairly and full in the face, and to fulfil it. What then is it? The duty, now and again, of deposing a Nawab, for some flagitious crime? A good deal more than that, if we understand it aright. Protecting the native princes, alike from foreign aggression and internal rebellion; we are responsible for the good government of their territories as much as of our own, and until we look that responsibility in the face and fulfil it, we shall be justly open to the charge of the annexation party, that we sacrifice the people of India for the sake of their princes. The truth is, the political system of the empire has yet to be created. We are waiting for a statesman to arrive, and do the work. A well-digested code of the empire is wanted; and a tribunal before which such cases as that of Tonk should be carried for solemn judgment. It is essential that we should elicit political life out of the native States, and that we should weld the whole of India into an empire. A code, which should define the rights and responsibilities of all the princes of the empire, and the sovereign prerogatives of the Paramount Power, is a first necessity of our circumstances, where we are content with treaties and agreements, which while carefully to be respected in their spirit are not to be tolerated when pleaded in bar of the prior rights of the people. Our own belief is, that twice at least in the course of every Viceroyalty an Imperial Diet of all the Governors and princes of India should be assembled in one of the metropolitan cities of the empire. The influence which such a Diet might exert, if made a High Court of Justice to try offenders like him of Tonk, and to investigate charges of misrule and oppression made against other native princes, would be very great. The power of such a tribunal to educate the native princes of the country would simply be incalculable; while their dread of being arraigned before it, and deposed by fiat of the Diet for persistent misrule, would give the residents a weight in every native Court which they now too often want. Thus the Gackwar, who is charged at once with cruelly oppressing his subjects, and squandering the resources of his treasury, would have to appear and clear himself before the Diet, or suffer deposition in favour of another prince of his lineage. Instead of presiding over the fortunes of Calcutta, the Supreme Government of India, now only so in name, would charge itself with the presidentship of the whole empire; the presidencies, and provinces, and native princes, all assisting by their representatives in assembled Diet. Instead of isolating ourselves from the native princes, our true policy is to associate them with us, and to beget a general rivalry amongst the provinces in the art of good government. The maintenance of an Imperial army for external defence; the strength of native contingents; the amount of native subsidies; the establishment of universities and popular education; the pressure of the land revenue; the salt excise; the railway system, would all form questions, the discussion of which, if not their final settlement, in such a Diet would have an extraordinary effect upon the native States. The personal attendance of the princes of these States might be dispensed with, at all events until they chose to come of themselves, then the mere excitement of such an assembly would form sufficient attraction to gather them together ever afterwards. They could be represented at first by their Ministers; and who can estimate the effects which the personal contact of the Viceroy with these men would have upon them? Our present selfish isolation from the native States is productive of nothing but harm both to ourselves and to them; while the Supreme Government of India, instead of bending all its energies to the exercise of paramount influence and oversight of all the governors and princes of India, buries itself in the detail of administrative work which ought to be left exclusively to the local Governments. Queen Victoria will never be Empress of India until some such step is taken, nor shall we ever fulfil our responsibility to the people of the native States while we isolate ourselves from them as we do now.

INDIAN VISITORS TO ENGLAND.

Indian Public Opinion, commenting on the new scheme for sending native students to England at the public cost, thinks the suggestion of the Viceroy might be carried a little further without any danger. It is well to send youths to England for education, who may or may not ever enter the Government service, and not one out of ten of whom will ever be able to pass the Civil Service Examination, but it is undoubtedly wise to send to England native officials of family, of intelligence and proved loyalty, who would, on their return, be a strength to Government, whose ideas would have become cosmopolitan, and whose influence would naturally be exerted on the side of progress. There are many men in the Punjab such as we have described who would be delighted to visit England, and who would start at once, if they only received some necessary assistance. Among others we might mention Agha Kalbabad, Extra Assistant Commissioner, Amin Chand, Extra Assistant Commissioner, Muhammad Haiyat Khan, Extra Assistant Commissioner, and Risaldar Anup Singh, Man, of Probyn's Horse. All that the Government would be required to do would be what is now proposed by Sir John Lawrence—viz., the payment of their passage money; a reasonable allowance while in England, and the term of their absence to count towards pension. The details of the scheme could be easily arranged later if the general idea were approved. Gentlemen like these we have mentioned would not be required to study like school boys, but they might be expected to attend lectures at the London University or elsewhere, on the subjects in which they were most interested, or which would be more closely connected with their official life. The military men would have to visit the arsenals, dockyards, and manufactories of arms and warlike stores; while civil officials might make themselves acquainted with the practice of our law courts, our constitution, the system of our jails and police and municipal government, and a thousand other things, the knowledge of which would be eminently useful on their return to India. This is all we wish directly to advocate, yet we hope that the time may come when all minors in the court of wards will be sent, as a matter of course, to England for their education. The State would be put to no expense, and the advantage to the children themselves would be incalculable. The last two wards who have escaped from the protection of the Court, which seems without remonstrance to allow them to be debauched or swindled, are Raja Harbans Singh and Sirdar Dyal Singh Majithia. Does any one who knows the history of these young men, both of great amiability of disposition, not believe that it would have been a thousand times better if they could have been removed, ten years ago, to England, and have returned well educated gentlemen, able to take an active and intelligent interest in the progress of their country and a real share in its administration?

UNCOVENANTED LEAVE RULES.

The Bombay Gazette thinks that if the rumours abroad be but true, we shall find that the authorities who are drawing up the new Leave Rules are fully alive to the fact which medical men are, strange to say, all agreed on, namely, that English gentlemen who belong to both branches of the Civil Service are formed of the same flesh and blood, and consequently require the same climatic changes to retain their health. This is a point gained, and shows the great increase of scientific knowledge which distinguishes our day. We have frequently heard it stated that the great difficulty of Government in the matter of forming furlough rules for the Uncovenanted Service is that the majority of its members are natives of this country, and that regulations which would be suitable to them would not satisfy the European requirements. This is undoubtedly true, but we cannot see where the difficulty arises. We agree that there should be but one set of rules, regardless of race, and so let it be. As it appears to us no native of India can require any lengthened period of leave unless he proposes travelling in other countries. For a similar reason, members of the Civil Service in England are not granted leave for long periods. If, however, the European, after a certain number of years' service, desires to revisit his native country, let him be granted leave as is the Covenanted civilian. Let the rules, however, be open to all, and if the native likes to take leave out of India, give him the same privilege. By visiting England he would strengthen his mind just as the European does his body, and in both cases the State gains by the increased ability of its servants. Finally, let both races enjoy their usual privilege leave in India, which, as regards the native, would ensure him quite as much leave in India as an English civil servant gets every year from his office in London.

THE EUPHRATES VALLEY LINE.

The Mudras Times thinks that such a line would divert an enormous portion of traffic from the sea to the rail, while, like the telegraph and all rapid modes of communication with London, the heart of the British empire, it would sensibly lessen the influences of Indian magnates. A route that offers communication with London in ten or fourteen days, and which would be more economical than the present overland or long sea transit, is emphatically the route upon which mails, passengers, light merchandise, and even troops would be despatched to and from India, and the completion of the Euphrates Valley line would open a new era for the East hitherto but dreamt of by our sagacious statesmen. There are objections to the route we readily admit; but they are objections of such trifling proportions as not to be worth taking into account in a work offering such extraordinary benefits to the East, and to, we may say, the whole British empire. Transshipping goods where seas intervene is doubtless the great difficulty of a railroad to England; but this difficulty has been surmounted in the present overland transit to a degree that renders it almost infinitesimal. It is true that the transshipments would be more frequent; but then time is gained, and that to the extent of one half of that expended at present between India and England. They are difficulties, we repeat, of but trifling consequence, so long as London is brought within the easy distance of ten days from Bombay or Kurrachee—the ever desirable consummation. "What would be the expense of a 'through ticket' first class, from Bombay to London by the Euphrates Valley route?" is a question we often hear in connection with this railway. We will roughly endeavour to illustrate it by comparison, and as the route from London to Dublin, via the London and North-Western line, combines land and sea transit, it will serve our purpose. For £3 a first class traveller is transmitted "through" from Kingstown to Euston-square. We will roughly state the distance to be 400 miles, the greater portion of it over the most costly railroad in the world. Admit the distance per rail from Kurrachee to London to be in round numbers 4,000 miles, the fare, according to the London and Dublin route, for a first class passenger, would be just £42; but as we have only made the roughest calculation, and have not allowed for extra expenses, let us liberally double it, and say that a first class passenger can be conveyed to London from Bombay by rail in ten days at a cost of £82! What other route can be compared to this? None. It is the route of the future, and we can only heartily regret that it is not the route of the present. We hope, although it is almost against hope, that the English and Indian Governments will wake out of their intolerable apathy, and start the line. They might guarantee it, we think, without danger of subsequent loss, for in a commercial and political view it should be the most important line in the world. Let our double Government actively urge its speedy accomplishment, and millions will quickly be found for its construction.

BOKHARA NEWS.—The following news was received at Cabul from Bokhara. The accounts are from a letter dated Khilm, 12th Rahecoolawal (4th July), quoting from Bokhara letters:—"General Kaufmann, the Russian Governor-general in Turkistan, subsequently to the capture of Samarkand at the end of May last concluded a treaty with the Shah of Bokhara, to which his Majesty and his principal councillors have attached their seals. The Shah, according to the terms which the Russian General had so long insisted upon, was, first, to pay to the Russians a lac and a-half tillahs of gold annually as tribute; second, he was to allow the Russians full authority to raise three cantonments at three different places—viz., at Karshi, Charjui, on the banks of the Oxus, and Krimineh. The Shah was allowed the undisturbed possession of Bokhara, and it was even the wish of the General that should he prove faithful to the Russians in fulfilling the engagements now entered into, Samarkand might be restored to him. First of all the Russians contemplate erecting a strong military post on the banks of the River Zerafshan to the north of Samarkand. From the last-named station to Bokhara a royal road shall be constructed for the convenience of travellers, at the expense of the Bokhara Government, as already decided. The Russians are to deliver to the Shah the Beks and others captured by them in the late siege of Samarkand and the engagement at Nooratta, and to receive as ransom one thousand tillahs of gold per head. The Shah was further to take special care of the safety of the caravans and kafilahs of merchandise that pass between Orenburgh and the River Amoo, as far as his own territory was concerned. The Russian General, after the conclusion of the peace, ordered the army at Samarkand to return to its head-quarters—Tashkund and Jazuk—a small number of troops only remaining at the first-mentioned place sufficient to hold it."—Bombay Gazette.

STATION TALK.

DALHOUSIE, July 26.—The new road to the Chumba valley is now under construction, and is expected to be finished and open for traffic in two or three months. It promises to be a very good one, though in some places near this it is not so broad as it might be; then, on the other hand, the soil through which the road lies is a remarkably rocky one, and has involved a great deal of blasting. The scenery through which the road passes is very grand and beautiful, affording, as it does, nearly the whole way a continuous view of the snowy range. The working parties of the 38th Regiment are busy constructing roads, which reflect the greatest credit on them, the breadth of the roads being fourteen feet. The men appear very robust and healthy, and are evidently well cared for, and the only cause of regret is that Government does not employ many more, instead of keeping them in the plains wasting their time and undermining their constitutions. There is ample space and employment for a far greater number than there are at present here, and huts are erected with the greatest ease. A new post-office is being erected, where the road from the plains leads into the station, and close to the church. The present one is no better than a jampanni's hut, and I can assure you I don't exaggerate in describing it as such, and is not to be compared to my cook-house. The church is a temporary one, I believe, the building being entirely of wood, reminding one of the many wee kirks in Scotland. The noise caused by heavy rain beating on the planking almost prevents our hearing the clergyman during Divine service, and had he not a strong voice we might as well be in our houses.—Delhi Gazette Correspondent.

HAZARA, Aug. 9.—We are threatened with another Umbeyla business, and the frontier is so disturbed now that nothing short of a campaign of Abyssinian dimensions is expected. About the end of last month intelligence was brought to Abbottabad that some tribes from the "Black Mountain" (which lies between this and the Indus), about five hundred strong, had advanced into the Agroah valley and attacked a thannah which is being built at a place called Oghee, about forty miles from here, in a north-westerly direction. A force of about twenty police held out against the enemy in an enclosed place with great resolution, and drove off their assailants with a loss of at least half a dozen of their number. The police themselves appear to have escaped without a single casualty. They were speedily reinforced from the Abbottabad garrison by Colonel Rothney, who immediately marched to their relief with the 5th Goorkhas and one of the two Mountain Train mule batteries of artillery which are quartered at Abbottabad. The enemy assuming a threatening attitude and mustering stronger daily, a wing of the 2nd Punjab Infantry had to be sent for, leaving the other wing and one mountain train battery to garrison Abbottabad. These will probably soon follow, and be relieved by a regiment or two from Rawul Pindee. A company of Europeans are coming in from the working party on the Murree and Abbottabad road as I write. Major Pollock, commissioner, and Captain Ommanney, deputy-commissioner, were soon to the front; and one of the results of their presence has been the arrival en route to Rawul Pindee, under arrest, of some influential natives from the interior, who, it seems, are to be held responsible, as living in our territory, for the attack upon the thannah. But these are political mysteries, which I do not pretend to know anything about. Anyhow, our politicals are in favour of war, and if they can only persuade the powers-that-be to try a policy of masterly activity, instead of putting off the evil and expensive work sine die, war there will be. The weather is more favourable for military operations than anything else at present. The rains are gone nobody knows whither.

AGRA, August 11.—We have had a novelty here in the shape of a specimen of the Hindoo drama. The company is a Bombay company, and I should think their performance must be highly popular with the natives, who naturally enter into the plot and feel more sympathy with it than Englishmen can do. Unfortunately they have no scenery. The Hindoo theatre at Agra in 1868 is in the same condition as was the Greek theatre in the days of Thespis, and the English in the days of Elizabeth, for even the immortal Shakespeare was acted without scenery. Of course where there is no scenery the imagination of the audience must supply it. I must, however, do the Hindoo artists the justice to say that so far as extravagance in dress, gesture, gesticulation, and shouting can do so, they endeavour to make up for the want of scenery. Like the early drama among the Greeks and the "mysteries" of the middle ages in England, the Hindoo drama is exclusively devoted to the illustration of religious subjects; the feelings are excited by the aspect of virtue, that is, religion suffering for awhile and eventually triumphant over the powers of evil. One does not of course know much about the habits of demons and deotas in their private life, but natives themselves are remarkably impassive; they exhibit much less than we do the influence of emotional feelings by outward gesture, their acting therefore is a much more simple piece of business than it is with us. If demons indeed wear the frightfully hot dresses that the demons on the stage wore last night, are always jumping about and gesticulating and yelling as they were the whole night, then if I were a demon I should much prefer belonging to the polar than the tropical regions. Such incessant exercise may not be unpleasant in an ice-bound country where jumping about keeps the blood circulating, but jumping about for three or four hours with the thermometer at 94 and a muggy atmosphere is very terrible if it be not demoniacal. It is time I gave the reader the outline of the plot, which in the shape of a programme is printed and given to the European portion of the audience, so that they may be able to follow the action though they may not understand or not be able to catch the dialogue. You must know a language very well to catch every word said upon the stage. I thought I had a tolerable acquaintance with Hindee, but I found I could understand much less of the dialogue than I expected. After some conversation between Vidhooshuts, the clown, Gunaish and Suroosotee, the God and Goddess of Sciences and Arts will be invoked and blessings obtained for the actors. Birth of Hirunkushub the demon; his durbar; Narid's appearance in his Court informing him of the death of his brother by the hand of Barahjee the Third; incarnation of the Hindoo deity and advising him to revenge the death. Hearing this, Hirunkushub goes to the hills and worships the Brihmma; Brihmma accepts his devotions and blesses him with the promise that his death will not be caused either during the day or night by man or beast, on the earth or in heaven, or by any weapon. Encouraged by this promise he returns to his kingdom, kills and troubles the Brahmins and ascetics. Birth of Pehladi, as Hirunkushub's son. Pehladi was sent to school, and there he takes God's name and calls Him his creator; teacher's astonishment and fear, and requesting Pehladi not to mention again the name of his father's enemy; Pehladi's repeating it and the teacher's reporting the matter to Hirunkushub; his abhorrence and anger, and ordering his ministers to kill Pehladi. In pursuance of the order, Pehladi was thrown from a hill, afterwards in boiling oil, then tied up to an elephant's leg, and after all caused his own mother to give him a cup of deadly poison, but he escaped without injury by the hands of Him whose name he first took and did not cease to take, despite all these trials. His entreaties reach heaven, and Nursingjee the fourth incarnation of the Hindoo deity, appears in the world with the face of a lion and the body of a man. Battle between Hirunkushub and Nursingjee; the latter is victorious, and kills the demon by the nails of his hands, and thus fulfils the promise of Brihmma. The play will terminate with native music, prayers for our Queen, and for the health of the officers of the station.—Delhi Gazette Correspondent.

DELHI, August 9.—The great and almost the only topic of interest is the want of rain. The heat is terribly trying, more so perhaps than it has been all through the season; and apparently there is no chance of rain at present; we have not had a drop for more than a fortnight. General S. Abbott, the newly appointed agent of the Punjab Railway, has been here, and has visited the line between Delhi and Meerut. I believe some definite arrangements were made for opening the line beyond Meerut, and running the trains into Delhi independent of the East India Railway line. I do not know what these arrangements are.—Delhi Gazette Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

KEONGHUR.—A curious incident in the "little war" going on in the State of Keonghur, in Bengal, is the temporary extension of the Whipping Act (VI. of 1864) to that part of that country.

ARRIVAL FROM ENGLAND.—The undermentioned officer has reported his return from England:—Lieut.-colonel J. P. Briggs, of Infantry, date of arrival at Bombay 10th July last.

ILL-HEALTH OF SIR H. DURAND.—The Pioneer learns with regret that the country will lose for a time the services of Sir Henry Durand. His health is said to be much shaken, and he goes home, we believe, in the course of September.

MORE ARMSTRONG BATTERIES.—The Secretary of State has given orders for the increase in the number of batteries of Armstrong guns in India. Commanding officers of divisions have been called on to send in reports on their requirements in this direction.

NEW MEMBER OF COUNCIL.—The Hon. Michael John Maxwell Shaw Stewart to be an additional member of the Council of the Governor-general for the purpose of making laws and regulations only. This nomination will take effect from the 28th August, 1868.

MUNICIPAL, PUNJAB.—The following gentlemen have been elected to serve as the municipal committee of Dhurmsala for the year 1868-69:—Colonel Prior, Major White, Dr. Craddock, Balak Ram, Muhammad Bukhsh, Dugra, Lumberdar.

DISMISSAL FROM THE SERVICE.—In conformity with the sentence of a district court-martial, Assistant Apothecary Thomas Preston, of the Subordinate Medical Department, is dismissed the service, with effect from 30th June.

MEDICAL PENSION.—Hon. Assistant-surgeon G. Law, Civil, Bhundara district, having been declared by a medical committee to be unfit for further active service, is transferred to the pension establishment, with permission to reside and draw his stipend in India.

LUCKIMPORE.—Some fears are again entertained in Luckimpore, we hear, of Abor raids. The Abors, it is said, have directed their attention chiefly in their more recent expeditions to the capture of children, for whose release they demand a heavy ransom.—Englishman.

A REVISED STAMP ACT.—There is some talk of a revision of the Stamp Act. The Government has called on the local administrations to submit a statement, showing the number of cases instituted in each zillah during the last three years, and the amount of stamp fees levied thereon.—Englishman.

THE REMOVAL OF THE HIGH COURT.—We learn on good authority that the High Court officials will come to Allahabad from Agra in the beginning of November. One Divisional Bench, with the Chief Justice, will remain behind for three or four months, until everything is thoroughly prepared and settled here.—Pioneer.

OFFICIAL.—Mr. G. H. M. Batten has been appointed Under Secretary to the Government of India in the Financial Department on a salary of Rs. 1,500 per mensem. The appointment is subject to the approval of the Secretary of State. His Excellency at the same time ruled that the sum granted to Mr. Batten should be taken as the pay of all Under Secretaries to the Government of India.

PROMOTION OF NON-COMMISSIONED OFFICERS TO COMMISSIONS.—The Right Hon. the Governor-General in Council is pleased to determine that, in the event of a non-commissioned officer of a British regiment being promoted to a commissioned grade, the latter shall be considered a first appointment, and as such he will be entitled to proceed at the public expense to join the corps to which he may be appointed.

REGIMENTAL MOONSHEES.—It recently happened in a British regiment that the schoolmaster was appointed by the regimental authorities to act as Moonshee. This was irregular; and, to prevent mistakes in future, commanding officers are informed that a schoolmaster cannot be nominated to act as regimental Moonshee under G.G.O. 755 of August 3rd, 1865. Pay can only be drawn for a person regularly entertained as Moonshee in the ordinary sense of the term.

RUMOURS FROM THE N.W.—The Delhi Gazette hears from the north-west that the Bazootees beyond Kohat are still unsettled and turbulent, and that the blockade of the tribes beyond Hoti Murdan cannot yet be withdrawn, their attitude being still anything but conciliatory and peaceable. This, combined with the information given above, indicates the existence of the elements of disturbance upon the frontier. Can Feroze Shah have anything to say to it?

3RD PUNJAB CAVALRY.—APPOINTMENTS.—The Regimental Order, dated Kohat, July 14 last, making the following appointments, to officiate during the absence of Major Jones, is confirmed (July 29):—Lieuts. Anderson, 2nd Squadron Officer and officiating 2nd in Command, as Commandant; Macpherson, Adjutant, as 2nd in Command; Davidson, 2nd Squadron Subaltern, as Adjutant, in addition to his other duties.

REDUCTION OF ARTILLERY BATTERIES.—Under instructions from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India, and with the sanction of Government, one garrison battery of the 20th Brigade, and two garrison batteries of the 23rd Brigade Royal Artillery, will be reduced on the withdrawal of the batteries from the Straits. The non-commissioned officers and men will be absorbed in the remaining batteries of Royal Artillery in the Madras Presidency in such manner as the Commander-in-Chief of that presidency may deem best for the service.

FURLONGHS.—The following civil service furloughs have been granted:—Mr. W. E. Bryan, an assistant in 5th class of the Financial Department, two years, in addition to the usual preparatory leave. Mr. Bryan availed himself of the preparatory leave on the 1st August. Captain H. E. Mottet, 2nd class assistant superintendent, Mysore Commission, reported his departure on the 7th July for Europe. Mr. R. King, of the Bengal Civil Service, has reported his departure from India per steam ship Simla, which vessel was left by the pilot at sea on the 20th July.

PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT.—Under instructions from the Government of India, a new executive division will be formed for carrying out the remodelling of the Barce Doab Canal. The division will be called the "Barce Doab Canal Special Works Division," and will be constituted with effect from the 15th July, 1868. The following appointments are made to the new division:—Lieutenant Palmer, S.C., Executive Engineer, 4th grade, on special duty, in executive charge; Mr. Glasgow, Assistant Engineer, 1st grade, from 1st division Barce Doab Canal; Mr. Higham, Assistant Engineer, 1st grade, from 1st division Barce Doab Canal, Madhopore workshops.

A ROYAL VISITOR EXPECTED.—The Duke of Edinburgh will visit India in the cold weather. His welcome will be a hearty one from all classes, both on personal as well as public grounds. It would be but right that the Prince, who may hereafter be called to reign over the millions of India, and who has visited America and the Holy Land, should extend his travels so as to see for himself the vastness and importance of England's great dependency. But if for reasons which we need not discuss, this cannot be, then England could send us no more welcome representative of the Royal family than the Sailor Prince, whose misadventure in Australia has stirred every corner of India with sympathy.—Englishman.

H.S.H. PRINCE FREDERIC OF SCHLESWIG HOLSTEIN was well, at Barnsowlay, in Cashmere, on the 23rd July. His Highness may be expected through Delhi early in November next; where he will remain for a few days to enable him to visit the Kootub and other sights of Delhi.—Mofussilite.

THOMASON COLLEGE.—The following officers are permitted to join the Officers' Surveying Class at the Thomason College, Roorkee, on Oct. 1 next:—Capt. Buller, late 5th European Light Cavalry, officiating second in command and squadron officer, 11th Bengal Cavalry; Ensign Rudman, 38th Foot; Capt. Illingworth, 85th Foot; Lieut. Harden, General List, Infantry, 1st Wing Subaltern 22nd Native Infantry.

PUNJAB FRONTIER FORCE.—H.E. the Governor-general in Council is pleased to make the following temporary appointments in No. 3 Horse Light Field Battery:—Captain Abbott, of the R.A., 1st Subaltern, Huzara Mountain Battery and Officiating Commandant No 2 Horse Light Field Battery, to officiate as Commandant, during the absence on leave on medical certificate of Major Salt, or until further orders, but to continue to officiate as Commandant of No. 2 Horse Light Field Battery until the return to duty of Capt. Gillespie; Lieut. James, of the R.A., Subaltern, to officiate as Commandant during the time Capt. Abbott may remain with No. 2 Horse Light Field Battery, or until further orders.

OFFICIAL.—The following, dated the 9th of July last, is from the Secretary of State to the Governor-General in Council:—"When an officer who has retired on a pension obtained not on medical certificate, but after a prescribed period of service, is subsequently employed in any public capacity, he shall be permitted to draw the pension, in addition to the salary of the office to which he may be appointed; but in the event of a military officer resigning the service, after he has been appointed to a civil office, he must at the same time vacate that office. He may, however, be re-appointed to the office, not as a matter of course, but only in the event of your considering it decidedly for the benefit of the public service."

PROMOTIONS TO RANK OF COLONEL.—The undermentioned officers are promoted to the rank of colonel in the army from the dates specified, subject to her Majesty's approval:—Under the terms of the despatch from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India No. 180, dated May 25, 1865, Lieut.-cols. A. C. Silver, Madras Infantry, D. Hamilton, Madras Infantry, and David Brown, Madras Infantry, January 1, 1868. Under Government G.O. No. 632, August 4, 1864:—Lieut.-col. H. D. Abbott, C.B., Madras Staff Corps, February 9, 1867. The promotions of the above officers, as also that of Lieut.-col. Henry Stanley, Bombay Infantry, to the rank of colonel, published in Government General Order No. 179, of 1867, are hereby cancelled.

THE GREAT SOUTHERN OF INDIA RAILWAY.—The Great Southern of India Railway is susceptible of vast improvements in its locomotive and traffic departments. For trains to arrive at and depart from the stations true to the Way Bill forms the exception to the rule; delays form the rule, and punctuality the exception. The platforms appear too short by half for the trains, and passengers are forced to scramble out of the carriages as best they can, to the hazard of their lives and limbs. Goods sheds are so scanty of accommodation that passengers' platforms are occupied with bags of rice and other commodity, and to add to the inconvenience and risk of this, the platforms are never lighted in the nights, except when the Rajah of Vencatagherry comes, or the Government Engineer is in the neighbourhood.—Trichinopoly Chronicle.

WARRANT GRADE APPOINTMENTS AND PROMOTIONS.—With reference to G.G.O. No. 730 of July 29, notifying the admission to pension of Sub-Conductor Adams, of the Army Commissariat Department, the following alterations of rank and promotion are made in the Warrant grade of that department.—Alterations of rank: Sub-Conductors Simpson, from March 1, 1867, vice Sub-Conductor Adams, pensioned; O'Brien, from March 9, vice Sub-Conductor Gibney, promoted; Powell, from July 7, 1867, vice Sub-Conductor S. Jackson, pensioned; Mitchell, from March 28, 1867, vice Sub-Conductor Colmer, deceased; Vallally, from Aug. 5, 1867, vice Robinson, deceased; Dwyer, from Jan. 5, 1868, vice Gibson, deceased; and Donlea, from Feb. 11, 1868, vice Sub-Conductor Dawson, promoted. Promotions: Serg. and Acting Sub-Conductor Sheehy, to be Sub-Conductor from June 17, 1868, vice Sub-Conductor Tear, promoted.

TIRHOOT.—A friend, writing from Tirhoot, under date 8th August, informs the Englishman that the embankments of the Gunduck river burst in several places between Rewah Ghat and a place called Lalgunge. Through these gaps the waters of the river poured with great fury, and in a short time some twenty or thirty square miles of country, with all the villages and crops spread over that extent, were destroyed. The road between these two places was also carried away or rendered impassable. All the bridges have been carried away, and two days after the bursting of the bunds the inundation was said to be rapidly increasing. The loss to the ryots will be, it is feared, total, and the planters in the neighbourhood will also suffer to some extent. Fortunately no lives are reported to have been lost. Taking the crops of the province as a whole, this inundation will not materially affect the general outturn. The crops in Tirhoot are spoken of on the whole as "very good." The weather, too, is represented as being very seasonable.

THE LATE FLOODS IN CUTTACK.—The Government of Bengal has addressed the Board of Revenue, acknowledging the receipt of reports on the effects of the late floods in the Cuttack division. In reply to these letters the Governor-general remarks that it is very gratifying to note the warm interest which was evinced by all the public officers of the province, in obtaining full information as to the state of the crops, and the prospects which the people had before them. With regard to the question discussed in one of the reports as to the prices to be put on the stocks of Government rice, Mr. Grey agrees with the Commissioner and the Board, that it would be very undesirable to lower the rates, so as to run the risk of the stocks being exhausted, before it was known exactly what amount of relief might be required during the rains.—Englishman.

MILITARY LEAVE OF ABSENCE.—The following officers obtained leave of absence, on m.c., in July and August:—Major-general Beecher, C.B., Staff Corps (Commanding Sirhind Division), to remain at Simla, on m.c., from June 30 to November 1; Captain Fairlie, 19th Hussars, to Nynee Tal, on m.c., from June 29 to October 15, in extension; Lieut. Trotter, 1st Battalion 11th Foot, to Simla, on m.c., from May 5 to August 16—in cancellation of the previous leave; Lieut. Currie, 1st Foot, to Calcutta, for one month, from July 1; Captain Hawkins, Punjab Cavalry, for three months, in extension, from July 29 to October 29, to remain at Simla and hills north of Dehra; Ensign Vonsden, 5th Punjab Infantry, on urgent private affairs, in extension, from August 1 to December 1, to proceed to Calcutta to qualify in the native languages; Brevet Major DeKantzow, Staff Corps, to Agra, Delhi, and the hills north of Dehra, on private affairs, from April 15 to October 15; Captain Moseley, 60th Foot, to remain at Nynee Tal, in extension, from July 15 to October 14; Captain Aislabie, 60th Foot, to remain at Mussoorie, on private affairs, in extension, from August 10 to October 10; Captain Wood, 93rd Foot, to remain at Mussoorie until November 1; Lieutenant Welchman, 19th Bengal Cavalry, to Murree, from June 12 to October 15, in extension; Veterinary-surgeon Farrell, to sea, from July 13 to August 13.

HORSE BREEDING.—The attention of the Chief Commissioner of Oude has been directed towards the improvement of the local breed of horses. At the requisition of Mr. Davis several stallions have been sent from the nearest studs to Lucknow. This is decidedly a move in the right direction. There is no reason whatever why a country like India, abounding as it does in fine open plains, should not possess as fine a breed of horses as any country in Asia. Of course if the matter is left to the people the breed will soon deteriorate, because it will be nobody's interest to improve it, or to keep up the best strains. In Arabia and Turkestan breeding is quite as much attended to as it is in England. In India, however, it is a matter of chance and opportunity. The result is seen in that wonderful little animal—the Indian tat—the poorest specimen, perhaps, of the equine race to be found in the world. The movement should not, however, be confined to Lucknow. The Government might very easily pick out a few decidedly horsey localities as a beginning, and place at their disposal some well bred, strong, and serviceable stallions. A little tact, or the superintendence of an English jockey accustomed to breeding, or able to pick out good mares, would in a few years result in rendering India independent, in an emergency, of the breeding establishments at Australia and the Cape. As we have said, the experiment initiated by Mr. Davis cannot be too highly commended, and might be followed with advantage in some parts of the Punjab, the Central Provinces, and in Rajpootana.—Englishman.

Currie, overland, from date of embarkation; Major Bray, 96th Foot, on private affairs, from June 15, 1868, to September 14, 1869; Lieut. Pond, of the Bengal Staff Corps, for 2 years, under the Regulations of 1868; Surgeon Hayes, Commissioner of Singbhoon, leave for 30 days, preparatory to proceeding to Europe on furlough; Surg. Maj. Tucker is permitted to proceed to Australia on medical certificate, and to be absent from Bengal on that account for 2 years, under the old regulations; Major Mocatta, 3rd Sikh Infantry, is allowed 30 days' leave from Aug. 4, or from such date as he may avail himself of the same, to visit Bombay, preparatory to submitting an application for furlough to Europe under the Regulations of 1868; Asst. Surg. Colles, in medical charge Lawrence Military Asylum, Sanawur, is granted 1 month's preparatory leave, from such date as he may avail himself of the same, for the purpose of proceeding to Bombay and applying for furlough to Europe.

BENGAL SOCIAL SCIENCE ASSOCIATION.—The third quarterly meeting of the Bengal Social Science Association was held in Mr. Justice Phear's house at Ballygunge on the 24th ultimo. Mr. Souttar, one of the secretaries, read portions of a paper on Agriculture in India compiled from replies made by thirty gentlemen of experience in different parts of Bengal under such heads as—Nature and extent of the crops—Agency employed in cultivation—Regulation of rents—Extent of the ryots' resources—Employment of hired or borrowed labour—Functions of the Mahajun—Extent to which the ryot can discharge his obligations—Disposal of the crop—Population and marriage—Education. The paper called forth the very just remarks from Mr. Phear that it was clear that the holdings of the occupants of the soil averaged some ten to fifteen beegahs, and even if the cultivator were not a pauper, he possessed no capital beyond that which was barely necessary for tilling the ground. The beneficial interest in the land—viz., the reception of the rents and profits—instead of residing in a single person, belonged to a most complex body, possessing both vertical and lateral extension. How could it be expected that such a recipient of rent should ever discharge a landlord's duties? Mr. Phear said Bengal must be taxed for schools and roads, but the tax would either fall on the ryot in his poverty, or it would be difficult to make the intricate co-tenures of the country contribute their share. "The knot would have to be cut if it could not be effectively untied." A paper on "Bribery: its Extent, Causes, and Remedy," by Lieutenant D. J. Stewart, Assistant Commissioner, Punjab, was also read. He proposed that when bribery was proved to have been made use of in any stage of a case the whole proceedings should be cancelled and a new trial take place ab initio; and that the salary of court subordinates should be raised. He suggested that the priesthood should be called on to denounce bribery, forgetting that silversmiths will never cry down idolatry. Mr. C. D. Field thought that raising the pay of native officials would not remove their inclination to receive bribes. A very intelligent and plain-speaking Zemindar had said to him that the pay and the perquisites bore a relative proportion to each other, that whereas a darogah on fifty rupees a month would be content with a present of five rupees, the same individual drawing one hundred rupees would consider it dishonouring his position to take less than ten. Mr. Long's "Peeps into Social Life in Calcutta a Century Ago" was most inexcusably hurried over.

RETIREMENT OF FIELD OFFICERS.—"A Field Officer" thus writes to the Friend of India:—"In your issue of the 23rd of July you review a scheme believed to be before Government for encouraging the retirement of field officers. With due deference I think the scheme too elaborate in detail, and far too extravagant for Government to adopt. Permit me to suggest a method; it is far more simple; it would be I believe equally efficacious; it would put Government to very little extra expense; it would catch quite enough fish; though of course it would not be so popular. It is this: Allow every field officer to retire on the rate of pension next above that for which he has actually served. I do not pretend to originality, for I have heard such a scheme discussed, though I have never seen it in print." On the same subject "An Old Indian" addresses the same journal:—"I see in a recent issue of your paper an able resumé of the difficulties looming upon the Government, consequent upon an excess of field officers. Allow me to suggest a simple remedy. At present Staff Corps officers become lieutenant-colonels after twenty-six years' service; twelve years more give them their off-reckonings, or in other words entitle them at the end of thirty-eight years' service to a pension of £1,124. 17s. 5d. Now the present regulations of the army entitle officers to the following pensions:—After thirty-eight years' service, to £750; after thirty-five years, £600; thirty-two years, £456; twenty-eight years, £365; twenty-four years, £282; twenty years, £191. The highest of these pensions is quite inoperative, coinciding as it does with the ordinary period of off-reckonings. But by the simple process of redistributing these pensions thus:—After thirty-five years, £750; thirty-two years, £600; twenty-nine years, £456; twenty-six years, £365; twenty-three years, £282; twenty years, £191, a material inducement would be afforded to earlier retirement and the temptation to hold on for the off-reckonings would be thereby reduced. No new scale or scheme is involved. The pensions proposed are merely those now existing, only more equitably distributed."

DISTURBANCES IN HAZARA.—A large military force has been sent off to a troublesome part of the North-West frontier. The immediate cause of the movement appears to have been an attack which was made on the morning of the 30th ult., by a numerous body of men belonging to an independent tribe, on a village called Oghce, situated in the Agror valley in the district of Hazara, lying north-east from Peshawur. According to one account two or three natives were killed by the assailants; it is certain, at all events, that a few were severely wounded, that some half a dozen of the assailants themselves were killed, besides others who were disabled. The thana (or village) appears to have been bravely defended by the small body of police stationed there; and the tribemen after securing some booty retreated. The Khan of Agror, who holds a jagheer bestowed by Government, and another Khan whose name is not mentioned, have been so much suspected of complicity in the affair that Major Pollock, the Commissioner of the district, who arrived at the spot on the 1st inst., caused them to be arrested and sent off to Rawul Pindie. The first body of troops that was sent to the place consisted of the 5th Goorkhas and Hughes' Mountain Battery, which both arrived on the 31st July. It appears, however, to have been determined to send a much larger force, as "matters in Upper Hazara wear a threatening aspect." The troops said to have been ordered to that part of the frontier are as follows:—700 men of the 19th and 77th regiments, the 2nd Goorkhas, a wing of the 16th Bengal Cavalry, a squadron corps of guides, H.M.'s 6th Foot (with Sniders); a battery of horse artillery from Pindee, the 3rd Sikhs, and the 20th Punjabees. Here is a force of no inconsiderable size. Indeed, it is difficult to believe that the raid of the Chigurzie tribe (as it is called), even if instigated by the two Khans who are now in custody, can of itself have occasioned the despatch of such an army. In addition to the troops already named, Anderson's battery has marched from Mean Meer. Five hundred of the 35th regiment, armed with Sniders, arrived at Lahore and marched immediately. A troop of horse artillery and 1st Goorkhas were under orders. General Wilde commands the whole expeditionary force with the rank of Major-General. Majors A. Bright, of the 19th, and Vaughan, of the 5th Punjab Infantry, are Brigadiers; Major C. C. Johnson, from Simla is Quarter-Master General; Major Dickens, Assistant Commissary General; and Major Morland, Brigade Major, Delhi, Assistant Adjutant-General. A field telegraph was to be established.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.—The following civilians obtained leave of absence in July and the early part of August:—Mr. Lackersteene, Special Chemical Examiner, for sixty days; Mr. Pollock, Magistrate of Mirzapore, two months, from August 26; Mr. McConaghey, Officiating Collector of Mynpoory, three months, from August 23; Lieut. Campbell, R.E., Surveyor, 3rd Grade, Great Trigonometrical Survey of India, for two months, from September 1; Colonel Dhanraj, Extra Assistant Commissioner, Peshawar, for three months; Captain Middleton, Superintendent of Police, 3rd Grade, British Burmah, thirty days to Madras, for m.c.; Mr. King, Assistant on the Geological Survey of India, for three months; Mr. Nuthall, Supervisor, 1st Grade, 3rd Division Lahore and Peshawur road, one month, from August 10; Rev. A. W. Irwin, Chaplain of Rawulpindi, one month, from July 28; Captain Saunders, 3rd Punjab Infantry, on m.c., in extension, from June 21 to October 31, to remain at Abbottabad; Mr. Roberts, Assistant Commissioner, Ludianah, for one month, from September 13; Mr. Boswell, Extra Assistant Commissioner, attached to the office of the Resident, Hyderabad, one month, from July 20; Captain Sandeman, Officiating Deputy Commissioner, Dera Ghazi Khan, from Sept. 1; Mr. Carberry, Head Master of the Gujranwalla Zillah School, Punjab, on duty at Umritsur, for six months; Mr. Blackall, Extra Assistant Commissioner, Hoshiapore, for two months, with effect from 13th July; Mr. Smyth, Officiating Deputy Commissioner of Lahore, for two months; two months' leave is granted to Mr. Low, Assistant Magistrate and Collector of Banda, with effect from the 14th July, under the new rules of June last; three months' privilege leave is granted to Mr. Hall, Joint Magistrate and Deputy Collector of Agra, with effect from 15th August, under the last new rules; Mr. McGowan, Postmaster of Calcutta, privilege leave for two months, from the 15th August to 15th October, 1868, inclusive; two months' privilege leave is granted to Mr. Mulock, Assistant Magistrate and Collector of Ghazee-pore, with effect from 25th August, new C.S. rules; three months' privilege leave to Mr. Plowden, Secretary to the Board of Revenue, N.W. Provinces, from the 6th August, 1868; the privilege leave for three months granted to D. Moir, Superintendent of the Central Prison at Agra, dated the 27th June, will have effect from the 4th August; Mr. White, S.C., Executive Engineer, Rohilcund Trunk road, availed himself on the 11th July of leave granted him previously; privilege leave for two months to Captain Branfill, surveyor, 3rd grade, Great Trigonometrical Survey, with effect from 1st of September next; Lieutenant Gibson, 1st Regiment, Central India Horse, sixty days' privilege leave, from 25th July.

THE CASE OF LIEUTENANT GOOLD.—The Calcutta Criminal Sessions opened on the 10th August, before Mr. Justice Norman, and (as we learn from the Englishman) the first case called on was the above, the prisoner pleading "guilty" to the whole of the counts in the indictment, six in number. The following were the separate counts in the indictment:—In the first place that the said Francis H. Goold, on or about the 22nd April, in the year of our Lord 1868, at Calcutta, dishonestly made a false document, purporting to bear the name and signature of one H. L. Pester, which it was not, upon a certain bill of exchange, for the sum of two hundred pounds sterling, drawn and directed to one Thomas Harwood, of London, with the intention that the said false document should be used for the purpose of cheating, and thereby the said Francis H. Goold committed the offence of forgery, for the purpose of cheating, and became punishable under section 468 of the Indian Penal Code. The second count charged the prisoner with having, on the 23rd of April, at Calcutta, fraudulently used as genuine the aforesaid forged document, he knowing the same to be forged, by which he became punishable under section 471 of the Indian Penal Code. The third count, in similar terms to the first, charged the prisoner with having on the 5th May, at Calcutta, forged a bill of exchange, in the name of H. L. Pester, for ninety pounds sterling, also directed to Thomas Harwood. The fourth count charged the prisoner with using the last-named document fraudulently. The fifth count charged the prisoner with having, on the 29th of May, forged the name of H. L. Pester to a bill of exchange for sixty pounds sterling on Thomas Harwood. The sixth count charged the prisoner with using the last-mentioned document knowing it to be forged. The prisoner's counsel, Mr. Branson, addressed the Court at some length. His Lordship in passing sentence told the prisoner that he had pleaded guilty to three distinct offences of forging the name of Colonel Pester to three bills of exchange respectively for £200, £90, and £60. Before proceeding to pass sentence his Lordship observed that he felt it his duty to point out to the prisoner the penalty the Court was empowered by the Legislature to inflict for the crime of forgery. His Lordship pointed out to the prisoner that the Court had power, under the 67th Section of the Indian Penal Code, to transport him for life, or inflict a term of penal servitude for ten years, with the addition of a fine. His Lordship went on to say that, sitting as he did in an Indian court of justice, and in a country where forgery was a crime particularly rife, he was in the habit, in almost every instance, of passing a severe sentence, and it was very rare that he did not inflict the highest penalty, viz., transportation. The learned counsel, his Lordship went on to say, had laid before the Court everything that could be advanced in favour of the prisoner. He was not himself, the learned Judge went on to say, under the impression that the present was a case of systematic forgery, but of that kind of forgery which was induced by the reckless enjoyment of the present moment, without reference to the future. His Lordship said he could not treat the prisoner as one of that class of criminals who so often came before the Court, and in whose instances transportation, as a punishment, had been awarded. Therefore he (the learned Judge) would pass a sentence as light as was consistent with the serious nature of the offence. He would not be doing his duty, however, if he passed a less sentence than two years' rigorous imprisonment. The prisoner then left the dock.

Madras.

EMIGRATION TO MAURITIUS.

Last April the Madras Government found it necessary to issue orders for the temporary suspension of the emigration of coolies from the Madras Presidency to Mauritius; but the Government of Mauritius, having reported that in face of the favourable evidence as to the sanitary condition of the estates for which labourers are wanted, and considering the serious injury which will result to Mauritius from a complete cessation of all arrivals of emigrants from Madras, the withdrawal of the embargo placed on the natives who are desirous of emigrating hither is expedient, the order suspending emigration from Madras has been cancelled. It appears from a report of the Mauritius Emigration Committee, which sat on the 17th July, that the number of immigrants indentured from Madras amounts to 1,651, and that the first of the requisitions addressed to their agent at that port was subscribed and sent to him as long ago as 6th January, 1868. Regarding the estates for which those requisitions have been framed, it has been found that the reinforcements of labour which their proprietors have applied for are not only anxiously awaited by all but urgently needed by most of them. Some, in fact, relying upon the promises held forth by the communications from the agent, which preceded his last letter, have been depending on the fulfilment of those promises for the realisation of the approaching crop. With reference to the Government of Madras apprehending that the revival of epidemic fever in Mauritius would prove as fatal to the population of the island as it did during its first visitation; the committee "state such, happily, has not been the result. The progress of the disease has been far less rapid, and its effects have been much less disastrous. Whereas the total number of deaths in the colony during the first five months of last year amounted to 29,665; the mortality during the corresponding period of this year has not exceeded 11,124, and the rate of deaths on the estates which employ immigrants has also been far below what it was last year; the numbers of deaths on sugar estates from 1st January to 31st May inclusive, being in 1867, 4,613, rate per cent. 4.1; and in 1868, 2,833, rate per cent. 2.4. What is peculiarly striking is the favourable contrast in which the ratio of deaths stands on the sugar estates, when compared with the death-rate amongst Indians who are not employed on the sugar estates, or even with that of the whole population. The Protector's last annual report shows that whereas the death-rate on sugar estates, including women and children, was 6.1 per cent. during the year 1867, the ratio of deaths amongst Indians not on sugar estates was 12.9 per cent.; and from the statistical data we have examined we find that in the general population it amounted to 11.3 per cent. It may be asked how the influences which have been so unfavourable to the general population, and especially so to the Indians not employed on sugar estates, have been less so to those who were labouring on those estates. The question is easily answered by any one who is acquainted with the condition of labourers in Mauritius. They enjoy on the sugar estates considerable advantages in regard to the maintenance of health, compared to the other lower classes of our population. The good lodgings, sufficient food, and regular medical care which are ensured to them by their contracts, and the laws which have been enacted for their protection, no doubt place them in a far more favourable position, not merely during the prevalence of epidemic diseases, but at all times. Considering that the ratio of deaths, both on the sugar estates specially, and in the total population, has declined so as to show an undeniable subsidence of the epidemic fever which has afflicted this colony, and every sign that the disease is fast progressing towards its total disappearance; that the particular estates for which requisitions have been sent to Madras are besides, as we have been assured by the magistrates of the district in which they are situated, well supplied with hospitals and medical appliances; and that the present sanitary condition of those estates is not such as to expose arriving immigrants who may be sent to them to the least risk in regard to their health, and considering also the serious injury and loss which would be inflicted on the agriculture of the island if the requisite labour were withheld from it for a lengthened period, we deem it right to recommend that his Excellency the Governor be moved to address the Government of Madras at once, applying for the rescission of the order by which emigration to this island has been interrupted."

REGIMENTAL COMMANDS.—The Madras Times understands that the subject of the claims of officers of the Local Service and of the Staff Corps to regimental commands is now under the consideration of the Home Government.

ANOTHER MILITARY SCANDAL.—According to the Deccan Herald, an officer in the subaltern ranks of the 12th Regiment Madras Native Infantry, at Poona, is in arrest for a breach of etiquette towards an officer of the regiment at the mess-table. The case has been referred for the decision to the general officer commanding the division.

HYDERABAD.—We are told (says the Englishman) that the Nizam of Hyderabad has of late given orders for the reconstruction of the rest-houses in his territories. A large sum has been placed at the disposal of the Engineer Department by the Durbar for this purpose. The new scrafs, it is said, are to be constructed on a large and princely scale.

SITE GRANTED FOR A SANSKRIT COLLEGE.—We learn that on the application of the executors of the late Mr. Goculdas Tejpal, Government have sanctioned the grant of a site on the Esplanade, opposite to the Elphinstone High School, for the erection of a building for a Sanskrit College and a Hindoo Boarding Institution, founded by Mr. Goculdass.

A NOTIFICATION.—Major-general Gordon, according to a general order, "is sorry to notify that, in consequence of the many regimental changes which have taken place in meeting the requirements of the recent expedition to Abyssinia and to the overland transport service, by which the workshops of British regiments have been partially disorganised, the annual exhibition at Poona cannot be held during the present year."

A BREAKWATER FOR MADRAS.—Our local Government have directed the Public Works Department to prepare plans and estimates for a breakwater at Madras with a view to the submission of the project for the orders of the Government of India and of the Secretary of State. This most important order has been given in consequence of a representation made by the Chamber of Commerce on the necessity of our having a harbour for Madras. It is to be hoped that no time will be lost in carrying out the measure.—Athenæum.

THE MADRAS RAILWAY.—The traffic receipts of the South-west line for the week ending August 1, 1868, amounted for passengers, &c., to Rs. 27,277-2 8; for goods, &c., to Rs. 41,862-7-3, making together, Rs. 72,139-9-11, or an average receipt per mile of Rs. 146-10-0. CHOLERA ON BOARD THE "CANDIA."—As the Candia (s.), bound for Suez, was coming down the Hooghly the week before last she experienced a blast of a peculiarly hot wind blowing across the Sunderbunds, and the Lascars at once declared that cholera would break out on board. And before many hours their prediction was verified, the third officer falling a victim within two hours of seizure, and the gunner, an English quartermaster, and English seaman, an English steward, and a native barber almost as rapidly. As soon, however, as the vessel had got well out to sea, the other persons who had been attacked rapidly mended, and were nearly convalescent on their arrival off Madras.—Madras Times, August 12.

COAL IN INDIA.

One special and most important advantage that the Bengal Presidency possesses over Bombay is the great assistance it has at command in its mineral resources, and more especially coal. To such an extent is coal-mining carried on there that the consumption of English coal is comparatively small, and then only by the mail steamers, and for occasional smithy work. The various lines of railway, and the whole of the steamers employed by the inland navigation companies, are supplied with Indian coal, and when it is considered that there are now upwards of 1,400 miles of railway, in full working order in the Bengal Presidency, and that there are upwards of 100 steamers employed in inland navigation, and by tug companies, all dependent on "country coal" for their fuel, and that it is much more economical than English, the gain must be evident without much comment. Raneegunge coal of the best quality can be laid down in Calcutta at ten rupees per ton, while English coal cannot be had for less than from twenty-five to thirty rupees. The difference in the consumption of English coal as compared with Raneegunge is about as twelve is to sixteen.

There are samples of Indian coals fully equal to the very best Newcastle or Welsh, but the ordinary class of Raneegunge coals is inferior to English, though it is still sufficiently valuable to answer for purposes of steam; and as the mines are within a distance of 100 miles of Calcutta, and coal is easily conveyed by rail, Raneegunge coal is more readily used than the better sorts, which are not so easily procurable.

The Raneegunge mines were commenced as early as 1814, and the coals were then, and for some years, brought down by boats to Calcutta; but since the opening of the rail to Raneegunge and the Barrakur river, the greater part is conveyed by that route. For some time Raneegunge station was the terminus for the coal districts, but as collieries extended to a distance from the then working portion of the East Indian Railway, that company found it expedient to extend their line to a further distance of twenty-two miles, so as to afford facilities to the many mines opened for working along the route chosen. There are many companies working coal in these districts, the largest of which is the Bengal Coal Company, the first established and the best paying. There are also a good many extensive private mines; some belonging to natives are second only in magnitude to the Bengal Coal Company's. Govind Persaud Pundit was the owner of property nearly as extensive as the Bengal Coal Company. This native was originally a servant of the Bengal Coal Company, and he contrived to make such good use of his time during his stay with them that he was enabled to set up for himself, and work successfully in opposition. He has been dead now for some years, and the concern is carried on by other members of his family.

The depth of the Raneegunge seams of workable coal seldom exceed 100 feet. Steam power is generally used for pumping and hoisting. Firedamp is unknown, and ventilation is so easily arranged, owing to the shallowness of the mines, that no difficulty is ever experienced from the use of open light. In small pits worked by natives who cannot afford to go to the expense of steam-engines, the pumping is done by hand, and the coal is hoisted by "whims" or capstans, worked by women. These capstans are locally known as "gins" and the women as "gin women." It is a laborious and ill-paid employment; but when it is considered that the pay of an able-bodied man in Bengal does not exceed two annas daily, and of a woman six pice, and that any amount of labour is available at those rates where the people are well treated, and that they earn the customary pay of the country thereabouts, where living is cheap, the wages, though very low as compared with the Bombay Presidency, do not strike one as so disproportionate.

The cost of coal at the pit mouth may vary from four to six rupees a ton, all expenses included; the actual expense of mining may be only two rupees in some instances. There are several methods of working the coal, depending of course on the locality and the depth of the seam. Where the coal lies near the surface, and the quantity of upper strata overlying or what is technically known as "off-bearing" is small, the coal is quarried; these quarries when they are worked out are still carried on by what is termed an "under cut," that is a series of workings in galleries are run in at right angles with the face of the quarry, and are then proceeded with as in an ordinary mine; or the coal may be met with in an elevated position, above the level of the country, and is then, if in a hill, easily got at either by open quarry or undercut. The height of the coal country about Raneegunge varies from 250 to 300 feet above the level of the sea. The seams in the mines of the Bengal Coal Company's first pit, which is now completely worked out, were two important beds of eight and nine feet respectively; the latter of these was only fifty-seven feet from the surface. This mine was easily worked, the dip being very slight, and the mine near the terminus at Raneegunge added very much to its value. The coal is wrought by natives who are paid by piece work, rates varying according to the situation. They are entirely the residents of the district, and outsiders seldom interfere.

Want of space obliges us to postpone further remarks on the various qualities and descriptions of coal to be met with in other parts of the Bengal Presidency, and we must reserve them for a separate article, as there are many very valuable coals far surpassing Raneegunge sort that in course of time there is no doubt will come into use. Raneegunge coal will stock and keep well. Instances of ignition from spontaneous combustion are very rare, and the coal that was found most addicted to that failing was unfit for steam purposes, and would not keep free from crumbling more than fifteen or twenty days if exposed. A heap of this description, of twenty tons; stocked ten feet high in the open air, would ignite in a week, but such instances are seldom met with.—Times of India.

NEWS FROM SISTAN.—The fort at Sistan, which is now under construction by the Persians, is making rapid progress. Seven thousand forces, both cavalry and infantry, are encamped near the Fort. All the chiefs in the neighbourhood of Sistan have paid their allegiance to the Persian Commander, Meer Allum Khan.—Indian Daily News.

MEDICAL.—The undermentioned medical officers, having completed 12 years' service, to be surgeons, from the date specified, under the provisions of General Order by the Government of India, No. 1,060, dated December 23, 1864, subject to H.M.'s approval:—Assistant-surgeon McDowall, Aug. 4; Assistant-surgeon Kearney, Aug. 4.

SIR S. FITZGERALD.—His Excellency the Governor and suite left Poona for Sholapoor, en route for Berjapoor, by a special train at noon yesterday. The German astronomical party reached their destination safely, being forwarded from Sholapoor by the sub collector; but they must have had an extremely unpleasant journey in point of weather.—Poona Observer, Aug. 15.

MAGISTERIAL POWERS.—The undermentioned officers are each invested with the powers of a subordinate magistrate of the second class in his respective district:—Mr. Ebdon, Supernumerary Assistant to the Collector of Dharwar; Mr. Pollen, Acting Third Assistant to the Collector of Khandeish; Mr. Sharkey, Acting Third Assistant to the Collector of Ahmedabad.

THE LAND TRANSPORT CORPS.—The following promotions are made amongst the officers of the Land Transport Train:—Subaltern Capt. L. A. M. Gracie, 102nd Foot, promoted to Captain of division, Dec. 15, 1867, vice Capt. Blakeney, transferred to Army Works Corps; Subaltern Capt. Beaumont, 102nd Foot, promoted to Captain of Division, Feb. 14, 1868, vice Capt. F. P. Bartholomew, proceeded to Suez on special duty; Subaltern Capt. G. Teevan, 94th Foot, promoted to Captain of Division, March 27, 1868, vice Capt. Yonge, proceeded to England on sick certificate.

RELIEFS.—The following list of reliefs for the ensuing season is given as trustworthy by the Poona Observer:—British regiments: 46th Regiment from Poona to England; 96th Regiment from Poona to Bengal Presidency, probably Fyzabad; 2nd (Queen's) Regiment from Aden to Poona; 39th Regiment from England to Poona; 93rd Highlanders from Bengal Presidency to Poona; 82nd Regiment from Kurrachee to Aden. Native regiments: 2nd Grenadiers from Sattara to Poona; 3rd Bombay N.I. from Poona to Kolapoor; 9th Bombay N.I. from Dhoolia to Poona; 23rd Bombay N.I. from Kattiwar to Dhoolia. From this it will be seen that the Royal Welch Fusiliers will remain at Colaba until they go home. The 93rd are kilted Highlanders, and will add an agreeable variety to the costumes of the Poona garrison.

EXAMINATIONS IN THE NATIVE LANGUAGES.—The following gentlemen have passed the departmental examination according to the First and Second Standard:—First Standard: Messrs. A. D. Pollen, G. W. Vidal, W. H. Crowe, H. J. Parsons, G. B. Reid, J. F. Muir, W. S. Foreman. Second Standard: Mr. J. K. Spence.

OFFICERS' BAGGAGE.—With reference to G.G.O. No. 716, dated 11th December, 1867, it has been intimated by the Government of India that free conveyance for officers' baggage on the scale fixed by the Royal Passage Warrant of 1865 is admissible only as far as the port of embarkation in India. For the remainder of the journey, when performed by rail, the quantity to be carried free is restricted to the scale laid down in G.G.O. No. 690, 17th December, 1867. The wife of an officer who has been provided with passage under the above warrant when completing her inland journey by rail with her husband, in continuation of the voyage by sea, is permitted carriage at the public expense for six cwt. of baggage.

MARINE ESTABLISHMENT.—The following temporary arrangements are confirmed:—Mr. Edwards, Supernumerary 2nd Officer of the hulk and vessels in ordinary, was lent to the steam-vessel Earl Canning from the 29th June, 1868; Mr. Day, 1st officer of the gunboat Clyde, performed the duties of stores accountant of that vessel from 1st August, 1867, to 31st March, 1868; Mr. Blair was appointed 3rd officer of H.M.'s steamer Scind from 1st June, 1868, vice Mr. Costa, discharged at his own request; Mr. Roberts, 2nd Officer of H.M.'s hulk Semiramis, was transferred to H.M.'s steamer Earl Canning, in the same capacity, from the 7th June, 1868, vice Mr. Kendrick, 2nd Officer, proceeded to Europe on medical certificate.

AFGHAN CAMEL DRIVERS FOR AUSTRALIA.—The ship Kohinoor Captain Desborough, sailed for the Mauritius on August 6, from Kurrachee. She took a batch of nearly fifty Afghans to serve as camel-men in Australia. Among them was one who had been there before, and who gave most beautiful descriptions of the country. He spoke English as well almost as any educated native could have spoken the language, and stated that he was the cousin of the man who has now taken a European wife to Candahar, the same of whom the papers had so much to say. All the men now sent away to Australia by the firm of Messrs. Fleming and Co. as agents for J. Elder, Esq., of Adelaide, in Australia, are under engagements for three years on the monthly salary of Rs. 20.—Bombay Gazette.

THE PERSIAN GULF.—We lately announced the departure of H.M.S. Vigilant to the Persian Gulf, for the purpose of supporting any demands Colonel Pelly, resident in the Gulf, might have to make of the chief of Bahrein, whose piratical raids have so frequently disturbed the peace of those waters. The Vigilant arrived at Kurrachee on the 31st July, after having experienced six days of very bad weather. Strong westerly winds prevailed for five days, accompanied with an incessant deluge of rain. In accordance with a telegram received from Col. Pelly, Commander Brown intends to remain at Kurrachee, where the weather is agreeable, till the temperature of the Gulf shall have become somewhat more endurable for the crew. Steps have been taken by Government to have coal forwarded to Bushire by the British India Steam Navigation Company's steamers, as there was no supply of coal at that place.—Times of India.

THE "MISSING LINK."—We have received the reports of the directors of the Scinde, Punjab, and Delhi Railways, for the half-year ending 30th June, 1868, in which the only reference we find to the extension of the line occurs in the following paragraph:—

"The proposed Indus Valley Railway from Kotree to Mooltan, to connect the Scinde and Punjab lines, has not yet been authorised by the Government. Its importance has, however, been officially recognised by several of the highest authorities, including the Viceroy and Governor-general of India; and very recently, by order of the Government of Bombay, a committee has been appointed to report to Government on the subject. The committee consists of the Commissioner in Scinde; Major Lambert, Collector of Kurrachee; the Deputy-consulting Engineer for Railways in Scinde; and the company's agent, Mr. Rawlinson. The directors trust that the day is not far distant when the commencement of this long-delayed undertaking will be authorised. The early commencement of this extension is of even greater importance to the Punjab than to the Scinde Railway; as the isolated position of the former undertaking, and the dilatoriness and uncertainty of the present means of transit from Mooltan to the sea, at Kurrachee, retard, to a serious extent, the development of the traffic."

We learn, however, that the survey of the Rajpootana line to connect the Bombay, Broach and Baroda Railway with the Eastern India at Delhi or Agra has been suspended.—Sindian.

THE CENTRAL INDIA RAILWAY.—Serious floods occurred in the earlier part of last week at different parts of the Bombay, Baroda, and Central India Railway, particularly at the Nerbudda, doing considerable damage to the line. Four spans of the Nerbudda viaduct have been carried away. There has been a slip of about one hundred feet long in the embankment, about four hundred feet south of the Nerbudda viaduct. At Keem, fifteen miles north of Surat, and at Etola (the next station south of Baroda) small iron bridges have been so injured as to be impassable at present for engines. Between Broach and Meagaum, also, the line has sustained damage. The latest report on the subject is as follows:—"The telegrams received from the B. B. and C. I. line up to yesterday afternoon (16th inst.) report that further injury from floods and heavy rain-fall had been experienced by the line north of Broach. Several gaps have been made by the floods between Pallej and Meagaum (about twenty miles north of Broach), and two spans of the bridge over the Meshwa River near Moodabad have been carried away. Minor damages have also been sustained in other places. Every exertion is being made to restore communication, but the country is still much flooded. The break at the Nerbudda continues a most serious misfortune; the rest, including the Meshwa, will not take long to put right."—Bombay Gazette, Aug. 18.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

CIVIL SALARIES.

Aug. 6.—No. 1,651.—Read the following despatch:—

Financial—No. 290.

India-office, London, July 9, 1868.

To H.E. the Right Hon. the Governor-general of India in Council.

Sir,—I have considered in Council your military letter, dated March 9 last, No. 96, submitting a recommendation from the Bombay Government that Major Raitt, Superintendent of the House of Correction at Bombay, should be exempted from the operation of the rule which requires that military pensions shall merge in civil salaries, and you state that that officer's case affords a striking illustration of the hardship of the rule which you earnestly trust her Majesty's Government may see fit to rescind.

2. In compliance with your recommendation and that of the Government of Bombay, I will not object to Major Raitt's drawing his pension of £241. 12s. per annum, in addition to the salary of Rs. 30 per mensem attached to the appointment he is now holding.

3. I am also willing, in accordance with your strong recommendation, to authorise the following modification of the rule. When an officer who has retired on a pension obtained not on medical certificate but after a prescribed period of service, is subsequently employed in any public capacity, he shall be permitted to draw the pension, in addition to the salary of the office to which he may be appointed; but in the event of a military officer resigning the service, after he has been appointed to a civil office, he must at the same time vacate that office. He may, however, be re-appointed to the office, not as a matter of course, but only in the event of your considering it for the benefit of the public service.—

(Signed) STAFFORD H. NORTHCOTE.

TRAVELLING ALLOWANCES TO CHAPLAINS.

Aug. 7.—No. 1,653.—The Governor-general in Council is pleased to promulgate the following rules regarding travelling allowances to chaplains. The rules will take effect from the 1st day of August, 1868:—

1. Travelling allowances at the rate of 8 annas a mile per road, and 3 annas a mile per rail, will be allowed to a chaplain who has already no charge for his joining a station to which he may be appointed either substantially or officiating; also to a chaplain on his permanent transfer from one appointment to another under the orders of Government, and not at his own request; provided that, on return from furlough or any other leave, a chaplain will join his station at his own expense. If his appointment has been changed during his absence, he will draw travelling allowance for the excess distance, if any, between his old and new station from the Presidency at rates above-mentioned.

2. If, while absent on privilege leave, a chaplain is required to perform duty for an absentee at a station other than his own, he will draw travelling allowance at the rates in Rule 1 from his own station to that at which he is required to do duty.

3. Travelling allowance at 12 annas a mile by road, and 3 annas a mile by rail, will be given to a chaplain sent to officiate at other stations, or visiting out-stations, provided he proceeds farther than five miles, if in receipt at his own station of conveyance allowance, or farther than three miles if not in receipt of that allowance. This rule is applicable to chaplains of the Church of Scotland, clergymen of the Additional Clergy Society, missionaries of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel and the Church Missionary Society, and Roman Catholic priests, when visiting out-stations.

4. If any chaplain, or other person to whom Rule 3 applies, obtains a free pass on any railway for visiting railway stations on the line, his travelling allowance by rail will be limited to 1½ anna per mile.

5. A chaplain officiating at a station to which a conveyance allowance is attached will draw that allowance during his stay at the station.

6. A chaplain may exchange the mileage admissible under Rule 3 for an allowance of Rs. 6 a day for the period of absence from his principal station, but should he do so he will not be entitled to any conveyance allowance under Rule 5.

7. A chaplain in receipt of conveyance allowance for a station will forfeit it when absent from his station on gazetted leave, but not when visiting another station and retaining substantive charge of his own.

ADMISSION TO STAFF CORPS ON PROBATION.

No. 748.—The following paragraph of a military letter from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India, No. 228, dated June 30, 1868, is published for general information:—

Para. 5.—I shall not object, however, to an officer of the Indian army, who has practically passed a year's probation by service in a staff appointment, being admitted to the staff corps without further probation, on the understanding that he produces all the certificates required by the regulations for such appointment, including those respecting health and conduct, and that his admission dates from the G.O. appointing him, subject to the approval of H.M.'s Government.

THE COLONELCY OF THE 107TH REGIMENT.—Major-general Durban has been gazetted to the colonelcy of the 107th Regiment. Nothing has yet been done regarding the vacant colonelcies of the 93rd and 95th, or the good service pension vacated by General Durban.

COMMISSIONS WITHOUT PURCHASE GOING BEGGING.—In consequence (says the Broad Arrow) of the great dearth of candidates for commissions without purchase, it is becoming a serious question how the vacancies in non-purchase regiments are to be filled up. Previous to the advent of the present Governor of Sandhurst, Sir Duncan Cameron, matters were certainly not in a state to encourage parents to entrust their sons to the teachings of that establishment; but we feel much pleasure in bearing witness to the renewed feeling of confidence which the known character and prompt reforms of the new Governor have been slowly bringing about, and it would be well if parents seized this early opportunity of sending their sons to Sandhurst, through which all candidates must pass, while there is still a dearth of qualified cadets, a dearth which cannot be expected to continue for very long after renewed confidence in the establishment shall have followed upon the wise course now being adopted for the correction of all in the old system which may have been deemed objectionable. There is an additional cause, however, for the present dead-lock, from the fact that the commissions in the higher numbered regiments are restricted to the nominations of the Secretary of State for India. Something must shortly be done to remove these difficulties. Meanwhile we content ourselves with drawing to the subject the attention of those who may be able to profit by our hint, and conduce, at the same time, to aid in supplying such an important want as that of young blood for the army.

PRESENTATION OF MEDALS.—The interesting ceremony of presenting silver medals to a number of non-commissioned officers and men of the Royal Engineers "for distinguished service in the field" with the troops in Abyssinia, took place at Brompton Barracks on Saturday morning, at a general full-dress parade of the whole of the officers and men of the Royal Engineers now at head-quarters. The non-commissioned officers and men who had been awarded the silver medals by his Royal Highness the Field-Marshal Command-in-Chief were Sergeant John Deans, Sergeant John Harrold, Second Corporal William Chamberlain, Second Corporal Hugh M'Donagh, 10th Company, Royal Engineers, and Lance-Corporal Henry Bailey, A Troop Royal Engineer Train. The troops having been formed, Major-general J. L. A. Simmons, C.B., addressed the officers and men at some length, in the course of which he alluded to the valuable services rendered to the expeditionary force by the Royal Engineers as well sinkers, telegraphists, photographers, signallers, and in various other capacities, in all of which they had acquitted themselves most satisfactorily. As a proof of the distinguished part they had taken with the force, out of seventy medals distributed for distinguished conduct in the field, nine had fallen to the share of the 10th Company of Royal Engineers. Major-general Simmons then presented the medals, and fastened each to the recipient's left breast. The troops afterwards marched past, and went through a few manoeuvres on the parade-ground.

THE AGRA BANK.—The directors of the Agra Bank have issued a special half-yearly report, chiefly with reference to the realisation of the outstanding assets of the late bank. With regard to the ad interim dividend recently announced on the A capital, the managers state that the business of the institution is steadily increasing. Alluding to the assets of the old bank, the report states that when the arrangements were first made the belief was entertained that a period of two years would have sufficed for the liquidation of nearly the whole amount, and that by the 1st January next it would have been practicable to show a surplus available to the B shareholders as capital to participate in dividends from that date. The directors, however, regret that the progress made in realising these assets up to this time has not been such as to lead to the expectation that such will be the case. This, although a disappointment to the B shareholders, has arisen, it is observed, from causes which the directors have not been able to control, and from a desire on their part not unduly to press sales by which the interests of shareholders would suffer. The board reminds the proprietors that the difficulty and delay with regard to the realisation of the old assets do not in any way hamper the business or affect the interests of the A capital. On the contrary, the temporary assistance which the resuscitated bank has afforded to these assets has been no less a benefit to itself than the old shareholders by providing a safe and satisfactory investment for a short period.

IMPORTANT HISTORICAL WORKS.

Just published, in Two thick Volumes, demy 8vo., price £1. 12s.,

LIVES OF THE ENGLISH CARDINALS, from NICHOLAS BREAKSPEAR (Pope Adrian IV.) to THOMAS WOLSEY, Cardinal Legate. Including Historical Notices of the Papal Court. By FOLKESTONE WILLIAMS, Author of "Court and Times of James I.," "Court and Times of Charles I.," "Memoirs of Sophia Dorothea," &c.

Scarcely one adequate biography exists in print of "the Princes of the Church" of English birth; and when they are named collectively by their own countrymen, or foreign writers, they are briefly catalogued—frequently with doubtful incidents and questionable dates; nevertheless, the majority attained the highest honours, spiritual and temporal, and were engaged in some of the most important transactions in European history. It has, therefore, been considered that an acceptable service might be rendered to students by collecting the trustworthy details of Bale, Pitt, Leland, Godwin, Tanner, Dugdale, and similar explorers in the same field of inquiry, adding such notices as may be gathered from the annals of the popes and cardinals, Baronius, Ciaconius, Aubrey, Spondanus, &c.; from the numerous monkish chroniclers, from Hemingford to Jocelin de Brakelonde, as well as from contemporary correspondence; and combining with them new facts from the researches of modern historians, such as Paulli, Neander, Dollinger, Banks, Cardella, Siamondi, Guisot, Lingard, Milman, Brewer, Giles, &c., &c.

Whilst tracing the development of the papal system, care has been taken to exhibit its influence upon society, especially at Rome, Avignon, or wherever the Pontifical Court resided. As members of what may be called the Privy Council of the Pope, each of the English cardinals who chose to remain at the seat of government assisted in its administration. Many were employed as diplomatists, or took a prominent part in the great councils, called from time to time to remedy evils then afflicting the Holy See; almost all were members of the hierarchy, in one or other of the principal branches of the Roman Apostolic Church, and not a few possessed almost unlimited authority at home in secular employments.

In Two Vols., post 8vo., price £1. 1s.,

HISTORY OF CIVILISATION IN THE FIFTH CENTURY. Translated, by permission, from the French of A. FREDERIC OZANAM, late Professor of Foreign Literature to the Faculty of Letters at Paris. By ASHLEY C. GLYN, B.A., of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law.

"Mr. Glyn's translation from Ozanam deserves high praise, and will, we hope, be cordially welcomed."—The Month.

"M. Ozanam's work, when not warped by ecclesiastical assumptions, is a valuable repository of facts and observations, relating to a period of deep historic interest."—Panorama.

"This book constitutes a very valuable addition to English Catholic literature."—Dublin Review.

HISTORY OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE IN INDIA. By EDWARD THORNTON, Esq. Containing a copious Glossary of Indian Terms, and a complete Chronological Index of Events, to aid the aspirant for Public Examinations.

"Mr. Thornton is master of a style of great perspicuity and vigour, always interesting, and frequently rising into eloquence. His power of painting character and of bringing before the eye of the reader the events which he relates, is remarkable; and if the knowledge of India can be made popular, we should say his is the pen to effect it."—Times.

"The writer evinces diligence and research into original authorities; his style is easy, and the intrinsic interest of the important events of Indian history is thus increased by a popular and amusing narrative."—Edinburgh Evening Courier.

In Two Vols., 8vo., price 18s. each,

THE HISTORY OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE IN INDIA from the Appointment of Lord Hardinge to the Death of Lord Canning. By LIONEL JAMES TROTTER, late 2nd Bengal Fusiliers.

The First Volume of this History embraces the period from Lord Hardinge's appointment, in 1844, to the retirement of the Marquis Dalhousie, in 1856.

The Second Volume commences with the arrival of Lord Canning in India, in 1856, and closes with his lordship's death, in 1862. This being the most eventful period in the annals of the East India Company, including the Mutiny, great pains have been taken in its narration.

In One Vol., 8vo., pp. 1015, with Map, price £1. 1s.,

A GAZETTEER OF INDIA, Compiled chiefly from the Records at the India Office. By EDWARD THORNTON, Esq.

The chief objects in view in compiling this Gazetteer are:—

- 1st. To fix the relative position of the various cities, towns, and villages, with as much precision as possible, and to exhibit with the greatest practicable brevity all that is known respecting them; and,
- 2nd. To note the various countries, provinces, or territorial divisions, and to describe the physical characteristics of each, together with their statistical, social, and political circumstances.

To these are added minute descriptions of the principal rivers and chains of mountains; thus presenting to the reader, within a brief compass, a mass of information which cannot otherwise be obtained, except from a multiplicity of volumes and manuscript records. The work, in short, may be regarded as an epitome of all that has been written and published respecting the territories under the government or political superintendence of the British power in India.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S (Ex. Army Med. Staff)

CHLORODYNE

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE. The Public, therefore, are cautioned against using any other than DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

Remedial Uses and Action.

THIS INVALUABLE REMEDY produces quiet, refreshing sleep, relieves pain, calms the system, restores the deranged functions, and stimulates healthy action of the secretions of the body, without creating any of those unpleasant results attending the use of Opium. Old and young may take it at all hours and times when requisite. Thousands of persons testify to its marvellous good effects and wonderful cures, while medical men extol its virtues most extensively, using it in great quantities in the following diseases:—

Diseases in which eminently useful—Cholera, Dysentery, Diarrhoea, Colic, Coughs, Asthma, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Whooping Cough, Cramp, Hysteria, &c.

Those exhaustive diseases—Fever, Ague—so common in tropical climates, are rapidly arrested, and the cold stage in a few moments checked by a timely dose, when warmth and a general glow of the system is established, and comfort secured.

As a Sedative, Neurotic, and Antispasmodic, it is unequalled by any other known Medicine, and not to be surpassed in its specific effects.

Extracts from Medical Opinions.

The Right Hon. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians and J. T. Davenport that he had received information to the effect that the only remedy of any service in Cholera was Chlorodyne.—See Lancet, Dec. 31, 1864.

From A. Montgomery, Esq., late Inspector of Hospitals, Bombay.—"Chlorodyne is a most valuable remedy in Neuralgia, Asthma, and Dysentery. To it I fairly owe my restoration to health after eighteen months' severe suffering, and when other remedies had failed."

Dr. Lowe, Medical Missionary in India, reports (Dec., 1865) that in nearly every case of Cholera in which Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne was administered, the patient recovered.

Mrs. Forbes, wife of the Chaplain at Paris.—"I cannot speak too highly of Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne; I have not in any single instance been disappointed with the result, even in aggravated cases of Indian Cholera."

Extract from Medical Times, Jan. 12, 1868.—"Chlorodyne is prescribed by scores of orthodox medical practitioners. Of course it would not thus be singularly popular did it not 'supply a want and fill a place.'"

Extract from the General Board of Health, London, as to its efficacy in Cholera.—"So strongly are we convinced of the immense value of this remedy, that we cannot too forcibly urge the necessity of adopting it in all cases."

CHLORODYNE, the Great Remedy for CHOLERA.—See Report in the Times, Sept. 6, from the Malta Correspondent, who states, August 24th, that "109 cases and eighty-one deaths occurred at Messina; 50,000 people fled from the town, which is in a most deplorable condition; that Chlorodyne has been found most efficacious as a remedy, and a number of persons are reported to have been saved by its use."

Now as there are various imitations sold under the name of Chlorodyne, containing Indian Hemp, Morphia, &c., ingredients highly adverse to the cure of Cholera, the public are cautioned against the use of any compound under the name of Chlorodyne, unless it bears the name of Dr. J. Collis Browne, who coined the word Chlorodyne to designate his wonderful discovery, which he fully tested for many years in her Majesty's Service before introducing it to the public, the wonderful success of which has given rise to various imitations totally different to genuine Chlorodyne. See the decision of Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood, reported in the Times, July 13th, 1864.

The extraordinary medical reports on the efficacy of Chlorodyne renders it a subject of most vital importance that the public should obtain the genuine, which is now sold under the protection of the Government of Great Britain, authorising a stamp, bearing the words "Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne," without which none is genuine. Sold in bottles, 1s. 1d., 2s. 6d., and 4s. 6d., by all Chemists. Sole Manufacturer, J. T. PREFACE.

During the administration of Lord Canning, from 1856 to 1863, the interest which had been created in Europe by the remarkable development of the Photographic Art communicated itself to India, and originated the desire to turn it to account in the illustration of the topography, architecture, and ethnology of that country.

There were none, perhaps, in whom this interest was awakened more strongly than in Lord and Lady Canning. It was their wish to carry home with them, at the end of their sojourn in India, a collection, obtained by private means, of photographic illustrations, which might recall to their memory the peculiarities of Indian life.

The great convulsion of 1857-59, while it necessarily retarded for a time all scientific and artistic operations, imparted a new interest to the country which had been the scene of, and to the people who had been the actors in these remarkable events. When, therefore, the pacification of India had been accomplished, the officers of the Indian Services, who had made themselves acquainted with the principles and practice of photography, encouraged and patronised by the Governor-General, went forth, and traversed the land in search of interesting subjects.

In this way the design soon exceeded the dimensions of a mere private collection; but Lord Canning felt that its importance was sufficient to warrant official sanction and development, and, therefore, placed the matter in the hands of Mr. Clive Bayley, his Home Secretary. Some of the more important results appear in the present work.

The photographs were produced without any definite plan, according to local and personal circumstances, by different officers; and copies of each plate were sent home to the Secretary of State for India in Council.

After a time, it appeared that a sufficient number of illustrations had been received from various parts of India, fairly to represent the different varieties of the Indian races. The negatives remained in India; but from the plates sent home it was easy to produce fresh negatives, the prints of which might be multiplied to any extent. The Secretary of State in Council sanctioned this operation, and the work was executed by Mr. W. Griggs, at the India Museum, under the superintendence of Dr. Forbes Watson.

In many cases some descriptive account of the tribes represented accompanied the photographs sent from India. These varied greatly in amplitude and value. But, on the whole, it may be said that they were sufficient to constitute the basis of the sketches contributed by Mr. John R. Melville, Colonel Meadows Taylor, Mr. Kaye, Dr. Forbes Watson, and others. These sketches do not profess to be more than mere rough notes, suggestive rather than exhaustive, and they make no claim to scientific research or philosophic investigation. But although the work does not aspire to scientific eminence, it is hoped that, in an ethnological point of view, it will not be without interest and value.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, August 25; Agra, August 22; Calcutta, August 20; Madras, August 19.

The outbreak in the Hazara country eclipses in the Indian papers the interest that would else have centred in the total eclipse of the sun. To judge from the greatness of the preparations making against the raiders into the Agroah Valley, another hill-campaign on a large scale may employ our frontier troops for some weeks to come. Reinforcements from all directions were marching towards the scene of disturbance. A force commanded by Major-general Wilde, an officer of repute in the Punjab, was to be organised into two brigades, commanded respectively by Colonel R. Bright, of the 19th Foot, and Colonel Vaughan, C.B., of the 5th Punjab Infantry. General Wilde was still at Abbotabad, waiting for more troops, but he was not likely to wait long. Rothney's Goorkhas and the Peshawur Mountain Battery, starting from Abbotabad at four hours' notice, reached Agroah by a forced march of something less than forty miles in seventeen hours; a feat, as the Pioneer says, worthy of mention. The Guides from Hoti Murdan, Colonel Renny's Battery and the 19th Foot from Rawul Pindi, hurried forward at nearly the same pace. Before August 13 no fighting occurred, but on that day Colonel Rothney's detachment had a brush with the enemy, who were chased out of the Agroah Valley with some loss on their side, and none on ours except a few sepoy wounded, and slight hurts received by Colonel Rothney and Major Hughes, commanding the Peshawar Battery. The Guide Cavalry proceeded on the 12th from Abbotabad towards the front, where cavalry were much needed. The 6th and the 19th Foot are both armed with Sniders, which will doubtless help to bring matters to a swift conclusion. The Hussanzais have been burning some villages on English ground, but were attacked and driven off with loss by the retainers of a loyal chief. Everywhere, from Delhi upwards, the Government offices were busy forwarding arms, stores of all kinds, and telegraph-wires to the seat of action. Hardly had the 23rd Punjabies regained their old quarters after the hard work in Abyssinia, when they too were hurried to the front. In a short time it was supposed that General Wilde would be in command of a force consisting of three regiments of native horse, nine of native infantry, two companies of sappers and miners, two battalions and a-half of British foot, two mountain-batteries and two of field artillery, not to speak of several regiments forming a reserve. Major Morland was appointed Adjutant-general, and Major Johnson Quartermaster-general of this respectable force.

OF the origin, extent, and character of the present outbreak little enough seems to be known. Some would trace it to the impunity with which the Bazoties recently carried out a like raid against our outposts in the Kohat Valley. Others see in it a striking proof of the influence which the so-called Feroze Shah wielded among the Wahabee fanatics of the Black Mountain. Of course too the Akhoond of Swat is supposed to have more than one finger in the pie. Our own subjects in Hazara are said to be leagued against us with the neighbouring tribes. They have even burnt their own villages, the better to prove their hatred of our rule. It is not yet clear however that the Hussunzai inroad meant anything more serious than an isolated attack on a police station in quest of plunder. If it does bear a different meaning the speed and greatness of our preparations to meet the danger will go far to quench the hopes of our assailants. In a fortnight or so there has been massed in the Agroah valley a force as large as that which landed in Annesley Bay, and nearly twice as large as that which Neville Chamberlain led into the Bonair Hills. Such a move should leave its mark on other neighbours than the wild tribes of the North-west.

SHERE ALI KHAN is once more fairly installed in the realm which his father bequeathed to him five years ago. After the capture of Ghuzni his march to Cabul was a certainty. Azim Khan has fled into Turkestan, unlamented by the many victims of his greed and tyranny. His successful rival seems to have entered Cabul without opposition, and to have been greeted with general rejoicing as a welcome change from his detested brother. Abdurrahman Khan still holds aloof, either contented with his Turkoman province, or prevented by internal troubles from averting his uncle's downfall. In all likelihood he has never forgotten how Azim Khan came between him and his father Afzul Khan's throne. Shere Ali's success is hailed by our countrymen as the signal for a less inactive policy on the part of the Indian Government. Be that as it may, it certainly justifies the caution with which Sir J. Lawrence has forborne from committing himself to the support of either candidate for the throne of Dost Mohammed.

IN Bombay, Calcutta, and some other parts of the country the eclipse of August 18 was a disappointing sight, owing to the prevalence of clouds and rain. At Serampore rain fell heavily during the moment of greatest obscuration. Two hasty glimpses of the passing phenomenon were all that the Calcutta people could obtain. On the Bombay side the clouds were less unkind and the darkness caused by the moon's shadow was more appreciable. One observer at Sholapoor describes it as "a darkness that no one who felt it will ever forget," an "overwhelming gloom" which pressed as heavily on the mind as on the bodily sense. On every side except a small space in the North "the heavens were as black as midnight." A Bombay spectator, less alive to the terror than the grandeur of the scene, dilates on "the majestic sweep of the great curtain" which hung over the land for about three minutes, and was then withdrawn "at first by rapid pulses," and afterwards more gradually. The natives everywhere celebrated the event in their usual way with peace-offerings and ablutions, accompanied by diligent beating of tomtoms and blowing of horns. From the Madras side no details of the eclipse have yet reached us; but telegrams published in the Madras papers warrant the conclusion that success rewarded the observations taken at Beejapore, Guntoor, and Masulipatam.

ONE of Premchund Roychund's former allies, a native merchant named Candass Narrondass, who failed to the tune of a million and a-half sterling, has been sentenced to two years' imprisonment for fraudulently making away with some of his property.

THE work of legislation goes on steadily amidst the pleasant distractions of life in the Himalayas. Besides several measures of local importance, Mr. Maine has presented the report of the Select Committee on a Bill for applying to India the provisions of our own law of divorce. The Committee have widened the scope of the draft Bill by extending to the chief civil courts in the Mofussil the powers therein designed for the high courts only. Two or three clauses in the English Divorce Act are struck out or amended in the revised draft for India. Provision is made for enabling a wife to get divorced from a husband who, having changed his religion, avails himself of Hindu or Mohammedan usage to increase the number of his wives. With regard to the custody of children of native fathers, orders are limited to girls under thirteen and boys under sixteen years of age. The benefits of an Act which ought to have been extended to India many years ago will thus be claimable by East Indians and native Christians as well as our own countrymen. Will it have any bearing on natives professing some Unitarian and monogamist form of creed?

Is Calcutta unhealthy above most cities in British India? The Pall Mall Gazette assumed the other day that it was, and the assumption to our minds seemed indisputable, outside the Calcutta public itself. A natural if unreasonable desire to keep the Viceroy always among them impels many of our countrymen in that city to ignore the sanitary reasons for his yearly departure thence. But behold, a champion bearing the familiar initials, "R. D. M.," appeals in our contemporary's columns against the justice of giving so healthy a city so bad a name. It is all a mistake, we are told, as to the unhealthiness of a city in which "R. D. M." "worked hard with brain and pen" every day in the week except Sunday, during seven long years. Scores, nay hundreds of other men, including Lord Metcalfe, worked just as hard, and were none the worse for it. Any man with a will and with no fear of disease can work all the year round in Calcutta "as well as anywhere else." "How did successive Governors-general from Clive to Lord Canning continue to live, ay, and to work to good purpose in Calcutta?" None of them died in India except Cornwallis, who was dying when he went out. Judges, barristers, civilians, merchants, shopkeepers, all manage to live on in Calcutta, year after year. Lord Canning's last illness was contracted on his way home. Mr. Wilson died from working too late at night. Sir W. Gilbert must have died of old age. Sir J. Outram owed his death to cigars rather than Calcutta. It is only self-indulgent persons like Mr. Maine who denounce the capital of India as unhealthy; and he "takes care of his health by dividing his year between Barrackpore and Simlah." Our contemporary indeed attempts an answer to this reply, and quotes in his own justification from the statistics of Dr. Norman Chevers, as well as from his old authority Major Chesney. But it is no use: we are all clearly in the wrong. Calcutta is one of the healthiest places in that healthiest of countries, Hindustan. English children there wax fat and rosy, and never need sending home. English men and women are never known to die there except of old age or bad habits, or to escape imminent death by going elsewhere. Lord Dalhousie was never reproached by the Calcutta press for his prolonged absences from the healthiest of Indian cities. Sir John Lawrence must have invented Simlah, for no Viceroy, not even Lord Auckland or Lord Hardinge, ever spent a hot season in that Himalayan Capua. Major Chesney's statement of the paralysis of public business caused by "the frequent changes of officials" to replace others driven away through ill-health, is a fond delusion, and Dr. Chevers' statistics a misleading libel. None but old or weakly people ever die of the Calcutta climate. It is sad to think however that four out of five English sojourners in Calcutta must by the same token belong to one or the other of these two classes, and that the natives in that healthy capital manage to die off at about twice the rate of Englishmen living in London.

TALES of suffering and disaster caused by rains and floods still reach us from various parts of India. The Ganges and the Damoodah have again flooded the country in Lower Bengal, doing much damage to the crops. From Tirhoot, Midnapore, and one or two other places come discouraging accounts of beggared ryots and ruined crops. Subscriptions for the suffering peasantry have been collected in some of the Calcutta churches. From whatever quarters help may come, it seems clear that charity forms no part of the duties discharged by the Bengal zemindars towards those who have a strong legal claim on their good services.

ALL persons connected with India will have learnt with regret the retirement of Mr. W. J. Eastwick from his seat in the Council of the Secretary of State. He was first elected a director of the East India Company in the year 1847, vice General A. Robertson, deceased; and when the Act was passed which transferred the direct Government of India to the Crown, he was the deputy chairman. He has always been distinguished for his zealous interest in all connected with the welfare of the natives of India, and of the civil and military services. The Secretary of State bore testimony to the able assistance rendered by Mr. Eastwick in connection with the recent Abyssinian Expedition. His retirement is understood to have been caused by failing health. Mr. Eastwick having been an elected director, it fell by law to the Council of India to name his successor, and they have done honour to themselves by electing at a Special Council on Monday last, Sir Robert Montgomery, G.C.S.I., K.C.B.

SIR R. MONTGOMERY, who was on Monday elected a Member of the Council of India, entered the Civil Service of the East India Company as a writer in the year 1827. His earlier employments were in the offices of magistrate and collector. At the time of the Mutiny he was Judicial Commissioner in the Punjab, and especially at the outset of that critical period his services were of the very highest importance. There can be no doubt that in his new office his assistance will be of the greatest value to the Secretary of State, and his election will satisfy the public that the Council of India are actuated by the most sincere desire to adopt every measure which would be beneficial to the people of India and to the public interests of the country.

AMONG recent changes in the Council of India, the retirement of Mr. Charles Mills will perhaps be regarded with the greatest regret. Elected a director of the East India Company so long ago as the year 1822, he has remained a member of the Home Government of India through all the changes that have since occurred. It has been well known that on the difficult and delicate questions of finance his opinions have always been regarded as of great value. There can be no doubt but that, notwithstanding Mr. Mills's increasing years, his place in the Council will not easily be supplied. All honour however to the honourable motive alleged for his retirement; the desire namely to afford an occasion for recruiting the Council with younger men. In the award of honours for long and faithful service it may be hoped that Mr. Mills's name will be duly remembered.

BUT who is to fill the place of Mr. Mills? Among men of proven ability and tried service there are several that naturally suggest themselves. For instance, there is Sir F. Halliday, sometime Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal under Lord Dalhousie and Lord Canning. If a second string be needed to our bow we might couple with his the name of Sir H. Harington, K.C.S.I.

THE INDIAN STAFF CORPS.

It is proverbially hard to please everybody, but the Indian Staff Corps under present arrangements seems to have succeeded in pleasing nobody, at least among its own members. Grievances crop up everywhere, and every fresh attempt to patch up the prevailing system only brings forth fresh outcries from some of those concerned. Finding a difficulty in recruiting the lower ranks of the Staff Corps, the Government lately bribed young officers to enter it by promising to repay them the value of their commissions in the line. But the bribe was restricted to officers of four years' service and under. Forthwith there came a cry of resentment from other officers of rather higher standing, who claimed the right of entering on the same terms as their younger comrades. On the other hand, some old officers on the Indian Staff are sorely aggrieved at this tendency to shower on younger candidates for the service advantages which their seniors never enjoyed. It is the old story of the labourers who have borne the burden and heat of the day. Why, they ask, should these youngsters be enrolled on different terms from those who entered the corps in 1861? Let all alike receive the value of their old commissions, or none. The complaint is natural, but what is a bewildered Government to do in such cases? It wants men in a hurry for a needful service. If the old inducements fail to bring them in, what can it do but bribe higher? The older officers may grumble at the seeming unfairness; but their day is passing by. No need to tempt them into staying where they are. On the contrary, it might better serve the public interest, if some of them could be tempted to retire betimes from a service already crowded with old officers. Would not the latter have much more cause to grumble, if hard necessity forced the Government to shelve some of their number a few years before their time?

With regard again to the work these older servants have to do or to leave undone, the complaints that reach us differ a good deal from each other. On the one hand we are assured that many a field officer is drawing high pay for doing captain's or subaltern's work. On the other we hear of majors and colonels being consigned to the doubtful pleasures of "general duty" on quite inadequate pay. Others again of the same standing are said to be doing nothing at all in return for the allowances to which their rank entitles them. It may be however that all these complaints are equally true in respect of particular instances. What seems at any rate quite certain is that the Indian Staff Corps is suffering at once from hypertrophy of the upper and atrophy of the lower limbs. How the twofold evil may best be remedied, is a question to which some kind of practical answer must be given at no distant date. We are told for instance that by 1870 some three hundred captains will have become majors, and more than three hundred majors will have risen to be lieutenant-colonels. At that date the whole number of lieutenant-colonels will amount in all likelihood to nearly seven hundred, while the complement of majors will have been swollen to nine hundred and forty or thereabouts; a pretty total of officers drawing an average of more than a thousand a-year each. And most of these gentlemen are likely to hold on for the colonel's allowances, to which they will be entitled a few years later. Of the ultimate expense to the State some idea may be formed, when it is reckoned that nine years hence £770,000 will be the yearly payment in pensions to retired lieutenant-colonels. Cut down this estimate as much as you please on account of deaths, there will remain a total of about half-a-million a-year paid out to retired officers in one branch of the service alone.

How to work off this plethora of old officers and avert some part of this pecuniary drain, is a problem which the India-office should make haste to solve. A good many schemes to that end have already been sent forth from many different quarters, so that there should be no difficulty in framing some definite measure which would tempt officers to retire before their time. Of the two latest proposals, as republished in our last issue from the Friend of India, it is not easy to say which would answer best. Each seems to hold out a fair inducement to those concerned. The two in fact are essentially one, both seeking to raise the present rates of pension to a point that would counteract the inducements to wait for the Colonel's off-reckonings. But in both the details need revising. A pension of £365 a-year after twenty-six years' service must seem a beggarly allowance compared with the prospect of £1,100 a-year after thirty-eight. It would be wiser, we think, to double the pension for a lieutenant-colonel and offer no material increase of pension afterwards. But with regard to immediate exigencies another rule may have to be applied. If so, officers enough for the purpose might be tempted to take themselves out of the way either by a lump sum down, or by some reasonable addition to the pension of their rank and standing.

OUR GARRISONS IN INDIA.

In view of the question once more being raised as to the proper strength of our garrisons in British India, it is worth while glancing over the evidence taken on that score by the late Committee on the Army in India and the Colonies. On a former occasion we showed what some of the most important witnesses had to say on the subject of garrisoning our colonies with Indian troops. Let us now see what the same and other authorities think on a question more directly concerning the future wellbeing of our Indian empire.

The main question naturally divides itself under the following heads:—What is the smallest number of British troops needed in time of peace for the safe guarding of British India? What number of native troops are absolutely required for their share of the common duties? What is the right proportion of native to British troops?

As an Indian officer of long and wide experience, Colonel Norman claims a very attentive hearing. Under present circumstances he concludes that the British garrison now in India will bear no further reduction, whatever changes might be made in the strength of the native army. Both armies are now, he thinks, at the lowest strength, compatible with the work they have to do. If you increase the native, you must also to some extent increase the British garrisons. But the reverse would not hold equally good. If the native army were cut down to 80,000 men, a reduction of the British strength would not therefore become advisable. Each army is told off for its own line of duty. There are many large cities that need watching by European troops, and the Peshawar frontier demands a considerable force, native and English, to itself. As a rule the proportion of dark to white soldiers should be about two to one; say 125,000 natives to 65,000 Europeans; but a few thousand more or less of the former would make no material difference in the general result.

Sir John Lawrence also objects to any serious reduction either of our native or British garrisons. With a smaller number of native troops "we must either overwork the English regiments or add to their strength," for the present numbers of each are barely sufficient for the many and important duties they are called on to discharge. A large British force is needed not only for its "fighting powers, but for the very value of its presence" in overawing enemies and encouraging friends. For a few months, for a great emergency, we might spare three or four thousand British soldiers, "but not more." Nor could more than three or four native regiments be ever permanently spared from India.

Lord Strathnairn speaks still more strongly against lowering the present strength of our British garrisons. It is already in fact too low to meet the constant drain upon it caused by cholera epidemics and other forms of disease. In a despatch of March, 1867, to the Indian Government, Sir W. Mansfield follows vehemently on the same side, showing what a vast amount of work has to be done both by our European and native troops, and expressing a kind of wonder at the fact of our holding "the vast area of India, with all the frontier requirements," and maintaining "the most absolute internal tranquillity, not only in our own territories, but among our dependent allies," with a total force of 183,000 men, of whom a third only are recruited from the conquering nation. If the native garrison will bear no further reduction, still less can the British, which in respect of Bombay and Madras is no stronger than it was in 1856. Sir Hope Grant and the Duke of Cambridge both give expression to nearly the same views.

Opinions mainly of a very different tenor are given on the other hand by men no less entitled to speak their thoughts. In his minute of February, 1856, Lord Dalhousie was satisfied to maintain the peace of India with thirty-five strong regiments of British foot. General Balfour, accepting the same estimate, would make up the total of necessary rank and file with three thousand horse and ten thousand gunners; thus reducing the present effective strength to about 50,000 officers and men. In support of his own reasoning he appeals to the well-known care with which the great Marquis went into the whole subject, examining every detail, and naming station by station the places suitable for an English garrison. He also quotes Lord Canning as being so fearful of the danger of laying fresh taxes on the people of India, that, rather than incur that danger, he would "run the risk of holding India with 40,000 European troops." But General Balfour defends his own conclusions on military as well as political grounds. He insists that the present strength of the British army in India is positively too great for military needs, and that the present complement of British officers far exceeds the due proportion of rank and file. There are enough already of the former to spare for the command of ten or twelve thousand more privates than the 61,000 now serving in India. Under any circumstances it would be better and cheaper to have so many regiments each a thousand strong than a larger number of regiments only seven hundred and fifty strong. General Balfour also seems to imply that soldiers in India are too readily employed by the civil power in doing policeman's work. But his main argument from the military side rests after all on political grounds. If the British army in India can be maintained at a certain strength only by laying on fresh taxes, you give rise to feelings so dangerous that "no European force which you can send from England, and no native force which you can keep up in India, will ever be able to overcome the opposition which those classes who are affected by that taxation will bring against you." Any army that would cost India more than £12,000,000 a-year, and the present army costs much more than that, would "create discontent and raise up enmity" among classes hitherto attached to our rule. In short, the cheapest way of garrisoning the country would be by means of a local European army of 30,000 men, supported by an Imperial contingent of 20,000.

Another strong advocate of a reduced British garrison is Sir George Clerk, whose military services in India have hardly been eclipsed by his political. He would reduce the present total to about 44,000 effective troops. If we cannot hold India with that number, we had better withdraw, he thinks, from a country where our rule depends far less on bayonets than on our popularity with the governed. Keep faith with the natives, retain or win back their affections by just government, and a nominal strength of 50,000 will be found ample for ordinary needs. The outbreak of 1857 prospered for a time, not because the British garrison in India was too small, but because of its wrong distribution; Hindostan proper being left denuded of troops and thus encouraged to rebel against a Government which had grown unpopular. Sir George even goes the length of desiring to see the British force in the Punjab somewhat reduced, in spite of the admitted need for overawing the fanatical frontier tribes.

Mr. R. D. Mangles adds his testimony to the same side as that of one who has given "much thought and inquiry" to the questions before the Committee. He is for reducing the European force in India by about 20,000, on condition that the numbers of the native army be likewise cut down from 135,000 to 100,000; thus keeping up the accepted proportion of about two to one. It is absurd, he thinks, to maintain from 65,000 to 70,000 men for the purpose of watching twice their number of natives. Whatever was the case in the days of Sindiah and of large native armies disciplined by Frenchmen, there is no good reason now for keeping up a large native force in a country entirely under our power. Against whom do we keep up so large a force? Certainly not against the native princes, who are anything but great Powers, and whom we may at any moment with perfect justice order to reduce their own armies. Nor yet against frontier States like Népal, whose soldiers are powerless to meet ours on the plains. Cut down the large native army, order the Nizam and Sindiah to cut down theirs, and then you may hold the country with 20,000 fewer Englishmen than are now employed. Experience shows that we have nothing to fear from the people of India, and facts prove that under right conditions "a military people will soon settle down into unmilitary habits." Mr. Mangles believes that the Sikhs, "who are the best agriculturists in India" would, "in the course of a generation, settle down into peaceable habits and lose their military tendencies," just as the Highlanders have already done. A great deal of the duty now devolved on our native soldiers ought in fact to be discharged by the police. General Balfour seems to agree with Mr. Mangles on this question of the native army, for he looks on 90,000 privates of native infantry as a fair allowance for that arm.

Such were the main opinions given on either side before the committee abovenamed. From a fair comparison of them it seems pretty clear that the reduction of our English garrisons might in due time be carried to an extent which a few years back would have seemed full of danger. It must always be remembered, as General Balfour took care to urge upon his questioners, that in 1857 the actual strength of the British army in India, the troops returning from Persia included, was less than 40,000 of all ranks; and that this small force alone, aided by two or three regiments from the colonies, proved itself more than a match for a native army of eight or nine times its own strength. The neck of the rebellion was fairly broken at Delhi before a single soldier from England had set foot on the scene of danger. It is ridiculous therefore to suppose that in like circumstances 50,000 Europeans, with everything in their favour that arms, forts, telegraphs, railways, can assure them, would have any trouble in dealing with twice or thrice their number of native troops. Such a force would be palpably strong enough to meet any storm brewed within India herself; and, with all deference to the practical knowledge of soldiers like Lord Strathnairn and Sir W. Mansfield, we imagine that it would prove quite equal to any duty which soldiers ought to discharge. The native army perhaps will not bear much further reduction ; but it is quite within our moral competence to insist that the semi-dependent princes of India shall cut down their local forces to the lowest practicable scale. The Indian Government as the Paramount Power may fairly insist on all conditions needful for the maintenance of general order.

But how if danger threatened India from without ? That is a contingency against which England rather than India is specially bound to guard. The difference of ten thousand troops more or less on the Indian establishment would not in such a case materially affect the issue. Everything would depend on England's readiness to aid her great dependency in the hour of need. There would be small cause left for anxiety on that score, if the means of communication between the two countries were once brought into perfect harmony with the ends desired. When the system of Indian railways shall have been fairly completed, when a really efficient line of telegraph binds London to Kurrachee and Bombay, when trains laden with troops and stores are once heard snorting along the valley of the Euphrates, India will not have to look beyond her own frontiers in reckoning up the cost of her standing armaments.

THE OLD BANK OF BOMBAY.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—I am very much obliged to you for your insertion of my note of the 12th inst. Which view is right and which wrong, events will, no doubt, before very long determine ; but as there had been a difference of opinion on the subject, and the opposite one had been given publicity to in your columns, I was desirous that my own should also be on record.—I have the honour to be, Sir, your most obedient servant,

The Pharmacopœia of India. Prepared under the Authority of Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India in Council. By Ed. J. Waring, M.D., M.B.C.P.L., Surgeon in H.M.'s Indian Army ; assisted by a Committee appointed for the purpose. Pp. 502. London: W. H. Allen and Co., Publishers to the India-office.

For the preparation of a Pharmacopœia of India the Secretary of State in Council has been singularly well-advised in the selection of an editor and of a committee eminently qualified by special knowledge for the execution of such a work. At its head we find Sir Ranald Martin, a veteran authority, and associated with him Sir William O'Shaughnessy and Dr. Thomas Thomson, the distinguished botanist, late of the Bengal Army ; the equally distinguished Dr. Robert Wight, late of the Madras Army, Mr. Gibson, and Dr. Forbes Watson, representing Bombay ; and lastly, the scientific Mr. D. Hanbury, and Dr. Edward Waring, the editor, who is favourably known as the author of an admirable "Manual of Practical Therapeutics." The reputation and high-standing of these names are the best guarantees for the accuracy and completeness of the work, and when we add that the sheets, while passing through the press, have been submitted to the revision of Professor Christison, of Edinburgh, criticism on our part and in these columns would be mere presumption. Our object is rather to point out to the general public in India the merits of the Pharmacopœia, which is a book not for doctors and druggists only, but one which we are sure will be useful to, and have a large sale among the planters, the merchants, the railway officials, and all who are unfortunately placed far from medical advice, and are obliged on emergencies to act as their own physician by administering remedies from the family medicine chest to the sick of their households and to the poor around them.

Let us now indicate the scope of this official publication, in which is to be found much elaborate and extended investigation, carried on both in India and in England since March, 1865, when the first meeting of the Committee was held. It is stated that the object of the Secretary for India was the publication of a Pharmacopœia based on the British Pharmacopœia, which, while affording all the information contained in that work of practical use in India, would embody and combine with it such supplementary matter of special value in that country as should adapt it to meet the requirements of the Indian Medical Department.

We have therefore presented to us in one convenient volume not only all the drugs which are official in the British Pharmacopœia, with notes appended indicating their value and applicability to Indian practice, but also all the most exact and reliable information, as well former as recent, worked up and given in a condensed form, respecting the indigenous drugs of India.

The various articles are divided into two classes, viz.:—the "Official" and the "Non-official:" the first indicating those articles "official" in the "British Pharmacopœia," together with those indigenous products of India of recognised efficiency ; the second, or "non-official," comprising many articles of local repute and ascertained activity, but still doubtful as remedial agents. The alphabetical arrangement usually adopted in "Pharmacopœias" has been abandoned, a scientific classification having been preferred ; and, instead of a simple dry detail of the articles of the Materia Medica, the editor has judiciously added information regarding their medical properties, their operation, uses, and doses, placing under each individual drug the several preparations of which it forms the active ingredient. We have thus a Text-book in Materia Medica most useful for students in India, and for young medical officers arriving in the country, imparting, as the committee state, an educational character to their labours, and carrying into effect one of the main objects of the work—the introduction of the indigenous products of India into European and native practice in that country.

Our great Eastern Empire, with its variety of soil and climate, supplies us with medicaments which render us almost independent of imported articles. In the purchase of quinine the Government used to expend £12,000 a-year. This fact alone points out the importance of the successful introduction and cultivation of the Cinchona plant, of which there is a most interesting history in the Appendix, at page 449 ; but we can only find space for one brief extract:—"According to the latest reports, there were in January, 1867, 1,785,303 Cinchona plants in the Government plantations on the Neilgherry Hills, of which 401,211 were permanently planted out. The total area under actual cultivation was 673 acres, and 125,747 plants have been issued to the public. Private plantations have been formed on the Neilgherries and Koondahs, in Wynaad and Coorg ; and the Rajah of Travancore has caused a small Cinchona garden to be established at Peermède. In March, 1862, Cinchona plants were first sent up to Darjeeling, and the experiment was commenced there in the following June with 211 plants. In January, 1867, there were 625,408 plants, and 67,280 were permanently planted out. At Kangra, in the Punjab, Major Nassau Lees has formed a Cinchona plantation, and the Government of Bombay have established a small experimental garden at Lingmulla, on the Mahableshwar Hills."

Quinine still holds the first rank among antiperiodics, but we have here very fully described some indigenous tonics only second to it in power ; of these in the vegetable kingdom the principal are the following:—Atis, Chiretta, Narcotine, Berberis Asiatica, Nutgalls, and Gulancha. We would also draw attention to the account of the Bael fruit and its preparations, so useful in diarrhoea and chronic dysentery ; also to the Kamela, now introduced into European practice for the cure of tape-worm.

We must now conclude by offering our congratulations to Dr. Waring and the committee on the systematic and condensed manner in which the whole subject of Materia Medica, British and Indian, has been treated in this volume ; and we trust that the able editor may be spared to superintend successive editions, each adding something to the list of medicinal agents for the relief of suffering humanity.

The successful completion of the Pharmacopœia brings vividly before us another field for the official solicitude of the Secretary for India in Council—viz., the preparation and issue of a "Manual of Tropical Hygiene," with special reference to the army and the civil population of India. By the great industry and ability of Dr. Norman Chevers we have a solid basis for such a work in his excellent papers on the Health of the European Troops in India; and in the reports of the Sanitary Commissions in the three Presidencies, now issued annually, we have a large mass of most valuable information to be sifted and arranged by an editor of Indian experience, who, like Dr. Waring, possesses the gift of compression and judicious selection.

Spirit of the Indian Press.

THE HAZARA TURMOIL.

The Indian Daily News says that considering the strength of the force, and the officers selected, it is evident that not only are vigorous measures determined on, but that the first step is about being taken towards the concentration of an army on the Punjab frontier, as demi-officially announced by Government the other day. A harassing campaign may be the result of this Hazara affair, but the main object is clearly to fortify the north-west barrier. For the greater our power along the mouths of the mountain passes, the less likely an Afghan expedition as a consequence of Russian aggression on Cabul. If the road was open, Russia might find her way as did the conquerors of old into the heart of India; but with ordinary precautions on our part she is not likely to throw herself into the cul de sac, and Muscovy would eventually so bitterly repent Afghan complications, that it is still more improbable she will ever be tempted to march her distant army, maintaining only laud communication with the capital, into a territory like Afghanistan, at the foot of which stands the stern foe reviving memories of the Crimea. To enter Afghanistan would be equivalent to suggesting a desire to meet a British army on an Asiatic field. But the character of the country, the security of our own position, and the disadvantages under which a foreign army must labour amidst so many enemies, resist this supposition; and, even if the assumption proves incorrect, England fights from her own ground when she fights from British India. It is neither safe nor necessary, however, to indulge in prediction. In such cases events accumulate rapidly, and if Samarcand and Bokhara are only pre-positions to Candahar, Russia will neither hesitate nor wait, and her movements within the next few months will soon demonstrate her intentions. In the meantime our frontier relations will engage our interest.

The Delhi Gazette remarks that the disturbance on the north-west frontier seems to be assuming rather important dimensions. We already hear of the tribes assembling in such force as to be really formidable. The Government appear to be fully alive to the necessity of sending a strong force into the field, and we shall have an opportunity now, the first which has occurred in India, of testing the value of the Snider in action. This is the first military operation Sir John Lawrence has been called on to conduct. The Bhootan war and the Umbeila business were none of his making. Both would have been differently managed had he been at the helm when they commenced. We hope that on this occasion he will display some of that energy and foresight for which he earned so much credit in former days, and that before he leaves us for good the tribes beyond the Punjab frontier will have acquired the same wholesome dread of Jau Lawrence as was entertained within the frontiers of that province when he ruled its destinies. It is absolutely necessary to show the turbulent tribes in that neighbourhood that we do not always conduct campaigns in the same manner as we did the Umbeila one. In that affair, it is well known now, there would have been none of the trouble and loss which it eventually occasioned had Sir Neville Chamberlain been properly supported at first.

The Englishman holds that if the attack on the Agror Thannah and the attitude of the tribes on the Punjab frontier show anything, they show that what was till within a few years always believed to be the true policy of England in India is still her true policy. That policy is, in choosing between action and inaction, never to lose sight of the chance of being misunderstood. There can be no doubt that our neglect to punish the Bazotees, as they deserved, has been seriously misunderstood, and that the magnitude of the task upon our hands has been greatly increased by it. We have every reason to believe now, however, that the policy of masterly inactivity is at an end; and that though offensive action on our part may terminate with the present campaign, we shall not again return either to that state of unpreparedness, or that avowal of indifference, which has lately characterised our position. Should Shere Ali succeed, as there is very little doubt he will, in establishing himself in Cabul, and proving his ability to maintain himself there, and should he not commit himself by entering into unacceptable engagements with other Powers, we believe the Government of India will establish some such relations with him as lately subsisted with Dost Mahomed.

The Bombay Gazette thinks it was the dread of rousing the whole tribes around Peshawur which induced Government to submit to the indignity of seeing their troops defeated in the operations with the Bazotees in the early part of the present year, in which Captain Ruxton lost his life; and not defeated merely, but ignominiously compelled to leave their dead in the hands of their savage enemy. That disgrace was inflicted upon our troops, moreover, at a time when Government could not plead the excuse that the season of the year was unfavourable to operations in the field. It was the very season for exacting instant and prompt retribution; and we cannot presume that anything but the dread of kindling a frontier war could have prevented Sir John Lawrence from wiping out an affront of the enormity of that which the Bazotees inflicted upon us. The locality of the Bazotees is at a considerable distance from the haunt of the tribe which has now offended. Nevertheless it is reasonable to suppose that the Bazotee victory over the British spread, greatly magnified, in a short time from hill to hill and tribe to tribe, increasing the chronic fermentation and audacity of turbulent savages who cannot estimate the British power. In the new troubles which are threatening us in Hazara we are evidently about to reap the results of our misjudged forbearance, combined with those of a foreign policy which is in perfect keeping with the requirements of civilised countries, but is entirely beyond the conception or understanding of even much less savage Oriental than the tribes around Peshawur. The condition of Afghanistan, and English policy in connection with that shattered country, cannot fail, during the five years that have elapsed since the rival sons of Dost Mahomed began to fight for the possession of their father's kingdom, to have exercised a powerful influence on the tribes inhabiting the hill fastnesses between the rampart mountain wall from Cabul to Candahar, on the one side, and the British frontier on the other. The anarchy in Afghanistan, not less than the apathy of the British Government, which in the minds of barbarous peoples is so naturally translated into cowardice or weakness, are both calculated to breed commotion on our frontier. Its tribes also know that Russia, the Colossus of the north, of whom they believe England stands in mortal terror, is already looming on the horizon of Afghanistan; and the bazaar gossip of Cabul that filters down through the passes regarding the advance of that Power is enough to send a thrill of commotion from Peshawur to Beloochistan, and not by any means to increase the respect of the frontier tribes for the Indian Government. In this Hazara business, however, Sir John Lawrence has redeemed the error in his treatment of the Bazotees a few months ago with a promptitude and vigour that is worthy of the dictatorship he holds. The force which has been despatched has been moved with a suddenness and celerity which has taken India by surprise. It was in motion before the outbreak in Hazara became publicly known, and its unexpected appearance may have the effect of quelling the disaffected spirit which is abroad, and alarming the offending tribe into voluntary submission and reparation for their crime. If it does not overawe them by its magnitude, then there is no help for it but to seek out and punish the offenders in their native hills.

A CONTRACT LAW FOR INDIA.

The Friend of India, commenting on the antagonism between Mr. Maine and the Indian Law Commissioners, thinks that the difficulty in this dispute, acknowledged with his usual frankness by Sir John Lawrence, is exactly that which led to his Excellency's interference in Oudh—the cultivator is weak and ignorant; the capitalist is strong and sometimes unscrupulous. That is true, though we are responsible for the peasant's ignorance, and his cunning is too often more than a match for the capitalist, certainly for the European capitalist. But Sir John Lawrence will admit that even the capitalist has rights and that his capital is of immense importance to the ryot. If only the one could be kept honest—without such penal laws as the Opium and Cotton Acts, for instance—and the other merciful as well as just, who can estimate the prosperity that would cover the length and breadth of India? The produce of its fields, the consumption of English goods by its millions, the extent of its internal and external trade, the happiness and intelligence of its people, would be multiplied at least tenfold. All this, we believe, the Law Commissioners would ignorantly prevent; much of this, we maintain, Mr. Maine's specific performance sections are certain to produce. We advocate them now, as we supported them four years ago, in the interests of the peasantry. These sections make a remedy available only in the Civil Court. Even there they leave it to the judge to say whether the disputed contract is equitable or not. The law is to apply to registered contracts only. It will take cognisance only of contracts made for less than five years. At the very worst, when, in a case of glaring dishonesty, specific performance is still refused, the fraudulent contractor is to receive only the penalty that would fall on him for non-payment of damages—imprisonment in the Civil Gaol, where he will be kept at his creditor's expense. Finally, that every possibility of even hardship may be prevented, the judge may refuse to decree specific performance where such hardship would be considerable. We put it to Sir John Lawrence's sense of fairness, if anything could be more favourable to the agriculturist, and at the same time less just to the capitalist, than such stringent provisions as these. Indeed, his Excellency confesses that they "assuredly" would prove inoperative so far as the planter is concerned. Other, and on a Bengal and legal question higher, authorities do not think so. Let the experiment at least be tried. His Excellency is a statesman, prejudiced, however nobly, in favour of the dumb and the poor. Can he deny that these proposals are calculated to extend to the peasantry more protection as well as prosperity than the "exceptional legislation" which would exclude all capitalists from their civil rights, as well as to prevent or reform existing abuses, to redeem the pledge of his predecessor, and to develop the productive industry of a land hitherto steeped in ignorance, in debt, and in oppression?

THE VAGRANCY ACT.

The Englishman holds that, although for begging a European might without any injustice be punished as we suggest, he could hardly with fairness be so treated for merely being a wanderer, even though without employment. The proposed Act, however, includes in its definition persons of the latter class, and an elaborate, expensive, and ineffectual system of workhouses and reformatory treatment follows, as a matter of course, while the only provision really likely to be an effectual deterrent is restricted to cases of begging under circumstances of special aggravation. After all, we see no real advantage to be gained by being thus comprehensive at the expense of vigour. As long as a man wanders without begging or stealing it may be reasonably inferred that he has some legitimate means of subsistence, whether "visible" or not. There is no immediate necessity, if there is any justification, for interfering with him. And though it may be said that there are many cases in which interference at this stage would prevent a man from subsequently begging or stealing, we think men are much more likely to be deterred from setting out at all without means by the certainty of being punished for doing either the one or the other, than by the chance of being provided for at the public expense in a workhouse. Again, we are doubtful whether too much is not entrusted to the police in empowering them to arrest Europeans, neither begging nor committing any offence, on the ground of their wandering without visible means of subsistence. As we have already said, a man cannot wander very far under such conditions without means of subsistence. The term "visible," as applied to means of subsistence, is liable to be misconstrued. A man may be wandering without employment or without means of subsistence, which may be quite invisible to a native police officer, and though he may be able to convince the magistrate that he is not a vagrant, his arrest may be a source of great hardship to him. If we saw anything to be gained by extending the provisions of the enactment to others than actual beggars, and offenders against the laws of the country, we should not be inclined to insist on this objection. But, as we have said, a more stringent law against beggars would operate far more effectually to prevent that kind of vagrancy which is a real nuisance, than a half-and-half measure against both beggars and wanderers.

MAILS FOR MALTA (VIA MARSEILLES).—In October next, the usual day of despatch of the mails for Malta, via Marseilles (on the Messina line), will be departed from on two occasions, in order to fit the arrival at Messina to the departure thence of the Italian packet for Malta. Instead of the mails being made up in London as usual on the evenings of the 7th and 27th, they will in October be despatched a day earlier, viz., on the evenings of the 6th and 26th October, with supplementary mails on the mornings of the 7th and 27th. No alteration will occur as regards the mail of the middle of the month, viz., the 17th, which will be despatched in due course.

MILITARY FURLONGHS.—The following officers obtained furloughs to Europe on m.c. in August:—Colonel Abbott, Bengal Infantry, to Bombay, for one month from the 17th July, for m.c., in extension, under the Furlough Rules of 1868; Quartermaster Lawrence, 88th Foot, to remain at Murree and Bombay, on private affairs, from the 11th August to the 15th October, in extension, and thence to England, for six months; Captain Wood, 91st Foot, to England, via Egypt, from date of embarkation; Captain Richardes, Officiating Barrackmaster, Saugor, to Bombay, for one month, from date of availing himself of it, preparatory to applying for furlough to Europe; Lieutenant Baldwin, Quartermaster 39th Native Infantry, to Almorah and hills north of Bareilly, from the 22nd July to the 22nd November, under new Furlough Rules of 1868; Surgeon Major St. Tucker, M.D., in medical charge 27th Native Infantry, to Calcutta, for one month, from date of availing himself of it, preparatory to applying for furlough; Lieutenant Palmer, of the Bengal Staff Corps, Adjutant, 10th Bengal Cavalry (Lancers), for six months, with effect from the 13th June, the date of his departure from Zoulla on the steamer Dalhousie; Lieutenant Babington, of the 9th Bengal Cavalry, for 18 months; Lieutenant Gilbert, 37th Foot, to remain in England, on private affairs, from the 25th July to the 31st December in extension; Major Hicks, to remain in Bombay from the 23rd to the 29th February, in extension, preparatory to proceeding to Europe on furlough. The undermentioned officers have reported their departure on the date specified opposite to their names:—Major General Dunsford, C.B., of the Bengal Staff Corps, Surgeon Major Tucker, M.D., Candia, 3rd August, 1868.

EXAMINATIONS IN THE NATIVE LANGUAGES.—Capt. Sherlock, H.M.'s 28th Regiment, was declared, at the examination held at Meer Meer, July 11, 1868, to have attained the standard in the Punjabi language laid down in G.G.O. No. 734, dated Sept. 9, 1864; Mr. Stoney, Assistant Engineer, First Grade, attached to the Gunduck Irrigation Division, passed in the Departmental Standard, Aug. 5, 1868.

STATION TALK.

SIMLAH, Aug. 13.—What do you think of a duel between too civilised beings living in the second half of the nineteenth century! I am told that one took place here a few days ago between a couple of young sparks with, apparently, more hot blood than brains, fortunately without any serious harm befalling either of them. As the story goes, the affair came about in this wise: one gentleman, whom I shall, with his kind permission, call Q., happened, in the presence of another, whom I shall call X., to speak disrespectfully of a young lady, not knowing that X. had conceived a great admiration of the young lady in question, and that he was in the habit of swearing by her black eyes! X. punches Q.'s head, Q. felt insulted (very naturally) and called X. out. The challenge was accepted, and accordingly, one fine afternoon, these two hair-brained fellows, taking unto themselves two others just as mad, to see that they did the thing en règle, met at the back of Jacko Hill, and forthwith proceeded to discharge sundry and divers diminutive pistols at each other at short ranges. Evidently they were bad shots, for no harm was done, except that X. received a slight wound in the left wrist; it might have been worse, but for the presence of a sleeve link which turned the ball. "I tell the tale as 'twas told to me," not having been present I cannot vouch for the truth of it, but as I saw X. at the theatre the same evening with his arm in a sling, perhaps it is not altogether incorrect."

NAGPORE, Aug. 16.—It is broadly asserted that Colonel Taylor, our Inspector-General of Police, is no more, having breathed his last at sea. Until the bad news is confirmed, I will refrain from noticing the colonel's valuable and prolonged services to the Government in these provinces; but I may en passant remark that I have no reason to doubt it, and that the case, if a true bill, exemplifies but too forcibly the averment of public opinion that nine-tenths of our old Indian officials are victims to that "one year more," which they should pass in England, instead of risking in the exhausting climate of India. Colonel Taylor generally looked the picture of health; but how deceptive are those looks which are generally so termed; and it is, I know, a point on which few medical men will disagree, for it is scarcely a week ago that I was told by an eminent local member of the faculty that whereas ten out of twelve of the pale faced wiry men will battle through the ills of an Indian career, a very small minority of the healthy looking will overcome the diseases which are common to the tropics. Colonel Moxon has succeeded Colonel Taylor as Officiating Inspector-General of Police, a result which everyone expected, though I fancy the residents of Jubbulpore will, for one reason, regret his departure, as he was the "life and soul" of the station, and largely catered for all their public amusements. By the same token he is an acquisition to us. But the Officiating Inspector-General's claims to promotion are unquestionable; he is the senior superintendent in rank and service, has brought the Jubbulpore police into a condition of unrivalled efficiency, and has been looked upon by the police force as their next head. This last recommendation implies a popular vote, which is a strong title. Every day proves the vast advantage to homeward bound travellers of the route via Jubbulpore and Nagpore, and nothing has done that road so much good as the withdrawal of Messrs. Howard Brothers' horse dak, for the P. W. D. are up to "the sweat of their brow" to keep it in spick span order. I do not mean to exonerate Howard Brothers for suddenly withdrawing their dak; but there can at the same time be no question of doubt that Government could not have kept the road in its present tolerable condition, had the country received its full measure of rain. The monsoons have been so mild that the P. W. D. have been able to repair the line and refute Howard Brothers' strictures on the road, by the communicated observations of the various travellers up and down the road, and they have thus laughed them to scorn.

PESHAWUR, Aug. 17.—It has been determined by the military authorities at head-quarters not to weaken this garrison by despatching troops hence to Abbottabad. The 3rd Sikhs have marched, 'tis true, but then the 3rd Sikhs did not form an integral part of the garrison. A detachment of the 25th Native Infantry ordered to Murdan has returned, and the two companies of Sappers and Miners on the eve of departing received orders to "stand fast." To denude this garrison of troops at the present moment would be simple madness, for there is not a man to spare as it is. What with bona fide garrison duty and outposts, men on furlough, incapables, and the fear of injury to European soldiers, our battalions would not exhibit a very formidable array were we called upon to march them at once to the mouth of the Khyber, or against the Bussi-kheyls, or any other hill tribe. It has been ruled, then, that this garrison is not to be indented on, and this ruling, it must be owned, is both wise and judicious. Major-General Haly has not yet returned from Cashmere; but all officers on leave have been ordered back to duty except those on sick certificate, and all leave has been stopped. From all the reports which are flying about it seems that we are in for a cold weather campaign; but then there is no saying, for judging from precedent and not common sense the natural inference is that the Agror affair will end in a piece of political patchwork, just as every disturbance has ended since the Sittana war. Already we have created a Major-General for the occasion, and a large force is being concentrated in Hazara under his command. Warlike preparations are being made, and there is a business-like look about them. But then the same thing happened just a year ago, when we accumulated a large force to settle the Bussi-kheyl insolence. When our bayonets glistened in their faces they knuckled down and we withdrew. But if we had carried out the programme then which will yet have to be carried out, we might have saved ourselves a world of trouble for the future, and have saved our troops the reverse they suffered against the Bezotees not long since. We want a free, open passage from this garrison to Kohat; and we ought to have it. And if in order to obtain that free, open passage it is necessary to annex territory, then let us annex it. Now we have pushed our army from Cape Comorin to Peshawur we denounce with all our might the principle of annexation, and we stand haggling with our conscience about appropriating a few acres of land with more ado than Lord Dalhousie would, were he our ruler, over the annexation of a kingdom. It is impossible therefore to say what will be the finale of the Agror drama. It depends upon the strength of our army and the tone of mind of our political agents. It is well known that our army is not so strong as it might be; it is equally well known that the mental vigour of our political agents is not of the highest type. So, at this moment, it is difficult to draw any inference. To be sure the army may be made strong and the mental vigour of our political agents may be potentially nerved for the occasion. If so, there will be hard fighting and a march to the Black Mountain, perhaps to the Hindoo Koosh. If not, caresses, and kisses, and money will patch the work, and the troops will return by easy marches to their respective garrisons. It is very difficult to say if Feroze Shah has anything whatever to do with the affair on hand. There is an opinion afloat from all sides that he has not much if any influence over the Buneys; and it is said that the Akhoond of Swat will have nothing to do with him. Both of these personages are seemingly quiet now, and do not appear to be exercising any influence over the Chuzzulzaies or the Hussunzaies, the tribes in arms against us. But when the Indus falls, and other tribes are able to join the aggressors, it is just possible that both may become formidable inciters of our numerous enemies who flank and fringe the whole of our north-west frontier.

UMRITSUR, Aug. 18.—Day of the eclipse, which to us has been next to a sham, for we only lost a very small segment of the sun for about an hour or so, instead of the all but total immersion of the moon in the sun's rays we had been led to look for. However small it brought grist to the railway mill, for some three hundred passengers went last night down to the Beas to be at hand to plunge into the waters of the river on the first intimation that the sun was being obscured. They return this afternoon. The Hazara disturbances, if what are assuming unpleasant dimensions may be called so, are also contributing their share to the railway treasury. One entire regiment and a considerable body of police have already gone up, a second regiment will soon be passing through, and this evening 110 men of the 21st Punjab Infantry join headquarters from detachment duty here, to proceed on service. You have no doubt heard ere this that a troop of Horse Artillery is under orders from Mean Meer to start as soon as final instructions reach them, while 400 men of H.M.'s 35th are to march at once, and Captain Anderson's battery has already marched. These, with other extensive movements, and the pressing demands for camel and mule-carriage sent in all directions, seem to indicate a determination on the part of Government to do the thing well, and it is to be hoped they will make a root and branch matter of it once for all. As most of the Trans-Indus tribes north of Peshawur are believed to be implicated, it would be well to annex a large slice of territory adjoining Yoosoozace and including the great Mahabun, which would afford such a capital sanitarium within a stone's throw, comparatively speaking, for the European troops of the Peshawur garrison. The Chumba valley would then be our boundary and those foci of intrigue Mulka, on the north slope and Sittana on the eastern spur of the great mountain, would be extinguished for ever.

JOUNPORE, Aug. 18.—The indigo of this district is looking well, notwithstanding the heavy rains we have had. All the planters anticipate a good outturn. I hear very bad accounts from Chupprah and the surrounding districts that the quantity estimated by Messrs. Thomas and Co., of Calcutta, will not be brought into the market in consequence of the failure of the stipulated crop in Tirhoot. If this is the case planters will be able to get better prices than last year. I am told on very good authority that a well known firm at Mirzapoor has already been offered Rs. 25 more than what they sold for last year and have refused it. The police of this district is in a shameful state. Murders are the order of the day, and the best of the matter is that the police cannot get the slightest trace to the offenders. A little girl, about thirteen years of age, was murdered in the city for twelve rupees worth of jewellery. Up to date no trace has been obtained to the perpetrators. As for burglaries, why crime was never more rife and the police seem to be helpless; in fact they take things easy, there being no one to look after them. I don't believe there is in the whole of the North-Western Provinces a more useless body than the present Jounpoor police. It is high time that a reformation was commenced and a few changes made. The people have no security whatever for life or property, and the police want some one at their head to instill fear into them.

LUCKNOW, Aug. 19.—A couple of days ago we were somewhat startled by hearing rumours of disturbances of a serious nature having taken place at the town of Shahabad, in the Hurdul district. People would have it that four police constables had been killed right off, and before long twenty-five natives were added to the number, and declared to have come to an untimely end. Major Aitken, inspector-general of police, promptly proceeded to Shahabad, and is still there. The affair is probably over before this, but full particulars have not been received. The Oudh police report for last year tells us that rioting is on the increase in the Hurdul district, and the Hindoos and Mussulmans of Shahabad have long been notorious for the bitter feelings of animosity they entertain against each other. In the present instance the Mussulman was the aggressor. The Hindoo festival Janum Ashtri is terminated by a ceremony called Dadh Kando, and the day is rather a high day. Processions take place, and the Hindoos indulge in besprinkling all they meet with curds. Whether any of these curds on former occasions came in contact with the Mussulmans and defiled them is not exactly known, but this throwing of curds is supposed to have been the immediate cause of the disturbance. Whatever the cause may have been, the Mussulmans resolved to molest the Hindoos and prevent their procession. This came to the knowledge of the tehsildar, who at once reported the matter to the Deputy Commissioner of Hurdul. A body of police was sent to Shahabad with the District Superintendent of Police. What became of the District Superintendent my informant does not say, but the tehsildar at once accompanied the Hindoos in their procession. A crowd of Mussulmans was soon met with, armed with sticks. Bent on mischief, the Mussulmans attacked the tehsildar forthwith. Several policemen were more or less injured, and the tehsildar with his police and the Hindoos were obliged to retire. Great confusion of course ensued. The Mussulmans were master of the situation. The Hindoos were ordered to defend themselves in their houses, and during the night may be said to have carried their lives in their hands. One Hindoo was killed and three or four others wounded mortally. Morning brought relief. An Assistant Commissioner with more police from Hurdul and an officer with two companies of Native Infantry from Shahjehanpore put in an appearance and began forthwith to make arrests. The Hindoos were ordered to keep within doors the whole of Friday and Saturday, and a great number of Mussulmans were apprehended, but it is said the most influential of them were released on giving security. So far as is known here the affair thus came to an end, but matters are now in Major Aitken's hands, and he will doubtless teach these Shahabad Mussulmans a lesson, and make them understand they cannot commit such outrages with impunity. Yesterday morning we had a very fair view of the eclipse, quite two-thirds of the surface of the sun being covered. An immense number of Hindoos went from this city to Cawnpore to bathe on the occasion. The railway people opened a ticket office in the chook and ran trains as frequently as their limited stock of carriages would allow. On Tuesday, as soon as a train came in from Cawnpore and the engine had been fed and transferred to the other end of it, the return journey was commenced. Horse boxes, cattle waggons and timber trucks all served for the conveyance of passengers, who were packed almost as close as herrings in a tub. In some carriages quite eighty people were crammed, and, though there were nearly forty carriages in each train, the crowd on the platform appeared to get no less. All night long the specials ran, and still hundreds upon hundreds were left behind, and had to put up with the Goomtee instead of the Ganges.—Delhi Gazette Correspondent.

ABBOTABAD.—The attack made by the independent tribes of the Black Mountain upon our police station in the Agror Valley was under the guidance no doubt of the worthy Khan and Jageerdar, who is just now (8th August) on his way to Rawulpindee under safe escort. The 1,000 or 500 assailants, strange to say, met with a warm reception from the twenty-five policemen who occupied the Thannah. Our loss was chiefly in horses, the Thannah having been completely cleared out. Three or four policemen were badly wounded, but the attacking party must have lost a dozen men in killed and wounded. The 5th Ghoorkah Regiment, 400 strong, commanded by Colonel Rothney and Hughes's Mountain Train, left Abbottabad the next day. Since then they have been reinforced by 200 men of the 2nd Punjab Infantry under Tyndall, who marched the thirty-seven miles in sixteen and a-half hours, perhaps as quick a march as you have ever recorded. The Deputy Commissioner, Captain Ommoney, accompanied the Ghoorkahs and the next day was followed by the Commissioner, Major Pollock. Careful enquiries and a ride round the valley soon satisfied both that a stiff business was before us, and since then the Commissioner and General Wilde, commanding the Frontier Force, have been engaged day and night in rapidly carrying out such a disposition of their small forces as seemed most advisable, and in communicating with the local Government at Murree. Most fortunate are we in having at command the calm judgment and great frontier experience of both of these officers, than whom no safer pilots can be found.—Friend of India Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

SIR W. MANSFIELD.—It is reported that the Commander-in-Chief will leave Simla for Meerut about the 24th of October next.

SANITATION DEPARTMENT.—It is notified that the Sanitary Commissioner of the North-Western Provinces has been appointed Compiler of Mortuary Returns.

LICENSE TO SOLEMNISE MARRIAGES.—The Rev. J. Humphrey, of the Methodist Episcopal Mission, Nyneo Tal, is licensed to solemnise marriages and to grant certificates of marriage between native Christians in the North-Western Provinces.

MILITARY.—The Delhi Gazette learns that it is in contemplation, not to send Hindustanee regiments further north than Delhi in future, and not to bring the Punjaabee further south. The wisdom of the measure, if it be ever adopted, is very doubtful.

MORE CIVIL SERVANTS WANTED.—In consequence of a decrease in the strength of the civil service from deaths and resignations, the Government have asked the Secretary of State to increase the number of officers in this branch of the public service.—Englishman.

EMIGRATION AGENCY.—The Lieut.-governor has been pleased to approve of the nomination of Mr. Thornton Warner, Emigration Agent for Trinidad, to officiate as Emigration Agent for Mauritius, in addition to his own duties, during the absence, on leave, of Mr. Eales, subject to confirmation by the Government of Mauritius.

A QUESTIONABLE GIFT.—The Nawab Secunder Begum of Bhopal has, the Englishman is informed, offered to present to the Emperor of the French one of the gateways of the celebrated Buddhist tope at Sanchi, near Bhilsa. In the interest of Indian Archaeology we protest against the Bhilsa Topes being interfered with.

SITTINGS OF THE HIGH COURT AT ALLAHABAD.—Under the provisions of Section 7, Act XXIV. of 1868 (the High Court, North-Western Provinces Act), the Honourable the Lieutenant-Governor is pleased to direct that one division of the High Court shall hold its sittings at Allahabad, on and from the 2nd of November, 1868.

ORDNANCE COMMISSARIAT.—The following promotions are made from the dates specified:—To be Sub-Conductors.—Officiating Sub-Conductor Palmer, 17th September, 1867. Officiating Sub-Conductor Lake, 31st December, 1867. Officiating Sub-Conductor Grimshaw, 9th January, 1868.

NATIVE LIBERALITY.—Rajah Lelanund Singh, the largest zemindar in the Bhagulpore Division, has set an example to his brother zemindars, only too rare, in giving Rs. 15,000 for the construction of a school-house at Bhagulpore. The thanks of the Lieutenant-governor are conveyed to him, and the facts published in the Calcutta Gazette.

MR. DUGALD TURNER.—We much regret to notice the death of an Oude officer, Mr. Dugald Turner, late of Sultanpore and in charge of the third Oude roads division. This lamented officer died very suddenly from cholera at Allahabad, while passing through on his way to England, where he was proceeding on sick leave.—Lucknow Times, August 12.

MUNICIPAL.—Mr. Godfrey is appointed Vice-Chairman of the Municipal Commissioners for the towns of Serampore and Ootparah, with effect from July 28. Mr. Ruddock to be Vice-Chairman of the Municipal Commissioner of the town of Durbhungah. The Lieut.-Governor is pleased to accept the resignation tendered by Mr. John Macleod of his appointment as a Municipal Commissioner for the town of Chuprah.

WITHDRAWAL OF THE BHOOTAN SUBSIDY.—The Englishman states that Government has, in consequence of the disrespectful and contumacious conduct of the Poonakha Durbar, resolved to withdraw the Bhootan subsidy. This subsidy, which has for some time furnished the Bhootah chiefs with the means of carrying on petty wars among themselves, has been always spoken of by the chiefs as "tribute." Government has thus remedied what was one of its great mistakes committed under Sir Cecil Beadon's advice.

PROPOSED REVISION OF THE SALARIES OF SUBORDINATE MEDICAL OFFICERS.—We have been informed that the Government of India, in a recent despatch to the Home Government, has recommended a revision of the salaries of the subordinate medical officers, including native doctors, on the ground that several of these officers have to perform very responsible and arduous duties, and that they are very poorly paid in comparison with other officers of the uncovenanted branch of the public service.—Indian Daily News and Bengal Hurkaru, Aug. 18.

OFFICIAL MOVEMENTS.—Letters from Simla say that nothing has yet been fixed about the cold-weather movements of the Viceroy. As usual there is a very great deal of talk, but as nothing has been decided upon we refrain from giving currency to the rumours which reach us. No doubt the ultimate decision will depend greatly upon—first, the date of the Duke of Edinburgh's visit to India; and, secondly, the course of events on the frontier. It is just possible there may be a grand durbar at Delhi during the cold season. The Hon. W. N. Taylor will, we learn, take leave in March next, and be succeeded in Council by Mr. W. S. Seton-Karr, the present Foreign Secretary.—Englishman.

BOARD OF EXAMINERS (NATIVE LANGUAGES).—The following gentlemen to be Members of the Board of Examiners, viz.:—Messrs. Munro and Souttar. Mr. Campbell to be President of the Board of Examiners.

NEWS FROM BURMAH.—From the Burmah papers we learn that Captain Sladen and party reached Momein at the beginning of June. They were received by the Governor, who is the second man in the kingdom, with great honour. He undertook to supply all their wants, and gave them a large Chinese temple close by his palace as a residence. At Mandalay there has been another attempt at revolution on the part of some members of the Royal family. The Thonzai Mengtha, the same who fled once before to Rangoon, appears to have conspired with the Mekkara Mengtha to seize the Royal palace on the occasion of the King's performance of the annual ceremony of blessing the rice fields. The prime mover in the conspiracy was the Atwenwoon of Bhanmo. The conspiracy was discovered, and the leaders seized and imprisoned, and it is said the Atwenwoon was flogged, and that he has since died. The King's terror of a revolution would thus appear to be founded on some more substantial basis than the prospect of an invasion of the Shans, under the Meingoon Mengtha.—Englishman.

MAGISTERIAL POWERS.—The Honourable the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal has appointed Mr. Alfred Smithson, indigo planter, of Guhmer, Pergunnah Zumaneeah, Zillah Ghazeeapore, to be an Honorary Magistrate, under Act XV. of 1843 (an Act for the more extensive employment of uncovenanted agency in the Judicial Department), and to invest him with the powers of a Subordinate Magistrate of the 2nd class, to be exercised within the Pergunnah of Zumaneeah, Zillah Ghazeeapore. The undermentioned officers are invested, in the Criminal Department, with the powers of a magistrate, and with full powers in the Civil and Revenue Departments:—Lieut. R. Bartholomew, Assistant Commissioner; Mr. H. St. G. Tucker, Assistant Commissioner. Lieut. H. M. Ramsay, Officiating Assistant Inspector-general of Police, East India Railway, is vested with the powers of a magistrate in that part of the line which lies within the Lieutenant-governorship of Bengal. Lieutenant Ramsay will exercise these powers only so far as they are necessary for the purposes of the registration of the servants of the East India Railway Company.

TENANT RIGHT.—A very important change has been made in that part of the Oudh Rent Bill now before the Supreme Legislative Council which relates to the enhancement of the rent of tenants not having rights of occupancy. The original Bill provided that when a landlord desired to enhance the rent of a tenant he must serve a notice upon him through the tehsildar, specifying the rent demanded, and the fields in respect of which enhancement was to take place. The result was, that the tenant often looked on the notice thus served as an order of the Court that he was to pay the increased rent which had been demanded by the landlord. The select committee have now changed this; and in any suit between a landlord and a tenant not having a right of occupancy the Court will assume that the tenant is liable to pay rent only at the same rate which was payable for the last preceding year, unless it is shown, by evidence in writing, that the parties had agreed that the previous rent should be altered. This is almost equivalent to saying that an enhancement of rent must always take place under a written lease. If no arrangement could be come to between the parties, the landlord would have the remedy in his own hands by exercising his power of ejectment. A strong encouragement will thus no doubt be given to the custom of giving written leases for a term of years. The change will be advantageous to tenants, and will be approved by the better class of landlords.—Times of India.

THE DISTURBANCE ON THE HAZARA FRONTIER.—The warning thus given has been accepted promptly and fully, and a force pushed together, which will enable the Government to deal as it deserves with any movement of the tribes from Mahabun to Kohat. It will be as well, however, to replace the troops sent from Hoti Murdan—the 3rd Sikhs and a detachment of Guides—as soon as possible. Nothing is so likely to add to the activity of the Sittana fanatics, or to the insolence of the Swatees as the belief that the garrison of the Peshawur valley has been in any way weakened. As far as we can learn the force assembling will be composed as under:—Staff—Brig-general Wilde, with rank as Major-general; Colonel Bright, 19th Foot, as Brigadier; Colonel Vaughan, C.B., 5th P.N.I., as Brigadier; Major C. C. Johnson, Quartermaster-general; Major Morland, Assistant Adjutant-general; Lieut.-colonel Dickens, Commissariat; Inspector-general Hospitals. Troops—Artillery—Peshawur Mountain Battery, Hazarah Mountain Battery, D Battery, F. Brigade R.H.A. with 9-pr. Armstrongs. Cavalry—Guide Cavalry, and wing 16th Bengal Cavalry, with the 20th Hussars in support at Abbottabad. British Infantry—H.M.'s 1st Battalion 6th Foot (Sniders), H.M.'s 1st Battalion 19th Foot, H.M.'s 77th Foot (Detachment). Native Infantry—1st Goorkha Regiment, 2nd Goorkha Regiment, 4th Goorkha Regiment, 5th Goorkha Regiment, 3rd Sikh Infantry, 2nd Punjab N.I., 20th Punjab N.I., 23rd Punjab N.I., 24th Punjab N.I., two companies Sappers and Miners. In support of this force, it is believed that the following regiments will be moved up in anticipation of the relief:—H.M.'s 38th Foot, the 19th, 38th, and 31st Punjab Infantry.—Englishman MILITARY LEAVE OF ABSENCE.—The following officers obtained leave of absence on m.c., &c., in August:—Major Boisragon (Commandant 30th Native Infantry), to remain at Nynce Tal, from June 12 to Oct. 15, in extension; Capt. Buckley (attached to the 15th Native Infantry), to remain at Almorah, on private affairs, from July 1 to Oct. 15, in extension; Staff Assistant Surgeon Riddick (doing duty Chinsurah depot), to Darjeeling, for four months, from date of availing himself of it; Surg. Currie (attached to 18th Bengal Cavalry), to Murree and adjacent hills, from July 18 to Nov. 10, in extension; Second Capt. Tottenham (E Battery 8th Brigade), to Landour, on private affairs, from Aug. 15 to Oct. 15; Lieut. Young (No. 5 Battery 24th Brigade), to Calcutta, from July 18 to Aug. 17; Lieut. Bell (Instructor in Gunnery, 8th Brigade), to remain at Landour, on private affairs, from Sept. 4 to Oct. 15, in extension.

FEROZE SHAH.—A contemporary suggests that Feroze Shah may possibly have had something to do with exciting the present disturbances in Hazara. The fact that Feroze Shah's head quarters are established on the other side of the Indus is urged as strong confirmation of the supposition. Now the truth is that Feroze Shah has no influence whatever on the frontier, no following and no money. At the very time he affected to be a Russian agent he was himself in the greatest straits, and found difficulty in living from day to day. The Akhoond of Swat both dislikes and distrusts him, as he does all Hindustanees. Moreover, Boneyr and Swat are at the present moment at deadly feud. Zydoolla Khan, one of the Boneyr leaders, has been murdered by the Akhoond's party. Asseen Khan has sent a letter to one of our political officers, Colonel Pollock, we believe, offering to make over Boneyr to us, because, as he says, the Akhoond's spiritual yoke is intolerable and not to be endured. It will be seen, therefore, that Feroze Shah's power of doing mischief in the present state of frontier affairs is almost nil. But whether we shall have the Hindustanees against us in the ensuing campaign remains to be seen. As yet, we believe, not a man of them has crossed the border. Whether they do so or not will, however, matter very little, so far as the result of the expedition is concerned. The force now assembled in Hazara will be sufficient for any contingency which may arise, and the success which we have already achieved augurs well for the future.—Pioneer.

REGIMENTAL GARDENS.—The returns from gardens worked by British troops in the Bengal Presidency for the year ending 31st March, 1868, are satisfactory; notwithstanding several regiments and batteries, in consequence of relief, desisted from cultivation. The average number of regiments possessing gardens was 5 per cent., against 5.4. In many instances those gardens have largely supplied the commissariat with excellent vegetables for consumption. Company gardens were high in favour among the men, and great care and attention were evidently bestowed upon them. Notwithstanding the decrease in the number of regimental gardens the general balance credit at the end of the year was Rs. 2,242, against Rs. 1,878 in the previous year.

THE OUTBREAK IN THE HAZARAH COUNTRY.—A letter from the frontier, dated 13th August, says:—"Prior to being attacked by Colonel Rothney's force the Hussunzais burnt several other villages. The European detachments from the Murree and Abbotabad road are en route, and are expected daily. Since Colonel Rothney drove the enemy into the hills nothing new has occurred, as we are waiting for reinforcements. I may mention, however, that a party of one hundred and fifty Ellahiwalas attacked one of our survey parties. But with the aid of the chiefs on our side the survey party were enabled to retire without loss, having wounded five of the enemy. The fight lasted upwards of two hours. I will give you particulars in my next." We are indebted to another correspondent in Hazara, writing under date 13th August, for the particulars of Colonel Rothney's engagement with the enemy on the previous day and the (then) condition of affairs on the frontier:—"Matters are progressing favourably. Yesterday the force at Oghee, in the Agror Valley, having been reinforced by 160 sabres, and its communications with the rear made quite secure, acted for the first time on the defensive, and inflicted some loss on the Swatee portion of the enemy, who had taken up a position inside our border. Colonel Rothney drove the Swatees out of the plain, with a loss of about thirty killed and wounded. He was himself hit by a spent ball and wounded slightly. We had not a man killed, and no other casualties except five or six sepoy wounded. The spread of the disturbance began to subside almost immediately after this skirmish between our troops and the enemy, who had been allowed to remain ten days within our border. It was lucky that the Commissioner and the general were on the spot, or greater delay must have occurred in putting matters to rights. The want of reinforcements and of carriage was, and is still, severely felt. Our feudatory, the Tunawulee chief of Umb, and his men, have done excellent service, and the charge up the hill-side of the small band of Tunawulee horse-men five days ago excited the admiration of all who witnessed it. They cut up more than twenty of the enemy on that occasion. This Khan's trans-Indus territory has been threatened, and one of his hamlets has been burnt down. It becomes our duty, therefore, to support him, as we have done in former affairs. This is the least we can do after the blood he has shed for us. A force will probably be moved to Durbund to render him moral support, and material aid if necessary. Such a force at Durbund will also be useful in our own coming operations. It may be as well, perhaps, if I correct here a slight error in the account you gave of the origin of the outbreak and the attack on the police thanna. The error, though in itself apparently trifling, is nevertheless of some importance. We have no salt customs line in the Agror valley, as stated by your informant; and the statement is calculated to set people thinking that our politicals had irritated the Khan into disloyalty by establishing the police station there. Nothing could be further from the truth than such a supposition, because nothing could exceed the patient consideration with which the Khan has all along been treated.—Pioneer, Aug. 21.

Madras.

THE CHIEF JUSTICE AND ARCHDEACON.—Sir Colley Scotland and the Venerable Archdeacon Dealty have gone to Singapore for the benefit of the sea voyage. They propose being absent from Madras about two months. The Archdeacon has only just recovered from a sharp attack of liver disease.

A PRINTING PRESS FOR CONVICTS.—A printing press is to be established in the Madras Penitentiary on the model of the one in the Alipore Jail, for the purpose of instructing convicts in printing, in addition to the other arts taught in that institution. The printing of the Fort St. George Gazette will in future be made over to the Penitentiary. Government has urged that a similar measure should be carried out in the Bombay Presidency Jail.

A NEW TREATMENT FOR HORSES.—We understand that his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, after the recent inspection of the Royal Artillery at Bangalore, recommended to Government the issue of salt for the use of the horses of all batteries of Royal Artillery, in order to prevent the animals from contracting disease by their eating filthy sand while being tied in the lines, a cause of many deaths of late in the batteries of the Royal Artillery. The Government have accordingly directed the Controller of Military Accounts, Fort St. George, to submit an estimate of the cost of the supply.

FURLONGS.—The undermentioned officers are permitted to proceed to Europe:—Lieutenant-Colonel Ritherdon, of the Staff Corps, on medical certificate for two years, under Rule XV. of the furlough regulations of 1868, and to embark from Madras. Surgeon Doyle, in medical charge 17th Regiment Native Infantry, on furlough for two years, under the regulations of 1868, and to embark from Bombay or Kurrachee in October 1868. Lieutenant Owen, Staff Corps, "attached" 16th Regiment Native Infantry, on medical certificate for two years, under Rule XV. of the regulations of 1868, and to embark from Madras; and Captain Dance, R.A., to England, on m.c.

THE MADRAS RAILWAY.—The traffic receipts of the South-west line for the week ending Aug. 8, 1868, amounted for passengers, &c., to Rs. 29,016-2-7; for goods, &c., to Rs. 47,764-5-4; making together Rs. 76,780-7-11, or an average receipt per mile of Rs. 156-0-11. During the corresponding week in 1867 the receipts were Rs. 72,035-3-6, or an average receipt per mile of Rs. 146-6-7. The receipts of the North-west line for the same week amounted for passengers, &c., to Rs. 5,177-2-11; for goods, &c., to Rs. 19,876-5-2; making together, Rs. 25,053-8-1, or an average receipt per mile of Rs. 163-12-0. During the corresponding week in 1867 the receipts were Rs. 19,285-8-10, or an average receipt per mile of Rs. 126-0-9.

THE ECLIPSE OF THE 18TH AUGUST.—The total solar eclipse was observed with the utmost distinctness on this coast. Mr. C. G. Walker, C.S., pro tem. assistant to the Government Astronomer, telegraphed at noon on the 18th from Masulipatam to the Chief Secretary as follows:—"Eclipse just over. We have had perfect weather and excellent observations." Later in the day we had the pleasure of receiving the following message from the Government Astronomer at Masulipatam:—"Weather pretty fine during eclipse. Totality sun very well. Results generally successful." In Madras itself the weather was everything that could be desired, and scarcely a cloud was to be seen to mar the blue expanse of the sky. Precisely at 8h. 14m. 29sec. the hour and minute stated in the Almanac by Mr. Pogson, the moon took its first bite out of the disc of the sun, and little by little the lesser light advanced and obscured the greater, and not only so, but also reduced the temperature several degrees. The bright tropical sunlight for a time seemed to be unaffected by the phenomenon that was occurring, and pigeons, crows, and kites, not to say sparrows, proceeded about their daily avocations in so business-like a manner that for a time the illustrious writer of the article in the Almanac was deliberately chafed at by the ignorant and incredulous. But very soon however the confidence of facetious critics was put to a painful test by the brightness of the light being toned down to a somewhat grim and melodramatic neutral tint, which rendered outlines less distinct than they had lately been, and imparted an unwholesome aspect to things new and old. Telescopes and bits of smoked glasses were now in great request, and the movement of the moon was watched with increasing interest by both breakfasted and unbreakfasted folk. The sun's usual impeccability of outline now submitted to an abnormal irregularity, until at length, at 9h. 32m. 35sec. it appeared like a crescented new moon, and could be gazed at with impunity with the naked eye. A very beautiful halo surrounding it at a considerable distance now announced the maximum period of obscuration, 925 of the sun's diameter being now immersed, but within a few minutes there was a marked increase of light, and a rapid rise of temperature, and at eleven o'clock the eclipse had ended.—Madras Times, Aug. 19.

HYDERABAD GENERAL ORDER.—The following order issued by the Resident at Hyderabad is confirmed:—Transferring Lieutenant H. de P. Rennick, he having arrived from Abyssinia, from the 3rd to the 4th Infantry, Hyderabad Contingent, as Officiating Wing Subaltern, vice Captain Way.

ARRIVAL OF OFFICERS.—The undermentioned officers have returned to their duty by permission of the Home Government, without prejudice to their rank:—Captain Clarke, 1st Regiment Light Cavalry—arrived at Bombay on the 7th August. Captain (Brevet-Major) Ingram, 24th Regiment Native Infantry—arrived at Madras on 9th August. Lieutenant Cloete, 31st Regiment Light Infantry, 1st Assistant Supt. Revenue Survey Dept.—arrived at Madras on the 14th August. Captain (Brevet-Major) Buttler, 23rd Regiment Light Infantry—arrived at Madras on the 14th August. Capt. Morris, Cadre 8th Regiment Light Cavalry, attached 1st Regiment Light Cavalry—arrived at Madras on the 9th August. Assistant Surgeon Major, 16th Lancers, who arrived at Madras on the 6th August, 1868, will proceed to join his corps.

A PUZZLED SUITOR.—Considerable amusement was created during the recent Criminal Sessions in Madras by the request of one Joseph Antioch, who was the successful prosecutor in a crim. con. case, to be informed whether he was now a single or a married man; and as he had a little child, of whom he could not take care on account of his military duties, he asked permission to take unto himself a wife. The Chief Justice informed him that he had no power to grant a divorce, and if he were not cautious as to what steps he adopted for his future domestic comfort he would find that he had fallen into a greater evil than that which had already overtaken him. By January next probably Joseph Antioch will be able to obtain a cheap divorce, if he is not a European British subject, and six months after he may marry again. If he is, he must blame the Government of England for their unexcusable delay of five years in extending a remedy to India which it is only in the power of Parliament to give.—Friend of India.

REFORM IN PRISON DISCIPLINE.—The Crofton or Irish system of jail discipline is to be partially introduced into Southern India. In February last a committee was appointed by the Government of Madras to consider the regulations under which remission of sentences are granted in central jails throughout that Presidency. A draft set of rules has now been laid before Government, founded upon those principles of discipline that are observed in Irish prisons, but modified so as to admit of the employment of a certain proportion of convicts as jail servants. Convicts so employed will be allowed a remission of one month for every year of their sentence if in the lower grade, and two months if in the higher grade. Every convict will, on the expiration of a sixth of his time, be entitled to earn a partial remission of his sentence by good conduct and industry; a system of marks being kept which will accurately determine the convict's deserts. The average remission which the committee calculate upon each prisoner obtaining will not exceed one-sixth of the original sentence. Under the new rules well-behaved convicts will be able to earn a small sum of money before their release. Convicts employed in Hill prisons will in future receive tobacco with their rations.

MILITARY LEAVE OF ABSENCE.—Ensign Porteous, 21st Foot, probationer for the Staff Corps, attached 34th Light Infantry, from July 25 last, for 4 months—Madras. Captain Ellis, attached 15th Native Infantry, in extension of privilege leave for 6 weeks. Lieutenant Blenkin, Quartermaster 12th Native Infantry, from July 10 last, or date of departure, for 6 months—private affairs. Lieutenant Whyte, 2nd Wing Subaltern, Officiating Quartermaster 14th Native Infantry, from July 31 to October 31—Bangalore, s.c. Lieutenant Watts, 1st Battalion 1st Royals, from August 8 last, or date of departure—for 6 months Madras, to study. Brigadier-General Hodson, Commanding Malabar and Canara, for 30 days—privilege leave from August 5. Brigadier-General Babington, Commanding Northern Districts—privilege leave for 60 days, from September 20. Lieutenant Seacome, C Battery 20th Brigade, Royal Artillery—to Shevaroy Hills for three weeks, m.c., from August 3. Ensign Roden, 1st Foot, for 2 months, from July 28, m.c. Ensign McCausland, 1st Foot, for 2 months from July 28, or date of departure—Bangalore, m.c. Ensign Jenkins, 19th Foot, from July 18, for 3 months—Neilgherries, m.c. (This cancels the leave granted July 24.) Captain Whitlock, 5th Native Infantry, 31 days, from August 1, in extension—Bangalore. Captain Searle, 23rd Light Infantry, for 40 days, from August 5—Madras. Rev. T. Deatry, M.A., Archdeacon of Madras, for 2 months, from August 15. Captain Wood, 91st Foot—to proceed to England by the overland route, on m.c.; this officer is not available for duty with troops, and will, on arrival, report himself to the Adjutant General, Horse Guards.

SNAKE BITES.—Dr. Shortt thus addresses the editor of the Madras Times:—On the 15th instant, a native having applied to G. Thornhill, Esq., the Collector of the Madras District, professing to cure Cobra bites, that gentleman was pleased to send him to me. This man was a Brahmin, and blind of both eyes; he called himself Vathantha Iyengar, and stated that, when a child eight months old, he was afflicted with small-pox, and that his sight was destroyed by this loathsome disease. On asking him what experience he could have as to the action of the Cobra poison, he said that he had none, but that his friends had, and that he was confident of success from the fact of the antidote having been tested successfully by several generations in his family; that his faith in it was such that he had no objection to be bitten himself by the Cobra, with a view of testing the remedy, as he was quite confident of the power of the antidote to neutralise the poison. Not being at leisure I desired him to call the next day, and to bring some animal with him, and after testing the antidote on the animal, should he still insist on it, I would give himself an opportunity. He accordingly came the next day, and brought with him a full grown powerful Pariah dog. The dog was bitten by the Cobra, and the friend who led the blind man mixed up some drugs, and poured it down the animal's throat. The dog died in thirty-five minutes. On asking him what he had to say, he stated "that the dog was a small animal, and had not the power to resist the Cobra poison," but he himself was willing to be bitten by the Cobra, as he was confident of success. I told him to consider well the result of the Cobra poison on the dog, and should he be still of the same opinion the following day, I would let him try the test of his antidote on himself. This he promised to do, but like a sensible man he thought better of it and did not put in an appearance. I was fully confident he would not. Mr. Assistant Apothecary Chalke, on two occasions, brought some drugs, which he was loth to disclose. I gave him an opportunity, and he tested them on two animals, employing the hypodermic syringe, but they signally failed in both instances. I have reason to think that the popular belief is that death from snake bite is a mere trifle. A late Deputy Inspector General of Hospitals, writing from England, gives it as his opinion that deaths from snake-bites are very small—according to his experience of thirty years' service in India. Others have also written to me to the same effect, and I am glad I have now the opportunity of refuting this opinion by adducing facts and figures for which I am indebted to Dr. R. S. Mair, who collected the information and kindly placed the same at my disposal, from which it will be seen that the annual mortality for 1866 from snake bite was 1,890, but Dr. Mair believes, and I concur with him, that the mortality is much greater than that shown in the returns.

STATION TALK.

SATTARA, Aug. 19.—The eclipse was visible in all its totality at Aththa, a village twelve miles distant from Sattara, on the Kolapoor road. Notwithstanding the discouragement arising from a long continuance of wet weather, without any apparent prospect of a break, a large party assembled at Aththa, on Monday, the 17th, finding accommodation in the travellers' bungalow and in tents, and experiencing every assistance from Mr. Arthur, the Collector of Sattara. On Monday evening there was heavy rain, with dark clouds closing in the horizon on all sides. In the early morning of Tuesday, too, the prospect was equally gloomy. As the sun rose, however, the breeze sprung up, and heavy masses of clouds began to drift away to the north-east, leaving here and there glimpses of white flaky clouds in an upper region, and of blue sky beyond. Yet these gleams of promise ended in disappointment, for as one wavy mass of cloud rolled away, another wave came up behind in close succession. Nearly eight o'clock, and all knew that the eclipse had begun: but still, not for a moment, had the sun been visible. Eight o'clock passed, and, from the contrast, there was all the effect of enchantment in the way in which the veil of cloud seemed to be lifted off. At last, the upper region, with the wonderful phenomenon already in progress, was disclosed to view. For the next three-quarters of an hour there was abundant opportunity, from time to time, of observing the gradual disappearance of the luminary, till the blunt crescent seemed at last to pass, not into a "glimmering curve of tender rays," but into a tiny bar, of the apparent length of two or three inches, without any curve at all. Just as this last solar fragment was about to vanish, an intervening cloud obscured the whole phenomenon, and when that passed the scene was revealed in all its singular impressiveness. The deep shade of darkness on the central body was very observable as contrasted with the luminous halo surrounding it, marked in two or three places by points of steady light, as if a flame from behind the shadow stretched out here and there a long bright finger. This grand spectacle was seen for about a minute. Up to this time the light had gradually diminished. A cold breeze was blowing, and the sounds of animal life seemed hushed in silence. What light there was had a pale, sickly hue, and the clouds took a deeper colouring. The stars were visible. But it was not so dark as a moonlight night; it was quite possible to read ordinary print. One minute more, and the light seemed to spring into being anew. As Charles Reade says, "the sun took a stride and again it was day."—Times of India.

Miscellaneous.

MAJOR WIDDICOMBE is appointed to act as Judicial Commissioner in Sind, and Mr. Foxton as Judge and Sessions Judge of Kurrachee.

IN MEMORIAM.—The Delhi Gazette tells us that a monument has been erected at Machurda Hill to the memory of Captains La Touche and Hebbert, and the troops who fell in the action fought there between our troops and the Waghur outlaws on the 29th December, 1867. The chiefs of the province contributed the whole cost of the monument.

CIVIL FURLONGS.—The furlough for two years granted to Mr. Coghlan, Judge and Session Judge of Ahmedabad, on the 7th July, is cancelled, and he is allowed a furlough to Europe for fifteen months, from the 11th Aug.; Mr. E. P. Down, Collector of Poona, has been granted by the Right Honourable the Secretary of State for India an extension of leave for six months, on m.c.

OCCUPATION OF CABUL BY SHERE ALI KHAN.—We received on Tuesday last the following telegram, which was forwarded to us by a correspondent:—"Cabul has been occupied by Futteh Mahomed, General of Shere Ali Khan's troops." On the following day we received another special telegram, which said—"Shere Ali Khan has been proclaimed Ameer of Afghanistan, and Mahomed Azim Khan is now a refugee in Turkistan." A third telegram, on Friday, had the following—"The Ameer Shere Ali Khan has entered Cabul with five thousand sowars. He ascended the throne on the 14th August."—Bombay Gazette, Aug. 25.

FLOODS IN GUZERAT.—The unusually heavy rains which fell on the 10th, 11th, and 12th August in Guzerat and Kattiawar have caused great loss throughout the whole of these districts. Ahmedabad and the country to the northward seemed to have suffered most severely. A correspondent informs us that in Ahmedabad alone one thousand houses have been destroyed, involving a loss of from thirty to forty lakhs of rupees. In the surrounding country, viz., Surkhej, Pethapur, Meshara, Vuduuggur, Yeerungaum, Baroda, and Cambay, several thousand houses have been demolished. The usual rain-fall in Guzerat is about twenty-five inches yearly, fifteen of which have fallen this year before the heavy rains set in; and on the dates above-mentioned there was a fall of no less than twenty-eight inches more, giving a total fall of forty-three inches up to the 12th inst. Government will, no doubt, adopt immediate steps to relieve the distress which must prevail, and which only Government aid can effectually remove. These floods have, we regret to learn, caused loss of life in several places.—Times of India.

THE OLD BANK OF BOMBAY.—REFUSAL BY THE SECRETARY OF STATE TO COMPENSATE SHAREHOLDERS.—The following letter from the India-office to Messrs. Forbes and Co., of Bombay, has lately been received:—"India-office, S.W., 3rd July, 1868.—Gentlemen,—I am directed by the Secretary of State for India in Council to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 13th ult., forwarding copy of a memorial addressed to the Bombay Government by certain shareholders of the late Bank of Bombay, together with other documents, and soliciting a favourable consideration of the request therein contained that Government would bear a considerable portion of the loss which has resulted from the bad management of the Bank. In reply, I have to inform you that similar applications have been received at this office on behalf of shareholders of the Bank of Bombay resident in England, to whom it was intimated that the Secretary of State for India in Council distinctly repudiated any liability on the part of Government to make good the losses sustained by the bank, and Sir Stafford Northcote is unable to depart from that decision.—I am, gentlemen, your obedient servant—(Signed) CLINTON.—Messrs. Forbes and Co."

THE ECLIPSE.—It is to be feared that the total eclipse of the sun on the 18th of August was, on this side of India at least, a "total failure." At Bombay the morning sky was veiled with dense black clouds, and heavy showers of rain fell. It was thus impossible to note the moment of contact; and the progress of the eclipse was marked only by the increasing darkness. This however proved to be a very fallacious guide; for not only was it less intense than people had expected it would be, but it disappeared altogether before general observers had well begun to watch for the moment of greatest obscuration. The same was the case at Poona, Sattara, Koolburga, and most parts of the Southern Mahratta country, whither many had gone, in order to be as nearly as possible under the central line. Reports from all these stations have not yet reached Bombay; but we know that at Takli, near the junction of the Bhima and Kristna, one of the places selected by scientific observers from the coast and the Deccan, very little was seen of the celestial phenomenon. Around Beejapoor the sky was also clouded, so that observations could only be made at intervals. Luckily one of these observations was obtained at the moment of totality, so that the German and other savans will not have had their journey to this country altogether for nothing. There is reason to believe that the English and French astronomers at Guntoor were less unfortunate as regards the weather, and that their Prussian, Austrian, and Swedish brethren at Masulipatam were also favoured with a clearer sky. At the same time, it is more than probable that all the scientific missions to this country will be more or less disappointed with the results they have been able to obtain.—Times of India.

FURLONGS AND LEAVES OF ABSENCE.—The following officers obtained furloughs, &c., on m.c. in August:—Lieutenant and Adjutant Clayton, 23rd Foot, to proceed to England by the overland route; this officer is not available for duty with troops, and will, on arrival, report himself to the Adjutant-General, Horse Guards. THE FREEDOM OF EDINBURGH CITY PRESENTED TO LORD NAPIER.—Lord Napier of Magdala was presented on the 16th inst. with the freedom of the City of Edinburgh. The presentation was made by Lord Provost Chambers, who spoke of the admiration with which the carrying out of the Abyssinian Expedition had been regarded by all classes of Englishmen. Lord Napier, in returning thanks, assured his hearers that he viewed the honour which had been conferred upon him as an ample testimony that he and his naval and military brethren had faithfully served their country in the late expedition. He was far from arrogating to himself the success of the Abyssinian Expedition. It had succeeded under many difficulties because all in their several places strove to do their duty, and acted under the guidance of a merciful and divine Providence. His lordship also eulogised the character of the Scotch people, and traced their success and usefulness in the world mainly to that religious element which so largely influences their conduct. In conclusion, he said they must all be convinced that one of the greatest enemies, if not the greatest, in all communities was ignorance; and he felt doubly exalted in receiving the honour conferred upon him that day from the hands of the man who was the first in Great Britain to place cheap instruction and instructive literature in the hands of the poorest in the country.

DEPARTURE OF TROOPS FOR INDIA.—(CHATHAM, Sept. 16).—The hired troop-ship Alumbagh, chartered by the Government for the conveyance of troops to India, to augment the various corps of cavalry and infantry serving in the Madras Presidency, embarked the following troops at Gravesend this morning, under the superintendence of Brigadier-major W. W. Lynch, and the officers attached to the Quartermaster-general's Department at this garrison—viz.:—Capt. A. R. Hunter, Lieut. A. Logan, and 49 non-commissioned officers and gunners of the Royal Artillery; 30 non-commissioned officers and men of the 16th (Queen's) Lancers; Capt. T. D. Row, Ensign A. C. de Quesne, and 104 men of all ranks of the 2nd battalion of the 19th Regiment; Capt. E. W. Kent, Capt. A. C. Halton, and 50 non-commissioned officers and privates of the 2nd battalion of the 24th Regiment; Capt. E. C. Ainslie, Ensign C. Mitchell, Ensign S. R. Elwes, Ensign H. W. Sandford, and 68 men of the 3rd battalion of the 60th Rifles; Major R. Lloyd, 36th Regt.; Major J. Richardson, Ensign R. B. Giles, and 70 non-commissioned officers and men of the 76th Regiment—total, 14 officers, 368 non-commissioned officers and men, 25 soldiers' wives, and 23 children, the whole under the medical charge of Staff-Assistant Surgeon C. E. Wikeley. After the troops had embarked, the Alumbagh was inspected by Major-general Freeman Murray, in command of this district. The Alumbagh sailed in the evening for Madras.

THE TOTAL ECLIPSE OF THE SUN.—The Augsburg Gazette of 13th September contains the following extract from a letter written by Dr. Hermann Vogel, who accompanied the North German expedition to Aden as a photographer:—"At four o'clock on the 18th of August we left Aden, where the expedition had established its head-quarters. Nine-tenths of the sky was overcast, and we endeavoured to feel as resigned as possible to our probable disappointment. Our object was to obtain as many photographs as could be taken of the phenomena during the three minutes they would last, and in order to do this we had practised with our machine, like soldiers with firearms. Dr. Frische was charged with the preparation of the plates, Dr. Zenker with putting the slides into the machine, Dr. Therle with drawing them out when they had been exposed a sufficient time, while my business was in the tent. With this division of labour we found that it would be possible to obtain six photographs in the three minutes. As the important moment approached, to our delight we saw, through a break in the clouds, the disc of the sun partially covered by the moon. The landscape around us assumed a strange hue, neither sunlight nor moonlight—the chemical colour rays were exceedingly weak. As a test we exposed a plate in the machine for fifteen seconds, and obtained a good impression of the clouds; as the disk of the sun grew smaller, the clouds opened out. The last minute before the total eclipse arrived Dr. Frische and I crept into our tent—our work began. The first plate was experimentally exposed five and ten seconds, in order to be sure of the right time. Mahommed, our black servant, brought me the first slide into the tent. I prepared the plate, and anxiously watched to see what would appear. Just then my light went out. I rushed out of the tent with the plate in my hand, and came back with a small oil lamp, which, in case of accidents, I had placed on a table outside. Eagerly I gazed on the plate—the dark border of the sun was surrounded on one side by peculiar protuberances, and on the other was a remarkable horn. The phenomena were the same in both pictures. My joy was great, but I had no time to indulge in it. The second plate, and, a moment afterwards, the third plate, were brought into the tent. Dr. Zenker shouted to us that the sun was reappearing. The total eclipse was over. The last two plates only showed slight impressions of pictures, as they had been spoilt by the clouds, which, while they were exposed in the machine, had closed in. The three plates showed protuberances on the lower border. We washed, fixed, and lacerated our plates, and took several copies of them on glass, which will be sent separately to Europe in order to insure their safe arrival."

THE CAPITAL OF INDIA.

The Times acknowledges that though Calcutta of late has been partially drained, washed, and lighted, and is by no means such a sink as it used to be, it is still a most unhealthy place. Even where the climate does not kill, it paralyses. It exhausts the energy and vigour of Europeans till it leaves them almost incapable of work, and it is a fact that a good deal of official business, notwithstanding the distance, is managed better at Simla than at Calcutta, owing to the better condition of those in charge of it. But the recommendation of Simla is merely this, that it is in "the hills." Suppose, however, that instead of travelling all the way to Simla the Government were to strike at once due north from Calcutta itself, and get into the hills above Bengal, instead of the hills above Delhi? It happens that the plan could be adopted without difficulty, for there, exactly at the spot indicated, is Darjeeling, and near Darjeeling is a lofty plateau which we have recently acquired from Bhootan. One-third of the distance, too, between Darjeeling and Calcutta is already traversed by a railway, and the entire communication could be completed, in these days of mountain lines, with perfect ease. Once finished, it would enable the Government of India to enjoy pure air and public opinion at the same time, and would put an end, as we are now told, to a question which nobody knew how to solve satisfactorily in any other way.

EXTRACT FROM PREFACE.

"I am not without a hope that these memoirs may be regarded, in some sort, as a Biographical History of India from the days of Cornwallis to the days of Canning. * * I have not attempted, indeed, to write History; the work has grown up spontaneously out of the Lives of the great men who make history * * and, unless the ability of the execution has fallen far short of the sincerity of the design, I have done something, in these pages, to do honour to a race of public servants unsurpassed in the history of the world. * * I have striven to show how youths, from the middle-class families of our British Islands, have gone forth into the great Eastern world, and by their own unaided exertions carved their way to fame and fortune.

"J. W. KAYE."

From the ATHENÆUM.

"We say at once that more admirably-written and interesting narratives are scarcely to be found in any literature. We do not envy the man who could read without deep emotion the lives here given of Conolly, Lawrence, and Nicholson; and we doubt whether the whole range of history can show more perfect characters. Nobler subjects of biography could not have been chosen, and higher praise it is impossible to bestow on a writer than to say, as we do of this author, that he is fully equal to such a theme. * * Mr. Kaye's 'Lives of Indian Officers' will take a high place among the standard books of England."

From the SPECTATOR.

"A cadet, an artillery officer, an editor, an employe of the first rank, a successful historian, Mr. Kaye unites in his own person all the qualifications requisite to the biographer of the great Indian soldiers."

From the EXAMINER.

"Two stout volumes of biography, which, arranged chronologically, have, in addition to their biographical interest, great historical value as illustrations of the progress of political government, warlike exercises, and philanthropic effort in India during the last three generations. It is a work of remarkable interest; the interest being due not only to the stirring subjects of which it treats, but also to the admirable way in which the subjects are treated."

IMPORTANT HISTORICAL WORKS.

Just published, in Two thick Volumes, demy 8vo., price £1. 12s.,

LIVES OF THE ENGLISH CARDINALS, from NICHOLAS BREAKSPEAR (Pope Adrian IV.) to THOMAS WOLSEY, Cardinal Legate. Including Historical Notices of the Papal Court. By FOLKESTONE WILLIAMS, Author of "Court and Times of James I.," "Court and Times of Charles I.," "Memoirs of Sophia Dorothea," &c.

Scarcely one adequate biography exists in print of "the Princes of the Church" of English birth; and when they are named collectively by their own countrymen, or foreign writers, they are briefly catalogued—frequently with doubtful incidents and questionable dates; nevertheless, the majority attained the highest honours, spiritual and temporal, and were engaged in some of the most important transactions in European history. It has, therefore, been considered that an acceptable service might be rendered to students by collecting the trustworthy details of Bale, Pitts, Leland, Godwin, Tanner, Dugdale, and similar explorers in the same field of inquiry, adding such notices as may be gathered from the annals of the popes and cardinals,—Baronius, Ciaconius, Aubrey, Spondanus, &c.; from the numerous monkish chroniclers, from Hemingford to Joscelyn de Brakelonde, as well as from contemporary correspondence; and combining with them new facts from the researches of modern historians, such as Paulli, Neander, Dollinger, Ranks, Cardella, Siamoudi, Guisot, Lingard, Milman, Brewer, Giles, &c., &c.

Whilst tracing the development of the papal system, care has been taken to exhibit its influence upon society, especially at Rome, Avignon, or wherever the Pontifical Court resided. As members of what may be called the Privy Council of the Pope, each of the English cardinals who chose to remain at the seat of government assisted in its administration. Many were employed as diplomats, or took a prominent part in the great councils, called from time to time to remedy evils then afflicting the Holy See; almost all were members of the hierarchy, in one or other of the principal branches of the Roman Apostolic Church, and not a few possessed almost unlimited authority at home in secular employments.

"Mr. Glyn's translation from Ozanam deserves high praise, and will, we hope, be cordially welcomed."—The Month.

"Every ray is collected, as it were, by a lens, and thrown upon the Sacred text. The work is so interesting, that it is no easy matter to lay it down. The translation is as easy to read as if it were an original book."—Weekly Register.

"This book constitutes a very valuable addition to English Catholic literature."—Dublin Review.
"This book abounds in wise and interesting teachings."—Examiner.

Third Edition. One Volume, 8vo., with Map, price 12s.,

HISTORY OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE IN INDIA. By EDWARD THORNTON, Esq. Containing a copious Glossary of Indian Terms, and a complete Chronological Index of Events, to aid the aspirant for Public Examinations.

"Mr. Thornton is master of a style of great perspicuity and vigour, always interesting, and frequently rising into eloquence. His power of painting character and of bringing before the eye of the reader the events which he relates, is remarkable; and if the knowledge of India can be made popular, we should say his is the pen to effect it."—Times.

"The writer evinces diligence and research into original authorities; his style is easy, and the intrinsic interest of the important events of Indian history is thus increased by a popular and amusing narrative."—Edinburgh Evening Courant.

In Two Vols., 8vo., price 18s. each,

THE HISTORY OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE IN INDIA from the Appointment of Lord Hardinge to the Death of Lord Canning. By LIONEL JAMES TROTTER, late 2nd Bengal Fusiliers.

The First Volume of this History embraces the period from Lord Hardinge's appointment, in 1844, to the retirement of the Marquis Dalhousie, in 1856.

The Second Volume commences with the arrival of Lord Canning in India, in 1856, and closes with his lordship's death, in 1862. This being the most eventful period in the annals of the East India Company, including the Mutiny, great pains have been taken in its narration.

In One Vol., 8vo., pp. 1015, with Map, price £1. 1s.,

A GAZETTEER OF INDIA, Compiled chiefly from the Records at the India Office. By EDWARD THORNTON, Esq.

The chief objects in view in compiling this Gazetteer are :—
1st. To fix the relative position of the various cities, towns, and villages, with as much precision as possible, and to exhibit with the greatest practicable brevity all that is known respecting them; and,
2nd. To note the various countries, provinces, or territorial divisions, and to describe the physical characteristics of each, together with their statistical, social, and political circumstances.

To these are added minute descriptions of the principal rivers and chains of mountains; thus presenting to the reader, within a brief compass, a mass of information which cannot otherwise be obtained, except from a multiplicity of volumes and manuscript records. The work, in short, may be regarded as an epitome of all that has been written and published respecting the territories under the government or political superintendence of the British power in India.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER.—This material being soft and elastic, no springs or fastenings are required; the acids of the stomach produce no effect on it; it fits to the mouth with an accuracy which renders detection impossible, and it is entirely free from taste or smell. Where the gums are in any way tender, and great absorption has taken place, this system will prove invaluable.

INSPECTION OF MODELS AND SPECIMENS.

Feeling that illustrative specimens of the above improvements would impart a more accurate appreciation of their object, effect, and value, than any written description, a number of models have been executed representing the adaptation of Teeth, and sets to several different shapes, sizes, and defects of the mouth and gums. These models furnish a clear, practical exposition of the principles adopted, and may be seen every day at Mr. WEBB'S residence, free of charge.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, September 1; Agra, August 29; Calcutta, August 27; Madras, August 26.

The sudden squall on the Hazara frontier seems to have blown itself out very soon. Just as our troops had gathered together for the fray, no enemy turns up to gratify their war-like yearnings. Since Colonel Rothney's brush with the insurgents, nothing seems to have happened worth the telling; unless the report of another slight encounter in which General Wilde himself was wounded and many of the 19th Foot slain or hurt should prove true. If some of the raiders had indeed been hemmed in between the swollen Indus and the Hills, it is not unlikely that they would do their best to get out of the scrape. But all latest accounts agree in representing the enemy as having fled the way they came, and it is generally asserted that so far as they are concerned the war is over. The whole affair, we are told, was one of those plundering forays, of which so many have been recorded from time to time since our conquest of the Punjab. It is positively denied that the attack on the police at Oghee had any other origin than the grudge owed by a certain Khan to those who had spoilt his trade in smuggled goods, or any other meaning than a wild desire for revenge. He persuaded a party of Hussunzais to join him in quest of plunder, and that was all. Of any widespread league among the hillmen of Swat, Bonair, and other places no token has yet been discovered. As for the Wahabees who were to follow the Akhoond of Swat's lead in a general crescentade against the English, it seems that all he cares for is to rid himself of their odious neighbourhood, and of the perilous co-operation of the pretender Feroze Shah.

STILL it is possible that the force so quickly brought upon the scene may have work cut out for it in the cold weather, either in the way of teaching the hill tribes a severer lesson than they have learnt for some years past, or in bringing another slice of border-land under our own rule. Large as it is already, the present force falls short by seven or eight thousand of the number demanded by the local authorities as a permanent frontier army. To that demand however, backed as it was by the pleadings of the Commander-in-Chief and Sir H. Durand, who was just on the point of leaving Simlah on his way home, the Viceroy has apparently turned a deaf ear.

UNTIL the other day these Hussunzais had ceased from troubling us ever since the year 1852, when a pretty strong force was sent after them into the Black Mountain, to take signal vengeance for the murder of two customs' officers the year before. On that occasion they suffered heavily in burnt villages and ruined stores. This time it seems that the old suspicions which led to the murder of Messrs. Tapp and Carne were again aroused by the movements of our survey parties along the border, which movements they regarded as the heralds of approaching interference with their freedom. Hence, no doubt, the readiness with which they listened to Atta Mohammad Khan's suggestions of a raid against our new police posts. A trustworthy correspondent of the Times of India avows his belief that as soon as all things are ready for the move General Wilde will receive orders to enter the Black Mountain and repeat the performances of 1852.

THE rains in Guzerat have caused immense damage to life and property in many of the larger towns as well as the country villages. In Ahmedabad alone ten thousand houses are reckoned to have been destroyed, involving a loss of nearly £200,000. In a small neighbouring village three hundred and fifty houses disappeared. Kaira and Baroda have also suffered badly. On the 11th August the whole country was under water, and scores of people lost their lives, while hundreds of houses were swept away. Many lives were saved by the elephants which the Gaikwar sent out to the sufferers' rescue. Of the number known to have perished no reckoning has yet been made, especially in the rural districts. As much as eighteen inches of rain fell at Ahmedabad in twenty-four hours. The railways of course have shared in the general disaster. Ahmedabad letters of the 12th August only reached Bombay on the 27th. Great damage has been done to the early crops, but the rice would be all the better for a soaking, and the health of men and cattle continued good. At Kaira Mr. Elliot, the magistrate, seems to have rendered conspicuous service to all who came within his reach. In the height of the storm he was out in a small boat saving lives, serving out food, and looking after endangered property. His bungalow and outhouses were placed at the disposal of as many as could find shelter therein.

GURHWAL in Kemaon has also been ravaged by a heavy flood, which washed away many houses, large flocks of sheep, and about seventy-five natives. In Burmah also there have been heavy floods. From Bengal, whose turn of suffering came first, the latest accounts seem tolerably cheering.

CAPTAIN SLADEN was on his way back to Rangoon from Momein; his projected journey to Talifoo having been given up. No further news has been heard of Mr. Cooper. A French expedition from Saigon to Hankow has reached the latter place after two years' wanderings. Four months of that time its members had to halt at Bassack, waiting for passports from Ava and Peking. After a year on the road they reached Stien-Kong, on the borders of Laos. A month was wasted at Muong-Yong in getting the needful signatures to their passports from the Burmese authorities. In October they crossed the Burmese frontier into Yunnan. Last March M. de Lagrée, leader of the expedition, died at Tung Chuen. By that time the rest of the party had crossed the Yangtze river and arrived at Tali, a large town on the borders of a lake 5,900 feet above the sea. On the 10th May Suchan was sighted, and Hankow itself was entered on the 9th June, after two years of perilous wandering and disheartening delays.

THE Bombay papers are deploring the return home of Dr. Birdwood, a gentleman long conspicuous in Bombay for his zealous services in the cause of medicine and many kindred sciences. As unpaid secretary to a number of learned or scientific bodies he seems to have fairly belied the common experience about unpaid work, and the thoroughly efficient way in which he discharged his regular duties of professor in the Grant Medical College during the last ten years have drawn forth a full tribute of praise from each succeeding Principal, from Dr. Morehead to Dr. Hunter. He entered the Bombay Medical Service in 1855, well found in all sorts of practical knowledge, and blessed with an unusual stock of mental energy. In two years he had got together a large collection of drugs and vegetable products of all kinds, which were made over to the Central Museum. As curator of that Museum Dr. Birdwood strove hard and long to get up a regular system of local museums throughout the Presidency; but so far his efforts and those of his great ally, Dr. Bhau Dai, have not been rewarded with much success. During the last ten years he has been Professor of various branches of science in the Grant College. In 1862 he became a Fellow of the re-organised Bombay University, and was twice appointed Registrar in the same. He seems to have been a sort of intellectual Briareus, good for any kind of public work; for we find him acting now as honorary secretary to famine committees, and for several years as a most active and able justice of the peace. Such a man of course was sure to wield his pen as vigorously as his scalpel, and to wage constant warfare with obstructives of every class. But his faults were only the excess of his better traits, while his services will long keep his memory green among the people of Bombay. He returns home, we regret to hear, in a very shattered state of health.

THE Bombay Bank Commission resumed its sittings on the last day of August. The interval has not been idly spent in comparing notes and preparing questions on fresh points of inquiry; among others, we are told, on the management of the Banks of Bengal and Madras. Premchund Roychund and Dossabhoj Dunjeebhoj were re-examined. They admitted that two accounts kept in the latter's name were really accounts in which Premchund himself and Messrs. Blair, Tracey, Morison, and Hannay, were directly concerned. Mr. Premchund was also pressed to say how many of the jewels bought by him were afterwards given away to serviceable friends. He owned that one diamond necklace, costing £3,000, had been given by him to Mrs. Scott, but that most of the other presents had been of small value. Mr. R. H. Baker, deputy manager of the Asiatic Bank, was also re-examined. The President, referring to a letter, in which Mr. Baker had denied through the Bombay Gazette that either Mr. Blair or Mr. Morison had opened accounts with the Asiatic Bank in Premchund's name, admitted its "verbal" accuracy, but appealed to Dossabhoj's evidence in proof of its essential falsehood. The accounts had not been opened in Premchund's name, simply because Dossabhoj had done convenient duty for Premchund.

THE Indian papers tell us, "on excellent authority," that it has been resolved "to resuscitate the old Indian navy." What this exactly means we must wait to learn. It may merely mean that certain departments of the local marine are to be brought more closely under the rules and discipline of a fighting service than they now are. If its real meaning should extend to the reconstruction of a navy for India separate from that of England, we may at least hope that it will be more under the control of Indian rulers than the present transport service has come to be. What with the demands of the English war departments, these splendid steamers might as well be paid out of the English exchequer for all the use they are to the Indian Government.

THE Government, we are told, have really ordered an inquiry, to be carried on by Major Elliot, into the connection of Dr. Campbell, Major Evans Bell, Major Gray, and Mr. W. B. Richardson, with the late Rajah of Mysore, in whose accounts their names figure as recipients of money paid to them for value received. At first blush the inquiry suggests conduct open to question on the part of those concerned; but we trust that nothing worse will come out of it than what we know already—namely, that certain gentlemen having done their best in the cause of a certain native prince, were entitled to fair payment for results achieved.

FROM Kabul we have further details concerning Shere Ali's success. He entered the city on the 14th August, and was everywhere received with apparent rejoicing. The Ghilzais had settled down. Yakob Khan held Ghuzni for his father. Azim Khan with three hundred troopers had fled towards Turkistan, to join Abdurrahman Khan at Balkh. Such is the story, which needs confirmation, at least with regard to the intentions of Abdurrahman Khan. It was the latter's own Lieutenant, Ismael Khan, who first occupied Kabul for Shere Ali.

WE are glad to see that Mr. Charles Mills is to receive a baronetcy for his long and useful services. In the event of Sir Proby Cautley's retirement we believe that Sir H. Rawlinson will be chosen in his stead.

WE stop the press to announce that Sir F. Halliday was yesterday (Tuesday) elected to a seat in the Council of India, in the place of Mr. Mills.

No one who has ever had to travel long distances by night in a railway carriage will find fault with the complaint of "Bengal Civil Service," as published in another column. Even for persons in good health a long night-journey in a carriage at once unclean and closely-packed is not a thing to desire, and the want of sleeping-room on our own railways is a standing disgrace to our civilisation. In India and on the Continent they manage things better; and we trust that the outcries of English travellers and the influence of the P. and O. Company will soon bring about a like reformation in Egypt, through which so many invalids are continually passing homewards. The carriages on the Cairo and Alexandria line were certainly clean and roomy enough for ordinary travelling by day some ten or twelve years ago; but age and use have evidently not improved them in respect of cleanliness and general comfort. Now that a new line runs right through to Suez without stopping midway, some better accommodation for invalids and weakly people of all ages becomes more needful than ever.

THE Indian Government has made a good move in the matter of telegrams. It has just announced the establishment of a uniform tariff of one rupee for ten words from any one station in India to any other. Reduce that rate some day to eight annas for twenty words, and India will have almost touched the limits of the attainable on that score.

WE observe that several officers of the non-purchase regiments have hastened to correct the impression of a contemporary as to the unwillingness of officers in those regiments to serve at home. Their assertions merely confirm our own belief on that point. It is certain that the officers originally appointed to these regiments looked forward with hope and pleasure to the chance of one day coming home with their corps; and it is obvious that those among them who are still of that mind would deem it a cruel breach of faith if the promised tour of home service were not carried out. Numbers of the men, too, would have equal cause for complaint. But there cannot be any serious intention of breaking the pledge already given.

INDIA'S FRONTIER POLICY.

SOME of the English journals are in great alarm lest the recent massing of troops on the Punjab frontier should mean more than meets the eye of a distant observer. An army of ten or twelve thousand men would never surely be needed to punish a few turbulent mountaineers. Have they not therefore been brought together for some ulterior purpose of aggressive self-defence against the white invaders of Turkistan? Put this and that together, look at the Russian eagles swooping nearer and nearer the Hindu Khoosh, consider the warlike yearnings of the Anglo-Indian public, remember that men and officers fresh from Abyssinia have been hurrying up into the Punjab, and mark how many centres of disaffection keep smoking and crackling along the North-Western frontier. If in view of all these omens the troops so promptly mustered under General Wilde mean nothing more than a timely precaution against the spreading of a local outbreak, why, all we can say is, that appearances are misleading, and our fears will be most agreeably belied.

If appearances are not misleading, what sort of comfort is to be drawn from the change which Indian journals announced some weeks back in the Viceroy's foreign policy, a change concurrent with the progress of Russian arms in Bokhara, and of Shere Ali, the Russian favourite, in Afghanistan? And if Sir John Lawrence is at last yielding to popular pressure, is it likely that his successor will keep a tighter hand on a public always impatient of quiet riders? The Hazara insurgents may have had enough of fighting for the present; but is not the whole frontier ripe for an explosion, and may we not any day find ourselves embroiled in a war of conquest with the Afghans themselves?

So reason the alarmists, not altogether without cause. But we trust that events will once more prove their fears extravagant, if not quite groundless. Our countrymen in India may thirst, as they are naturally prone to do, for any new excitement that will ruffle up the smooth monotony of daily existence in an ungenial climate. We who live in a whirl of cares and novelties that often makes us yearn for the less fatiguing sameness of a quiet life can hardly blame those others for indulging a like desire for change in the opposite direction. It is also natural that a small garrison of Englishmen in a conquered country should be quick to seize any occasion for enforcing the supremacy of the British name. But the statesmen to whose keeping we entrust the destinies of British India have to keep their ears open to other voices than those of Anglo-Indian society. They are bound, among other things, to reckon with the State politics and the public opinion of this country. Both these influences are dead against any attempt at resuscitating the aggressive policy of 1839. Englishmen at home still have a deep-rooted objection to burning their fingers in that fire. Nor is the new-born horror of annexation likely to be lulled just yet by any evidences of the danger that may some day threaten us from the side of Turkistan. Let the fire-eaters and alarmists harrow us never so persistently with fearful warnings of what will happen if we keep our eyes shut to all tokens of Muscovite progress, we only murmur a qualified assent to their reasonings, and refer them for readier listeners to our descendants in the third or fourth generation. To our charmed ears all that outcry sounds like "a tale of little meaning, though the words are strong." General Kaufmann may push his outposts as near the Afghan or the Cashmere frontier as he will; Shere Ali may make and break as many promises as he dares of serving Russia in return for Russian gold; but the British lion will neither wag his tail nor even lift his sleepy head up for a moment from between his unguarded paws.

Even if John Bull were less strongly wedded to his peaceful theories, yet another consideration would deter the rulers of British India from any rash attempt to remove their neighbour's land marks. The Indian tax-payer cannot bear many turns of the fiscal screw. His masters know well enough the danger of squeezing too much money from the pockets of an alien people, whose loyalty resolves itself into a sort of general acquiescence in the benefits of a strong but just and thrifty rule. They cannot afford to raise their military expenditure beyond its present high pitch, or to invent new taxes in order to take all possible precautions against a likelihood which is certainly distant, and seemingly far from tangible. Nothing yet visible in the movements of the Muscovite Philip seems to warrant any forward movement on the part of his English rivals. The waiting policy is still the wisest, and we have no fear that Lord Mayo, whose own good sense will be backed by the counsels of experienced Statesmen in both countries, will set aside the traditions of former governments and embark on a course of expensive meddling, which can only lead to fresh entanglements involving heavier expense.

There may however be good reasons for the present mustering of troops on the North-West frontier, whether as a warning to our ill-wishers there and elsewhere, or as a first step towards a hostile movement, against certain of the hill-tribes, whose conduct may have justified some sterner measure than a peaceful blockade or the stoppage of a small subsidy. If "a free open passage" be needed between Hazara and Kohat, it may be worth our while to annex by force of arms the intervening ground; or if some spot of vantage for overawing the restless borderers in that direction be worth the gaining, there might be no harm in bringing a few thousand more Hussanzais and Chiggunzais under the British yoke. Nobody will blame us for dealing with these tiresome rascals in a stronghanded way, after milder measures have been tried to no purpose. Nor can any one doubt that the speed with which so large a force has been got together on the Punjab frontier will improve the lesson which Lord Napier's march to Magdala has already taught those gentry in both continents, who were rather too ready to believe in the decline of England's military power. Alike in the bazaars of Asia and the drawing-rooms of Europe will people have been once more reminded of our strength to punish all rash misreckoners on British forbearance.

CALCUTTA AND THE CENTRAL GOVERNMENT.

CALCUTTA may be a very pleasant place to live in during the cold weather, and not absolutely fatal to men of iron constitutions at other times of the year. But with all deference to the Pall Mall's correspondent, "R. D. M.," we fear that his "facts" are less able to bear strict analysis than those brought forward by the journal he addressed. The fact, for instance, that "no Governor-general, from Warren Hastings to Lord Canning (except the aged and worn-out Lord Cornwallis), had died in India, although they had worked in Calcutta, and worked hard, during almost the whole terms of their respective incumbencies," would count for little, were it never so true, in the general question of Calcutta's healthiness. It may be perfectly true again that no Advocate-general except Mr. Ritchie died in Calcutta, or was driven homewards with health "utterly broken down." Grant that Lord Canning left India in good health, strange as that piece of news must have sounded in many ears, and that other supposed victims of a tropical climate died of old age or want of excitement or excess of tobacco, what does it all prove? Merely that some men may live for a few years on hard work and handsome allowances in a climate where adult Englishmen of the second generation are never to be seen, and in a city whence crowds of white sufferers yearly hasten to the hills or on board homeward-bound vessels to recruit their shattered health. By the same tokens it might be easy to prove that Europeans have no right to fall ill and die in the West Indies or on the African coasts.

But what if some of these very facts turn out to be more or less founded on fancy? Last week we hinted no small surprise at learning that so many viceroys had worked hard and thriven year after year in the British-Indian capital. Had we been always dreaming then of the frequent journeys made by one viceroy after another to places far away from the banks of the Hooghly? Was it, after all, true that Lords Auckland, Hardinge, Ellenborough, Dalhousie, spent all, or nearly all, their time within the wholesome and delightful circuit of the Mahratta Ditch? If it were so, "R. D. M." was surely in the right on that point, and Calcutta could not be so very unhealthy a place for hardworking officials on fat salaries.

Another writer in the Pall Mall however has since come forward to strengthen us in our former scepticism. Major Chesney quietly appeals from "R. D. M.'s" facts to those of history. "That the Governors-General survived their terms of office is wholly inconclusive"—he remarks, "one way or the other, for the excellent reason that, since the time of Lord William Bentinck, the greater part of their service in India was spent away from Calcutta." Lord William Bentinck "made two long tours in Upper India," and after his return to Bengal was driven away by sickness to the Nilgherries, whence he descended in the cold weather merely to prepare for his voyage home. Lord Auckland's wanderings in Upper India must still be fresh to the readers of "Miss Eden's lively work." Neither Lord Ellenborough nor Lord Hardinge saw much of their capital. As for Lord Dalhousie, we are reminded that he left Calcutta in 1848 and never returned till 1851, after which came "a long sea-tour" in Eastern waters, and a hot season passed in the Nilgherries. No wonder, we may add, that Lord Dalhousie was able to hold the reins of Government three years beyond the appointed term; and yet it is notorious that he came back to England a death-stricken man.

Of Viceroys "whose reigns have left a mark on Indian history, Lord Wellesley was most constant to his capital, but his correspondence shows clearly with what difficulty even his energy struggled against the lassitude induced by the enervating climate of Lower Bengal." In facts like these we find sufficient answer to any argument based on their non-existence. As for the healthiness of Calcutta judges, barristers, and so forth, "R. D. M." is welcome to make the most of it. Are not lawyers everywhere among the toughest of men? And yet we have a notion that even Sir Charles Jackson owes something of his rosy countenance and unweakened energy to well-timed draughts of sea and mountain air. Do not Calcutta barristers also take their holiday? Are there no trips to the Sandheads, Singapore, Maulmain, or China for toil-weary merchants or ailing members of the Revenue Board? No one doubts that a certain percentage of Englishmen, including many who might have died young in their own country, do manage to live on for years amid the vapours and the poisonous gases of Lower Bengal. But is it not equally certain that disease and death between them make endless havoc among our countrymen in those parts, and that very many lives have only been saved by a timely retreat from Calcutta to some more genial clime? How too, on "R. M. D.'s" theory, can we account for the "very painful statistics of death and disease in the High Court during the last five years," which Mr. Maine lately found in a minute by Mr. Seton-Karr?

All this however is beside the true mark. The question of the hour is not whether Calcutta is really unhealthy, but whether it shall continue to be the seat of the Indian Government. "On grounds of salubrity alone it would hardly"—in Mr. Maine's opinion—"be worth while changing the seat of government to any other place in the plains of India." If Calcutta were otherwise the fittest place for the capital of India, its seeming unhealthiness would hardly affect the issue by a hair's breadth. Mr. Maine admits that "men bred in India may work well in extraordinary bad climates," and Major Chesney in his book declares that "there are few places where all classes, official and non-official, work harder" than in Calcutta. Even the concomitant evils pointed out by the latter, in the constant changes and the larger staff of officials needed "to supply the places of inevitable absentees during the annually recurring sickly season," might well be borne in consideration of any preponderant benefits. But where are we to look for those benefits? Calcutta, the natural capital of Bengal proper and the true commercial capital of more than half British India, can show no better claim than its military position and its European surroundings to become the permanent head-quarters of the Central Government. In the one respect it stands perhaps unrivalled; in the other it is only matched by Bombay. But a good military position is of little use without an army to hold it; and, as Major Chesney truly observes, "a Government stationed at Calcutta sees nothing of the army," with which the rulers of an empire above all things military ought to "come into frequent contact."

As for the benefit derived from the presence of a large European community, we think that more than enough has been made of an argument which implies that the rulers of two hundred million Asiatics ought to be guided by the public opinion of a few hundred English traders. As a centre of native opinion, Calcutta cannot compete with Bombay, Benares, Delhi, or Lahore. It represents the opinions only of a single province, and that by no means a typical one. Almost any other great city would form a safer guide to the feelings and requirements of the people at large. No native indeed from any part of India outside Bengal cares to enter so ill-renowned a city even under the most tempting inducements, such as the desire to redress a personal grievance, or the offer of a seat in the Legislative Council.

A Government always fixed in Calcutta must not only tend to overshadow and cramp the local Government of Bengal; it also tends to localise the working of its own machinery, and to stunt the political growth of those who administer it. It was not till Lord Canning got away from the Presidency that he found, as so many Viceroys had found before him, how much he had to learn and to unlearn about Indian affairs. Calcutta moreover is too far from the Punjab frontier on the one hand and from Central and Southern India on the other. If you must have an abiding seat of Government let it be at Poonah or Allahabad, of which places the latter has much to say for itself even from the military point of view.

But there is no sufficient reason for tying the Supreme Government down to any one spot. It is universally allowed that the Viceroy ought to travel, and experience shows that he cannot travel and keep up to his work without the constant presence of his council, which serves indeed as his cabinet. Under Sir John Lawrence this plan of taking the whole Government on circuit has been carried out with marked success. The feasibility of it has proved itself—solvitur ambulando. Thus far, indeed, the Government has oscillated between Simlah and Calcutta only; but the experiment could easily be extended to other cities. Lord Elgin, had he lived, would have carried the departments and the High Court with him, at the beginning of each cold season, into camp near each of the great native cities in turn, such as Agra, Delhi, Lahore, Lucknow, or Benares. Some scheme of this sort is surely worth the trying, and Simlah might still remain the hot-weather retreat of the Government, unless room could be found for all at Poonah or on some other range of hills. One thing at any rate seems inevitable, that the Supreme Government must drop all its old connections with that of Bengal, must cease to be in any way concerned in local politics, and must play towards the several provinces of India some such part as the American President and Congress play towards the several States of the Union. That is the great want at this moment for British India, a strong central government busying itself with all matters of imperial urgency, wielding a direct control over all native States and outlying territories, and leaving the provincial governments a wide discretion in the management of their own affairs. The present system of governing India from Bengal is a sheer anachronism, the excuses for which grow yearly less tenable.

Correspondence.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—I forward the annexed correspondence for publication, because it is, I think, due to the P. and O. S. N. Company that the public should know they do their best to have the defects of the Egyptian Transit Administration remedied, and also because in my opinion passengers should continue to complain till such time as better and cleaner carriages are provided on the Egyptian Railway.—Yours obediently, Sept. 21, 1868.

BENGAL CIVIL SERVICE.

COPIES.

To the Secretary to the Directors of the P. and O. S. N. Company, 122, Leadenhall-street.

Sir,—Having with my wife recently travelled through Egypt with railway tickets issued by your office in Calcutta on behalf of the Egyptian Transit Administration, I think it advisable to call your attention to some points in which there is room for improvement. I am aware that the conduct of the Transit Administration is entirely in the hands of the Egyptian Government, but it seems to me that it is better on every account that your office should be the channel for communicating to that Government any complaints that may be made on matters connected with the Transit.

My first and principal cause of complaint is as to the character of the accommodation provided for the railway journey. For £4. 10s., for a railway journey of 250 miles, one may reasonably expect to be conveyed in a clean and comfortable carriage, in addition to being landed and embarked, and to the free transport from steamer to steamer of three cwt. of personal baggage. My experience is that the carriages are not clean, and for a night journey with eight occupants in each compartment they certainly cannot be considered comfortable. The passengers of the steamer by which I arrived at Suez were forwarded from that place to Alexandria during the night, and I am informed that it is now the usual practice to send homeward-bound passengers right through Egypt, the train leaving Suez in the evening. I do not think therefore that it is too much to expect of the Egyptian Transit Administration that they should provide carriages with sleeping berths; and, in any case, the number of occupants of each compartment should, when the journey is performed at night, be limited to four.

My second complaint is that there is no printed tariff of prices at the refreshment stations on the railway line. A shilling—the price now asked—for a cup of tea or coffee, or a bottle of soda-water, appears excessive. These charges may be requisite to induce people to keep refreshment-rooms in the desert, but I cannot think they are necessary at Cairo. I would advocate a printed tariff (not necessarily uniform for all the refreshment-rooms), approved by some official of the P. and O. Company, acting on behalf of the passengers.

Lastly, the ladies' waiting-room at Cairo is not strictly kept for the use of ladies only. It may be said that the fault lies with the passengers, as the object for which the room is intended is written up over the door. This defence is however an imperfect one; as at night with but a dim light the superscription is not easily seen. The remedy is a coloured lamp hung over the doorway, with inscriptions indicating the object of the room.—I am, Sir, yours obediently,
August 28, 1868.

P. and O. S. N. Company's Offices, 122, Leadenhall-street, 19th Sept., 1868.

Dear Sir,—We beg to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 17th inst., and in reply regret to inform you that our formal communication must have been wrongly addressed, as it has apparently miscarried. We beg to thank you for the suggestions you make regarding the transit of passengers through Egypt. A representation shall, in accordance with your request, be forwarded to the Egyptian authorities, to whom the company are constantly addressing suggestions for the greater convenience of passengers.—We are, dear Sir, your obedient servants,

THE RUMOURED OCCUPATION OF HERAT BY PERSIA.

The Bombay Gazette deems it quite natural that the present commotion on the North-West Frontier should give rise to rumours, which, if not well founded, are at least suggestive. Within this category may be included the report that the Persians are once more bent upon the acquisition of Herat, and that Shere Ali Khan, at present on the floodtide of fortune, far from throwing any obstacles in the path of the Shah's ambition, is ready to bargain for its cession. Even if we credit the first part of the story, which is not intrinsically improbable, we cannot believe that there is much truth in the second, unless the supposed bargain be an item in some double-dealing policy; for it is most unlikely that the master of Afghanistan would willingly give up a city of so much importance. It is more probable that negotiations on the subject should have been begun merely to gain time, and that once firmly seated at Cabul Shere Ali Khan will hold fast by the western gate of his dominions. Nevertheless, in the present wide-spread commotion on our mountain frontier, the advance of the Russians to Bokhara, and the encroachments of the Persians in Seistan, it would not be prudent to overlook any tendency of Persia to profit by Afghan anarchy, Russian proximity, and possible British indifference. The assumed movement on Herat may be a branch of the difficulty which besets the north-west frontier. It may, on the other hand, be wholly distinct from our imbroglio with the mountain tribes. It may be merely an inferential rumour having no solid basis in fact. A reasonable view of the case suggests at once the obvious interest of Russia in pushing a policy of disintegration, as a preliminary to any advance on the Indus. There is no ground for supposing that Russia will act in Asia on principles widely different from those which govern her European policy. It would be absurd to credit her with a disinterestedness in the East which she has never shown in the West, and it is fair to believe that she would stimulate the Persians to encroach on Afghanistan, as she urges the Greeks and Servians to dismember Turkey. We must never forget that Russia seeks power, dominion, renown, and if in accomplishing her aims she substitutes order for anarchy, an approach to civilisation for barbarism, yet that her primary motive is aggrandisement and its prestige. It would suit Russia that Persia should hold Herat just as it forwarded her views to suggest the advance into Seistan.

Admitting the possibility of a Persian occupation of Herat we may fairly consider what is the value of the "key to India," and whether, under the altered state of affairs on the Jaxartes and Oxus, Herat is still what it certainly was in 1856-7. In former years, when the Russians barely held their own on the Lower Jaxartes, it was always assumed that, if India were invaded the line of operations would run from Mazanderan through Meshed and Herat, and never that the track of Russian conquest would lie along the Jaxartes and finally stretch towards the right bank of the Oxus. The assumption was perfectly reasonable, for the line adopted seemed very hazardous, while the establishment of a fleet on the Caspian, and a base on the southern shore in direct communication with Moscow by the Volga, appeared inviting and feasible. Hence we were justified in regarding the fate of Herat with great jealousy; because, should an invader move from the Caspian by Meshed, Herat would be the key-place on the road to the Indus. Now, however, the whole conditions of the problem are changed. The Russians, firmly established on the Jaxartes, and controlling its entire navigation, in possession of Samarcand, that cradle of Eastern Empires, and for a time, at least, masters of Bokhara, have secured a line of approach by which Cabul might be entered without passing through Herat. The acquisition of Samarcand gives them mastery over Bokhara, and when that city is absorbed, as it will be as soon as the scanty forces of Russia in Turkistan are augmented, the invader will command the roads through Balkh and Kunduz to Cabul. In short, the question is whether Herat has not been turned, and its relative importance partially diminished; whether, as a fact, Herat has now only a qualified strategical value in reference to an invasion of India by the only European Power within striking distance. No doubt it is possible to conceive that after securing Turkistan, and, by mere external pressure, reducing Persia to a state of complete vassalage, Russia might select the easier line from Mazanderan to Herat; but it is still true that potentially Russia in Bokhara, or even in Samarcand, has at her disposal a line of operations which is in no way affected by Herat.

THE ABYSSINIAN HONOURS.

The Englishman demurs to seeing those whose sole duty it was to fight, who were anxious to fight, but to whom the opportunity was denied, rewarded as if they had led their regiments into action against a respectable enemy. If this is to be the new system of distributing rewards, we have, if it be consistently followed, nothing to say with regard to future possible recipients, but we must protest in respect of those who have seen more arduous service, who are still in the army, who have been unnoticed, and who are now superseded. Compare the rewards for this bloodless campaign, admirable as it was, with those distributed for others in which there was real fighting with steady opponents. Take those who were in the Peninsular war, who received no immediate reward, and who, though some of them at length were awarded eight clasps for distinct actions, received these and the medal in 1848, thirty-five years after the event, when many who had served with distinction were dead. But not to go so far back to a time when a general medal was unknown, take the Punjab campaigns, the Mutiny, China, the frequent small wars on the Punjab frontier, and the affairs of Bhootan and Umbeyla, where the enemy were at least equal to the Abyssinians, and the chances of sickness greater, and who will not say on reflection that the present gazette is a grievous slur on many meritorious officers? The mistake is usually in the other direction. It is common to see men on the staff over-rewarded, and the fighting men overlooked. And, it may be argued, that the present is a satisfactory instance in which this is not the case. We should be only too ready to admit the plea if we thought that there was a real balance in favour of justice. But it is not so. We do not see this good fortune extended to those who on former occasions have been neglected. On the contrary, it has overtaken many who, far from having before any grounds of complaint, had deep reason for satisfaction at their good luck. The feelings of others, who have not been so favoured, but who have undergone hardship, exposure, and danger with which Abyssinian experiences cannot be compared, may be imagined. Many have received nothing because their services failed to attract notice, others, though attracting attention, were passed over because they were subalterns only. It mattered little that they might have performed the duties usually performed by captains, or duties even more important. They could not be rewarded at the time, and subsequently, though it is true that their names were submitted after attaining their captaincies, a few only were promoted. Many of those who were unfortunate are still in the army, and have now the pain of seeing others step over their heads. Is it to be supposed that these men have no heart-burnings? Can it be believed that there is no feeling of discontent? The discipline of the British army may be too good, the traditions of un-murmuring compliance too strong, for it to be shown; but it must exist. It will be urged that there will always, in these cases, be instances of hardship, of useful service overlooked, of merit unrecognised. We unfortunately cannot deny it. But this is no more on the part of our opponents than saying that human nature is imperfect, and that no attempt to improve it should be made; and no reasonable man would believe that in trusting to such an argument he could hope to convince men of less faith in the propriety of existing facts. We do not advocate a recurrence to the practice of former times, when general medals were not given, and when rewards were the right only of the commanding officers of regiments, and others in high position. But we do strenuously insist upon the necessity of very great care being exercised in the distribution of rewards other than medals. Sanguine or enthusiastic men may steadfastly perform their duties, in the belief that their time will come. To many it never comes, or it comes too late, when they are old and indifferent, when the time for valuing honours has passed away, when the opportunities conferred by promotion no longer present themselves. Such men have nothing to look forward to but their pension, or to look back upon but a grievance, super-session, and years of spiritless routine. And these men might have been cheerful, energetic soldiers! With little of life left, it may, on a retrospect, seem extraordinary to them that they should at one time have so eagerly desired what now seems of so little account. But this state, fortunately for the nation, is slowly reached, and it is of vast importance to retard its approach, a thing which is only to be done by showing men and officers that no one is lost sight of, that honours are not distributed upon the treacherous feelings of the moment, but only after careful deliberation. It is this which gives to rewards their value, and preserves the spirit of an army. A discontented soldier is not an efficient soldier, and if there is real ground for the feeling, it is all the more injurious to the tone of the force. We would ask whether this is not a case in point, whether there are not some grounds for discontent, and whether it would not be graceful at this time to extend to those who have already been recommended for other services, and to others who have failed from one cause or another to receive the reward to which they may be entitled, the army rank which has so long been withheld or denied.

BERAR MONEY ORDER OFFICE.—The Governor-General in Council has extended to the Berar agencies the orders of April 23 last, which authorise any Money Order Office in British India to draw upon any other Money Order Office in British India.

THE HAZARA DISTURBANCES.

According to the Pioneer of August 26, the news from the North-West Frontier is absolutely nil. We may mention, however, that Indian Public Opinion gives currency to a rumour—only a rumour—that another encounter has taken place with the tribes in Hazara; that General Wilde has been wounded, and that H.M.'s 19th Regiment has suffered considerably. Should this rumour prove well-founded, the intended military promenade will doubtless assume a more serious character, and a cold weather campaign may be confidently expected. The Pioneer, however, doubts the truth of the rumour, because it has received letters from the frontier of later date than that on which the encounter is said to have taken place, and no mention is made of it. Its correspondents refer merely to the arrival of troops, but they mention that General Wilde would assume the offensive without delay.

The Daily News is in a position to assure its readers that "the little war" in Hazara has been already completely crushed out. Not only is all resistance to our troops at an end, but according to the latest telegraphic accounts—those which up to the 20th inst. had reached the Government of India—there remained no enemy in the field, and the offending tribes, Hussunzyes, and mayhap some Cis-Indus Swatees, were in that state of trepidation which the apprehension of severe and well merited retribution, generally speaking, generates.

The Pioneer of August 28 informs us that, with the approval of the Commander-in-Chief, General Wilde has detached two regiments, under Brigadier-General Vaughan, C.B., to Derband, for the protection of the Khan of Umb. It also regrets to learn that the mortality among the men of the 6th Royals, from heat apoplexy, on their march to Hazara from Rawul Pindee, has been very great. This is the more to be regretted because, owing to the want of kuhars, the men had not that attendance which they should have had. The pay which Government allows dooley bearers (Rs. 5 per mensem) is said to be insufficient, and the demand at present on the frontier is certainly much greater than the supply. The result has been the loss of several valuable lives among the men of the gallant Royals. All the troops now in Hazara are said to be in capital health, as well as those at Manserah and Abbotabad.

Indian Public Opinion understands that a difference of opinion has arisen between Sir William Mansfield and the Governor-General on the subject of a frontier campaign. Sir John thinks that a small force is all that will be required, whilst the Commander-in-Chief is of opinion that the present is the best time for giving a severe and permanent lesson to all our troublesome neighbours. He therefore proposes that a large army be sent to the frontier in order to stamp out once and for ever the seeds of disturbance, and to overawe the hill people by an exhibition of our strength, determination, and numbers. The Hussunzyes have fled across the Black Mountain, but there is some reason to hope that they will not be able to cross the Indus, which is unusually full, before General Wilde's army overtakes them. The Agror chiefs in our own territory have made their humble submission. The Khan of Agror is on his way down country as a political prisoner. He is, however, a British subject, and if convicted of treason will doubtless meet the fate he deserves.

The Delhi Gazette of August 22 makes mention of a recent skirmish, the attack being made by our own troops, which, consisting of only two regiments and six guns, had been rather hard pressed, but upon a reinforcement of another regiment joining them they rallied from their camp and drove back the enemy with but slight loss to our own side. Several other tribes were reported to be joining the Chuzzulzaie chief and Hussunzyes. A later issue of the same journal declares that the report that General Wilde had been wounded has not been in any way confirmed, and trusts that it was unfounded. What made it appear not improbable, was a statement by one of its own correspondents that the General was going out on a reconnoitring expedition, and such expeditions are attended with unusual risk in mountain warfare of this kind.

The Lahore Chronicle hears that the 5th Royal Regiment have suffered considerably from the heat, as many as thirty-one cases having occurred in one day, of which six proved fatal. This is very serious in a corps so lately arrived from England. Rumour says they will not go to the front, but will be relieved by the 38th from Sealkote. The heat in the Agror Valley was very considerable, but there was little or no sickness.

According to the Pioneer's letters from Hazara up to the 20th August, it would seem that matters are settling down quietly, and that the Hussunzyes, having smelt powder in the distance, are now more inclined for peace than war. Not a soul is to be seen on any of the hills around. The Hussunzyes and others are now only too anxious to tender their submission. Major Pollock, the Commissioner, is with the force, and is said to be in constant communication with the chiefs of the several tribes, many of whom are endeavouring to shift the blame of the outrage at Oghee to other shoulders. Our politicals are busy, therefore, carefully discriminating between those who are innocent and those who are guilty, but not to such an extent as to prevent our dealing kindly towards them. At present these are the problems which require solution. Not a man from the Hindustanee colony at Sittana had crossed the Indus to join our opponents up to the date mentioned. Moreover, the unsettled state of Swat and Boneyr, and their internal dissensions, will continue to act as a strong preventive to their coming. Still stronger is the feeling among the Hindustanees themselves, that if they were to leave their present quarters to attack us the Akhoond would not permit their return. No one can tell, however, what a week or ten days may bring forth. But the probabilities seem ten to one at present in favour of the opinion that neither Swat nor Boneyr will give us any trouble, and that the Hindustanees will remain quietly where they are on the other side of the Indus.

STATION TALK.

SIMLA, Aug. 21.—Your correspondent greets you with news of interest—the Indian navy is to be revived, and there is no longer an enemy in the field of Hazara! The Government of India has at present several sea-going steamers of its own, all or nearly all of which were employed as transports during the war in Abyssinia. This duty, it is to be presumed, they performed at least as well as ordinary mercantile steamers; but in some instances the conduct of the crews is said to have been highly reprehensible. Disorder and indiscipline were not infrequent at Zoulla and Annesley Bay, both on shore and on board, and authority did not find it an easy matter to repress those evils. The men are not amenable to martial law, and under circumstances of temptation are just as liable to become unmanageable grumblers, or riotous revellers, as the crews of ordinary merchant vessels. It has been out of the consideration of the question whether an Act should not be passed placing these Government seamen under Articles of War, or a naval code of some kind, that there has arisen the further question whether the circumstances of the present time do not indicate a necessity for this country having again a regular naval force of her own, which would be adequate to all Government war transport and Indian-seas police requirements. The “finding” has been in the affirmative, and it is highly probable that in a little time there will be issued a “fiat” directing the organisation of a fleet of gunboats and sea transports, in addition to the marine batteries for coast and harbour defence, understood to have already obtained prospective sanction as far as Bombay is concerned. The Imperial navy has quite enough duty of its own to attend to, and the Indian Government cannot rely on it for maritime and in every case of war need. And yet it must be patent to all that at any moment circumstances may render it of the highest importance that Government should be in a position to immediately despatch a fleet of gunboats to the Persian Gulf, or to the Red Sea, or Zanzibar, or Mergui, or to various other places for the vindication of political interests, the protection of our commerce, the suppression of the slave trade, or the extirpation of nests of pirates. Hence Government has affirmed the necessity, or at least the desirability, of India having once again a naval force of her own for maritime police and war transport purposes, and hence your correspondent’s announcement that the Indian Navy is to be revived. The journals have correctly detailed the strength of the force now under Major-General Wilde in Hazara. It consists of two Mountain Train and one nine-pounder batteries; two corps of native cavalry, one battalion H.M.’s 6th Foot, one ditto H.M.’s 19th Foot, a detachment 77th Foot, and four Goorkas, three Punjab, and one Sikh Corps of infantry, with a company of Sappers and Miners. But there is to be a reserve force at Rawul Pindee, of one battery Royal Artillery, H.M.’s 38th Foot, and the 19th, 23rd, 30th, and 31st Punjab Regiments. Not a single soldier has been removed from the Peshawar Valley, where, however, the border remains quiet as possible. It is further beyond doubt that none of the other tribes are in league with the Hussunzyes; that no signs of concerted action or understanding exist between them; and that the Sittana fanatics have had nothing whatever to do with the recent raid, which appears to have been the impromptu work of the Hussunzyes alone. It is necessary to mention that no troops have been ordered up from the North-West Provinces. All that has been done has been to expedite the march of such corps as the Relief had already directed to move into the Punjab. This will cause some marching in hot weather, which is to be regretted, for on the move up from Rawul Pindee, the 1st battalion 6th Foot lost six men by heat apoplexy before they had made Abbottabad. The corps is now in the cooler highlands of Hazara. These six Europeans lives have been the only mortal casualties on our side. Up to yesterday, the butcher’s bill did not exceed four Goorkhas wounded and Colonel Rothney bruised! This, however, only refers to troops in British pay. The Huzara Jaghirdars were out fighting the enemy before the regulars got up, and they had some very smart affairs; they have done well, and proved their loyalty. Sir Henry Durand left this yesterday on six months’ leave to England. Lady and the Misses Durand remain in India. Colonel Norman will officiate as member of Council during Sir Henry’s absence, and Colonel Arthur Broome will officiate as Military Secretary, vice Colonel Norman. The Hon. Mr. Taylor takes six months’ leave next spring, when Mr. Lushington, Financial Secretary, also leaves for Europe. There need be no question as to who will act for Mr. Taylor; at least I fancy not—for the only Secretary then available will be Mr. Seton Karr; for I regret to have to state that ill-health, coupled with the effects of an accident, will compel Mr. E. C. Bailey, the Home Secretary, to take privilege leave. In Mr. Bailey’s place Mr. A. Howell will probably officiate, and rumour has it that the Hon. Ashley Eden, at present in England, will succeed Mr. Lushington as Financial Secretary. It appears to have been decided that the Duke of Edinburgh will shortly visit India; but neither the time nor the particulars of his visit have yet been communicated to the Government of India. It is, however, thought that His Royal Highness will not reach India before November at the earliest. But nothing is known beyond the fact that he is coming—not even the port of arrival.

Aug. 24.—All continues quiet in Hazarah, as far as your correspondent can gather. There is now a splendid British force, strong in European Artillery and Infantry, held in leash there ready to be let slip up the Black Mountain as soon as Major-General Wilde’s plans have been matured and won for themselves the sanction of the Government of India. Heaven help the Hussunzyes when the word forward is given; but the question is, are not the measures for punishing them being undertaken on too large a scale? They attacked us, it is true, but unpremeditatedly as it were, and probably at the instigation of the chief of Agror, Atta Mahommed Khan, to whom our police post at Ooghee—a place within his jaghir—may have become an intolerable eyesore, as it assuredly was a cause of loss to him, inasmuch as it had been established last year for the purpose of preventing salt being smuggled through his territory—a species of contraband traffic which is now known to have been carried on via Agror for a considerable time back with the connivance of Atta Mahommed Khan, and to his great pecuniary advantage. There is, therefore, little room to doubt that the main, if not the only, objects with which the Hussunzyes burst through our frontier were storming the thannah and routing the several survey parties of ours who had worked up to near their frontier; and that they were either subsidised or cajoled into undertaking those enterprises by Atta Mahommed, who mayhap excited apprehension and suspicion of the British in their minds, by representing that the thannah and the survey operations were but the first part of a scheme we had formed to annex Hussunzye. The storm of the thannah and rout of the surveyors once accomplished, the tribesmen would probably have retired of their own accord; for to hold the territory they had violated the Hazara people themselves would not permit them. Indeed, the tribesmen received several defeats in fair fight with the levies of our tributary Jaghirdars, and at least one very noteworthy drubbing from the force of the Nawab of Umb, before a single British soldier, European or Native, had appeared on the scene; so that, after the arrival of Colonel Rothney’s brigade of Goorkas, one brush, in which the latter had four men wounded and the Hussunzyes suffered severely, sufficed to send them back across the frontier. The calling out of the large mixed force at present in the field seems therefore to have been somewhat overdoing the thing, though few will feel inclined to blame Major-General Wilde and the Punjab Government for resolving to be on what doubtless seemed to them the only safe side, and acting much as if the whole northern frontier of the Punjab were in a flame, or likely to soon be; for in the first blush of the affair the local Government may have been led to believe that the tribes of all Ensufzy were up, or on the point of rising, though it is now well known the Hussunzyes had no allies, and possibly had not sought in any quarter for such. They are now quiet, but the danger is that the marshalling of the large force which is in the field against them may cause them to turn to the other tribes for help, and that at least some of the latter will, on the “fellow feeling” principle, be led to afford it. If so, we may yet have “a little war” in reality. Sir William Mansfield has shown himself most active and assiduous in this matter. He would, however, it is said, fain have had carte blanche, not merely as to the strength and composition of the force to be employed, but as to the extent and direction of the action to be taken. Had the Viceroy accorded this he would simply have divested himself of the larger moiety of that authority for the due exercise of which he is primarily and mainly responsible, and this, too, to vest the Commander-in-Chief with a discretionary power of taking any portion, however large, of the Bengal army into any quarter or region beyond our North-West Frontier in which it might seem proper to his Excellency to wage a brilliant campaign. But would the Commander-in-Chief have respected the spirit in which such discretion had been given him, and have scrupulously endeavoured to keep the operations within the narrowest limits consistent with the attainment of the real object for which they had been set on foot? The court-martial on Paymaster Lawes at Subathoo drags its slow length along. For the prosecution alone there are forty witnesses, and up to a few days ago not fifteen of these had been examined. Colonel Maisey, Deputy-Judge Advocate-General, directs the prosecution. What with the treble and heavy fire kept up on the employes by Sir John Lawrence, Sir Richard Temple, and Mr. Secretary Lushington, the Financial Department is now able to hang out the proud signal of “no arrears!” Heaven help them if they again fall into the mire while the present Viceroy remains. Sir John gives no quarter to any department whose work he has discovered not to be up to date. And the remarks and little memos he pens on such occasions are, I hear, of a rather stinging character. Those who fancy the Viceroy “easy-going” labour under a small mistake. He permits the utmost freedom of discussion and of opinion in both the councils, but, nevertheless, has every member and department of his Government as much "in hand" as ever a stiff colonel has had the officers and non-commissioned officers of his corps. The United Service Club give a ball to the Viceroy on the 23rd proximo, and the society of Simla one to Mrs. Noble Taylor on the 9th. Both will be grand affairs, and than the compliment to Mrs. Noble Taylor never was graceful compliment better deserved. It is to mark the sense Simla society entertain of the lady's brilliant and continuous hospitality during the last two seasons. A ball comes off at Peterhoff on the 1st prox. It, to be sure, like all the viceregal entertainments, will be a success. There was a pleasant reunion here in the Assembly-room a few nights ago. Colonel Malleison is to act for Colonel Broome (appointed officiating Secretary Military Department), and Dr. Cunningham, now secretary to the Sanitary Commission, will officiate as sanitary commissioner vice Malleison.—Times of India Correspondent.

ABBOTTABAD, Aug. 17.—The endless line of laden camels, mules, elephants, and even two-wheeled vehicles of various kinds consequent upon the arrival of European troops, seems to have given place to the same returning unladen. Wonderful the difference between the impedimenta of Europeans and natives! The latter seem to have absolutely none. For this kind of warfare one cannot but admire the unencumbered native troops, who, if armed with Snider rifles and Armstrong guns, would soon terminate these frontier disturbances without troubling the British soldier proper. The 24th N.I., under Colonel Cave, came in last Saturday (15th) at 4 A.M. This regiment halts at Abbottabad for the present. The 3rd Sikhs are expected shortly from Peshawur. The 25th N.I. march from the same station to Hoti-Murdan. The 20th Hussars move to Rawul Pindee, we hear. Some anxiety has been felt about Colonel Johnstone, of the Survey Department, who has been on duty in the Khagan district with a small party of friends. They might easily have been cut off by the enemy, but they have escaped. One can fancy how distasteful Colonel Johnstone's occupation must be to the disaffected inhabitants of the interior. The weather is extremely warm even here. The temperature is 85 deg. in a house; it must be much more in tents. The 6th Europeans, who are at Hurreepore by this time, have lost eight or ten men, owing to the intense heat, since they left Rawul Pindee. They have succumbed to what is called heat apoplexy; what poor Dr. Renny, of the 20th Hussars, used to say was more properly heat-combustion, or heat-eoma. If we do not have rain they will continue to suffer from the heat in that stifling Hurreepore valley. If that position must be guarded, it is a pity native troops cannot be quartered at Hurreepore and the European sent up to Abbottabad. General Wilde—or Major-General Wilde, as he is during his campaign—leaves to-day or to-morrow to take command, with Colonels Bright and Vaughan as Brigadier Generals.

Aug. 18.—It only rains when the Europeans are marching. It rained heavily last Thursday when the 19th and Artillery arrived, and it rained hard last night as they were starting for Mansirrah. At 2 A.M. the troops were all in parade ready to march, and down came the rain. A correspondent writing from Abbottabad on the 18th instant says:—"Half of Lieutenant-Colonel Renny's battery R.H.A., with elephant equipments to carry the guns over the hills, were to have marched this morning with the 19th Foot, and a squadron of the 16th B.C., for Munsera, but were stopped by heavy rain. They hope to get off to-morrow morning. Major Johnson, Assistant Quartermaster-General, has joined the force. Light mortars are coming from the Peshawur Magazine, and sixty artillerymen from Mean Meer to work them. Lieutenant Stewart, R.A., Gunnery Instructor, 24th Brigade, is to be Adjutant to Lieutenant-Colonel E. Atlay, R.H.A., commanding the R.A., Hazara Field Force. A field magazine is to be formed at Rawul Pindee. Assistant-Surgeon M. Cogan is to have charge of the Field Hospital at Oghee in the Agror valley, which is to be the base of the Right Brigade in the operations against the Black Mountain tribes. The R.H.A. and 19th Foot are free from sickness, but sad accounts are heard of the sufferings of the 6th Foot at Hurreepore. General Wilde starts this evening on a reconnaissance in the Agror Valley."—Delhi Gazette Correspondent.

PESHAWUR, Aug. 17.—News has come in from Swat and Bonair. Zedoolah Khan, a friend of the English, and the Khan of all Bonair, seized a quantity of mules belonging to the people of Swat, and kept them in his possession. The Akhoond of Swat sent a confidential man to the Khan with a request that as the mules, &c., belonged to the merchant he would give them up, and he represented that it was not right for the Khan to retain the property of poor persons in his possession. Zedoolah Khan refused to listen to the Akhoond's representations, and replied that he would raise an insurrection through the length and breadth of Swat, "And I will further bring the English forces upon you." When this haughty reply reached the Akhoond he called his people to arms, and has since had an army round him. This force marched against Zedoolah, who had hoped by his influence in Bonair to get a strong force to oppose them. But all the neighbouring people declared they could not oppose the Akhoond. A few of his friends and relations, however, ranged themselves by his side. The force of Swat reached Bonair and at once attacked the force of the Khan; the fort fell at the first assault, which lasted less than an hour. Zedoolah Khan, his son, and many of his relations were killed, and his fort was destroyed. The houses of several of his friends were also "looted." This business was thus brought to a conclusion. Zedoolah Khan was a great friend of the English, to whom he was exceedingly well disposed. The Moulvies of Sittana induced half the people of Bonair to adopt the Wahabee tenets. But the Akhoond of Swat sent his Khalefah, or naib—his principal councillor, in fact—to the Moulvies, with a request that they would give up proselytising and allow the Bonairites to return to their original principles of faith, or in other words, to leave the bad road and to return to the straight track again. The Moulvies were exceedingly indignant at this message and sent back a very insolent reply couched in very strong words. Nor was this all; they at once called all their people to arms. The Akhoond did the same, and immediately proclaimed a crusade against them as Kaffirs; his forces assembled, and have since left to meet their enemies. A battle has probably been fought, or will be fought in a day or two. Feroze Shah is in great distress and anxiety at the turn affairs have taken; he does not know which way to turn; he cannot at this present moment side with one party or the other. It is very evident the Akhoond cares very little about the Shahzadah. In my opinion the days of Moulvies are numbered; the Akhoond will destroy them; they will probably be cut to pieces. God will be with the Akhoond, for he is a great and holy man.—Englishman Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

CHANGE OF NAME.—The Right Hon. the Secretary of State has been pleased to permit Mr. W. Barrie, of the Bengal Civil Service, to alter the spelling of his surname to "Barry."

"NIKKULSEIN SAHIB."—An informant states that the Sikhs of the 30th N.I. have been crowding to General Nicholson's tomb, which they venerate as if it was the resting-place of one of their own "gooroo's." Indeed, they openly say they look upon him as a "pir."—Delhi Gazette.

A GOOD HAUL.—The Lucknow and Cawnpore train carried 27,000 passengers to and fro on the occasion of the eclipse. That speaks well for the way traffic on that line is conducted. No line in England would have done better than that, with all the advantages they have of a large European staff and experienced hands.

MILITARY LEAVE OF ABSENCE.—The following officers obtained leave of absence in August on m.c., &c., under the new rules:—Lieut. McCrae Bruce, Quarter-Master 4th Punjab Infantry, from 15th May to 15th November, 1868, to Cashmere under the Furlough Rules of 1868.

SPECIFICATIONS OF INVENTIONS.—The undermentioned Specifications of Inventions have been filed, under the provisions of Act XV. of 1859, in the office of the Secretary to the Government of India in the Home Department. Mr. James Wilson, of Hastings, Calcutta, for an improved railway sleeper. Mr. Peter Ironside, of Westminster-road, in the county of Surrey, England, coachbody maker, for improvements in the construction of venetian blinds or shutters.

MAGISTERIAL POWERS.—Lieutenant Colonel H. Mills, Executive Commissariat-officer with the camp of H. E. the Commander-in-Chief, is vested with the powers of a magistrate within the limits of the camp in foreign territory for the punishment of petty crime among the camp followers. A Commission of the Peace has been issued from the High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal directed to Captain Ashton George Mayne, Officiating Cantonment Magistrate of Morar.

EDUCATION IN THE NORTH-WEST PROVINCES.—The Hon. the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-West Provinces has appointed the undermentioned gentlemen to form a Board of Examiners of the upper educational institutions in the North-West Provinces for 1868:—English Literature—W. H. Wright, Esq., M.A., Professor, Benares College. Mathematics—E. E. Rogers, Esq., M.A., Professor, Benares College. Mental and Moral Philosophy and History and Geography—E. Baron, Esq., M.A., Professor, Bareilly College.

MUSCAT AND PERSIA.—In consequence of the threat of the Sultan of Muscat to blockade the Persian coast, the Shah of Persia has professed great alarm as to the possible injury the Sultan might inflict on the Persian ports, and has asked the Indian Government to procure for him some ships of war for service in the gulf. Considering that England has undertaken the maritime police of the gulf the demand of the Shah is somewhat out of place. It may be as well however if the Viceroy takes advantage of the occasion to strengthen the naval force in the gulf permanently.—Englishman.

THE CAWNPORE SUTTEE CASE.—The High Court, sitting in appeal on the Cawnpore Sutte case, have greatly reduced the heavy sentences of transportation for life and imprisonment for ten and five years, passed by the Sessions Judge. They have sentenced four men to five years' imprisonment, five to four years, five to two years, seven men and five women to six months, and eighteen men to three months' imprisonment, while eleven have been acquitted altogether. The five women had already been released by the Lieutenant-Governor in the exercise of his prerogative.

ACCIDENT TO MR. WYNNE.—Mr. Wynne—who has just entered on the duties of Secretary to the Sudder Board of Revenue, N. W. P., during the absence of Mr. Plowden—met with a serious accident (says the Pioneer) when out riding last Friday, the 21st inst. His horse threw him, and he fell on his head, and was taken up insensible. We understand that he is still considered to be in a critical state, though going on favourably. The Pioneer of a subsequent date (August 26) is glad to be able to report that Mr. Wynne, though still seriously ill, is believed to be progressing favourably.

EXAMINATIONS IN THE NATIVE LANGUAGES.—Mr. G. Cooke, Assistant Engineer, 1st Grade, Rajpootana, passed the colloquial examination prescribed in Public Works Department, standing order No. 32 of 1867, on the 6th July, 1868. The undermentioned officers are reported by the Board of Examiners at Fort William to have passed the prescribed tests, on the 3rd August, agreeably to G.O. No. 734 of 1864:—High proficiency in Hindee: Cornet Bell and H. S. Williamson, 5th Lancers. Higher standard in Hindoostanee: Lieut. Cookesley, Royal Artillery; Ensign Shepherd, 93rd Foot; and Lieutenant Morris, General List, Infantry.

A NAVY FOR INDIA.—The Daily News hears on excellent authority, that it has been resolved to resuscitate the Indian navy, or, rather, to once again provide this country with an adequate naval force of her own. The old Indian navy should never have been abolished; but when, in the reign of the late Mr. Wilson, the fiat for its abolition went forth, any proposition of the kind at all likely to result in a curtailment of expenditure was sure to be sanctioned. It was a rupee-wise lakh-foolish policy, and the present instance is not the only one in which it has had since to be undone.

THE PALUMPORE FAIR.—The Palumpore Fair in Kangra will open on November 2. Prizes to the value of Rs. 1,000 will be awarded for the best specimens of general merchandise and live stock. Major Pase, the Deputy Commissioner, upon whom the duty of supervising the fair has devolved, hopes before the end of September to be able to publish a detailed list of the articles of merchandise likely to be brought down from Yarkund and Ladakh. Beyond the rent of booths and sheds erected for the convenience of travellers no fees will be levied. Besides the products of Yarkund, Ladakh, and Lahoul, and live stock, including hill ponies of the Yarkund Spitti, and Lahoul breeds, Kangra Valley teas will be exhibited.

THE KEONGHUR WAR.—The Keonghur business is not yet settled. The wretched Bhooyas will not fight—they show a dogged and passive opposition, but nothing more. Meanwhile the troops which have been sent to coerce them are said to be in a wretched plight, condemned to a life of inactivity in tents and hastily-constructed huts. More than half the force, we are credibly informed, have already been laid up with fever and bowel complaints. It is said that the presence of the military is no longer necessary, and that the police force on the spot is quite sufficient for all that is required. If this be so, we should think the sooner the troops are withdrawn into quarters the better.—Pioneer.

MILITARY FURLONGHS.—The following officers obtained furloughs in August on m.c., &c., chiefly under the new rules:—Colonel Abbott, Bengal Infantry, Lieut. Little, of the Bengal Staff Corps, Assistant Engineer, 2nd Grade, Nimar Division, Central Provinces, Public Works Department, for 20 months. Lieut. Strong, of the General List, Infantry, 2nd Squadron Subaltern, 10th Bengal Cavalry, having been granted leave to Europe on m.c., for 20 months by the Bombay Government, and being entitled to furlough, is, at his own request, allowed furlough to Europe for two years, in lieu of the former. The name of Lieut. Skerrett, 36th Foot, is to be added to the list of officers nominated for depot duty at home in G.O. of 10th August, and his services are available for duty with troops to England.

BHOOTAN.—The ever shifting scene of Bhootan politics has undergone a new phase. Augdo Forung, despairing of gaining the Western chiefs to his purpose, has made friends again with his former patron, Tongsoo Penlow. Having taken arms against his late confederates, he pounced upon and captured a fort in which were the Delee Jungpen, Jongdomen, Samchye or Dewan to the Dhurin Rajah, Augong Siggy, the Llama Juugpen, and sixty followers. These he is reported to have put to death. The agent of the Deb Rajah at Buxa denies this, but it is so customary a result from a victory in Bhootan that it may be believed in spite of his denial. The Government have done wisely in leaving the chiefs of this unhappy country to themselves.—Englishman.

CURRENCY IN BERAR.—The Governor-General in Council has constituted the Berars a circle of issue for the Government paper currency, and to appoint Akola to be the place of issue of notes for the said circle. The notes of the Akola Circle will be a legal tender on and after the 1st September next for all payments within the circle, except at the Office of Issue, and will be received in payment of revenue and of all other claims of the Government within the circle. The Deputy-Commissioner of Issue will issue notes:—1st.—In exchange for the amount thereof in current silver coin of the Government of India, or 2nd.—In exchange for other notes of the Government of India issued within the same circle. Notes issued at Akola will be payable on demand in current silver coin of the Government of India at the office of the Deputy-Commissioner of Issue at Akola and at the office of the Commissioner of the Department of Issue at Bombay.

INDIAN MUSEUM.—Mr. Joseph Fayrer has been nominated by the Governor-General in Council, under Section 6 of Act XVII. of 1866, to be a trustee of the Indian Museum, in succession to Mr. Arthur Grote.

"HARD BARGAINS."—Sir William Mansfield has a sharp hit at certain officers in a general order of the 8th August:—"It appears from applications which are received from time to time in the Headquarters' offices that many of the officers in the army imagine that they can make a convenience of the service, and be sent to do nominal duty in stations other than those where their regiments are placed. Such applications are invariably refused, but his Excellency thinks that it should be publicly made known that the existing system of the army leaves no opening for such an abuse, and that, excepting on a ground of real public service, officers cannot be permitted to be detached from the regiments in which they are enrolled and hold substantive appointments."

EDUCATION IN THE NORTH-WEST PROVINCES.—Education seems to be advancing in the Muttra district of the North-Western Provinces. The Hulkabundee schools having been found to be in a very unsatisfactory state, the local committees were invited to report upon them, in order to increase the money annually available for education in the district, and to secure greater efficiency among the teachers by raising their pay. It was found that there were 170 schools in the district, giving an average salary to each teacher of only Rs. 4-5. The landholders have agreed to contribute at an increased rate, and the salaries of the masters will be increased. The Zillah school is also to be reformed. Good, because fairly well-paid, teachers are at the root of all success in education. The landholders of the Muttra district, and still more those of the permanently settled district of Benares, who assessed themselves for education when Mr. H. C. Tucker was commissioner, present an example to the landholders of Bengal which, thus far, they have declined to follow.

AN EXPENSIVE OVERSIGHT.—The Hon. R. Drummond, lately Commissioner of our district, and now of Rohileund, has, we learn with mingled feelings of regret and satisfaction, come to grief. He has been required by the Government to replace Rs. 5,000 lost to the State by his supineness. Our regret is that an official in his position should continue to indulge in that insouciance once so characteristic of an, at one time, irresponsible and virtually uncontrolled service; and satisfaction that the Government of Sir William Muir will not tolerate it. Another cause of congratulation in the case is the circumstance of a native having had the temerity to sue the State for damages, and of a judge having awarded him Rs. 5,000. The case should, as a matter of course, have been appealed. Mr. Drummond is said to have looked it carefully in his office box, to have forgotten it, and to have allowed the period open for appeal to lapse. Hence the order of Government that he and not the State should pay. Mr. Drummond's only defence now lies in the fact (if it be a fact) that the case for Government was an excessively weak one.—Delhi Gazette.

HYDERABAD COMMISSION.—The following temporary appointments in the Hyderabad Commission have been sanctioned by his Excellency the Viceroy and Governor-General in Council, in consequence of the absence on privilege leave of Major Allardyce, Captain Bushby, and Captain Bell:—Mr. Hordern, Assistant-Commissioner, 1st Class, to officiate as Deputy-Commissioner of the Booldanah district; Captain Mayne, Assistant-Commissioner, 2nd Class, to officiate as Deputy-Commissioner of the Woon district; Lieutenant FitzGerald, Assistant-Commissioner, 1st Class, to officiate as Deputy-Commissioner of the Oomraotee district. The following arrangements in the Hyderabad Commission, consequent on the appointment of Major Allardyce to officiate as Commissioner of West Berar, are sanctioned by H.E. the Viceroy and Governor-General in Council:—Mr. Hordern, Assistant-Commissioner, in charge of Bassim, to officiate as Deputy-Commissioner of the Booldanah district; Lieutenant Mackenzie, Assistant-Commissioner, to be in charge of sub-division of Bassim.

CIVIL LEAVE OF ABSENCE.—The following civil servants (in August) obtained leave of absence on m.c. under the new rules:—Two months' privilege leave to Mr. Wall, M.A., Joint Magistrate and Deputy Collector, Etawah; three months' privilege leave, in two instalments—viz., from the 3rd September to the 18th October, 1868, and from the 5th May to the 20th June, 1869—to Mr. Butt, Assistant Magistrate and Collector, Shahjehanpore; one month's privilege leave to Lieutenant-Colonel Denny, Deputy Commissioner, Seonee, from the 15th Sept.; three months' privilege leave to Mr. Chisholm, Settlement Officer, Belaspore, from 1st October, 1868; four months' leave of absence to Mr. Stack, Professor of Literature in the Agra College; one month's privilege leave to Mr. Neale, Assistant Settlement Officer at Furruckabad; two months' privilege leave to Captain Dunbar, District Superintendent of Police, Meerut; two months' privilege leave to Lieutenant-Colonel Gibbs, Cantonment Magistrate of Shahjehanpore; two months to Mr. Sandeman, Accountant-General, Bengal, from 2nd proximo; Mr. Ferris, Deputy-Commissioner of Jung, three months, from date of availing himself of leave; the privilege leave to Mr. Forsyth, Commissioner and Superintendent, Jullundhur Division, is extended to two months; Lieutenant Samuels, Assistant Commissioner of Nazareebaugh, two months.

EXAMINATION IN NATIVE LANGUAGE.—Mr. A. G. L. Raitt, apprentice, has passed an examination in the Maratha language, as prescribed in the Public Works Code.

CIVIL FURLONGS.—The following Civil servants obtained furlough to Europe on m.c. in August:—Mr. Mangles, Accountant-General, British Burma, usual subsidiary leave, in addition to the furlough granted to him, dated Aug. 12. The usual subsidiary leave, to enable him to reach the port of embarkation, is granted to Mr. Horne, Civil and Sessions Judge of Myupoory, with effect from the date on which he may avail himself of the same. Surgeon Hayes, of the Medical Department, Deputy Commissioner, 2nd grade, Singbloom, and Major Revel, of the Bengal Staff Corps, Deputy Inspector General of Police, Bengal, for two years. Mr. Braddon, Superintendent of Excise and Stamps in Oude, 18 months, to proceed to England. Mr. Swaine, Assistant Superintendent Telegraph Department, 15 months. Mr. O'Brien, Assistant Superintendent Telegraph Department, 3 months. Mr. Ffinch, Superintendent of Telegraphs, Rajpootana division, 15 months, with preparatory leave from July 13; the leave granted to Mr. Ffinch, dated April 2 last, is hereby cancelled. Mr. Lockwood reported his departure for India per steamship Candia, which was left by the pilot at sea on August 3. Mr. Jones, District Superintendent of Police, Sylhet, 15 months, with 29 days' preparatory leave (previous leave cancelled). Mr. Aitchison, Deputy Commissioner of Lahore, reported his departure from Bombay by the steamer Golconda on August 4. Messrs. Sandford and Mangles have reported their departure from India by the steamship Candia, which vessel was left by the pilot at sea on August 3. Mr. Bryan, Assistant 5th Class, Financial Department, was left by the pilot at sea on August 8.

THE TRADE OF CALCUTTA.—The returns for the past official year from Bonnaud's "Commercial Annual" show an increase of more than three and a-half millions sterling in the imports, chiefly in cotton and metal goods, but a decrease of a slightly greater amount in the import of treasure. There was an increase in the exports of £636,390. We give the totals of the trade for the past five years:—

Year.	IMPORTS.			EXPORTS.			Total Trade.
	Merchandise.	Treasure.	Total.	Merchandise.	Treasure.	Total.
1863-64...	£. 11,086,328	£. 5,519,933	£. 16,606,261	£. 20,946,912	£. 2,979,317	£. 23,926,229	£. 40,532,490
1864-65...	12,193,852	3,791,692	15,985,544	22,107,682	2,348,605	24,456,287	40,441,831

The trade of Bengal has thus returned to its normal healthy state—that of receiving increasing imports of merchandise, and not treasure, in payment for increasing exports. In the five years the imports of merchandise have risen from eleven to nineteen millions sterling, while the exports have increase in value from twenty to twenty-two and a-half millions, and that in a dull year of unusually low prices. The annual value of the trade of Bengal, that is, practically, of Calcutta, now stands at fifty-two and three-quarters millions sterling, a higher figure than even during the inflated prices of cotton and jute in 1865, when it was under fifty-one millions. The trade of Calcutta alone is now nearly equal to half of the whole trade of the five great ports of British India.—Friend of India.

IRRIGATION SURVEYS.—The Gazette of India contains a statement of the survey operations that were carried out during the last cold season in connection with irrigation projects. In the Central Provinces Major Fischer has surveyed and established the possibility of constructing an anicut on the Pench, and leading therefrom a canal to water the plain lying north of the Kanhan, and containing about 130,000 acres of arable land; and the possibility of dealing with the Wurdah in like manner. The data likewise for three small schemes in Nimar have been obtained. The exploration and levelling of the upper part of the Pench was a work of difficulty. The party had to cut their way through low jungle, and every mile of this little known and wild country had to be felt before progress could be made. When the line was brought into the open country progress was much more rapid, but sickness contracted in the jungly ravines often prostrated the whole party, consisting of Major Fischer, Lieut. Shepherd, Conductor Phillips, Corporal Parker, and a staff of native surveyors; and it was not before the first week in June that Lieut. Shepherd had completed his field work for the Pench anicut project. In the Rohilcund Terai the Contour survey, under Capt. Thomson, was vigorously prosecuted, notwithstanding the illness of some of the officers engaged, and satisfactory progress was made in levelling and drainage survey on the Meerut, Boolundshuhur, and Etawah divisions of the Ganges Canal. On the Hindun Jumna Canal, 156½ square miles were surveyed, 88 lineal miles were levelled, and 109½ miles of lock-pits laid down. The minor drainage lines of the country were in the great majority of cases found to be totally incapable of carrying off freely, after a heavy fall of rain, the surplus water unabsorbed by the soil. Their immediate improvement must be regarded as a necessary accompaniment of the development of irrigation. Colonel Fyfe reports upon irrigation surveys in the Bombay Presidency.

Madras.

RETIREMENT.—With reference to the first paragraph of G.O.G., No. 264, July 10, 1868, the retirement from the service of Lieut.-Colonel R. Jones, of the Infantry, will have effect from the date of departure from Madras of the second steamer in August.

RAILWAY EXTENSION.—The Government have authorised the extension of the North-West line of railway, between Moodanoor and Tadputry, to be opened for traffic on the 1st September, and have at the same time requested the Board of Revenue to provide funds for the branch road to the railway station at Tadputry.

MILITARY.—His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief has represented to Government that the Madras army has been deprived of the advantages of filling up vacancies of general officers for the last three months, and he therefore requests the Government to urge the home authorities to give early attention to this subject.

AN INQUIRY.—The Government have directed Major Elliot to make an investigation into the conduct of Dr. Campbell, Major Evans Bell, Major Gray, and Mr. W. B. Richardson, whose names appear in the accounts of the late Maharajah of Mysore.—Englishman.

A RUMOUR.—"It is whispered," says the Madras Times of the 25th, "that the inconvenience caused by there being two Lord Napiers will be soon obviated by the promotion of the Governor of Madras one step in the peerage of Scotland, with the title of Viscount Thirlestane."

Messrs. Phipps and McIvor.—The Secretary of State has forwarded to the local Government a medal and diploma, received from the Imperial Zoological Society of Acclimatisation at Paris, for delivery to Mr. W. G. McIvor and Mr. G. Phipps at Tuticorin, respectively, the latter gentleman being doubtless the officer designated by Monsieur Drouyn de Lhuys as Captain Phipps, who performed the service in connection with the reproduction of pearl oysters obtained at Tinnevely.

REDUCTION OF TROOPS.—Under instructions from the Secretary of State, and with the sanction of the Government of India, one garrison battery of the 20th Brigade and two garrison batteries of the 23rd Brigade Royal Artillery, will be reduced on the withdrawal of the batteries from the Straits. The non-commissioned officers and men will be absorbed in the remaining batteries of Royal Artillery in this Presidency in such manner as the commander-in-chief may deem best for the service.

MILITARY LEAVE OF ABSENCE.—Colonel Silven, Superintendent and Agent for Army Clothing, is granted privilege leave of absence for sixty days, from date of departure; Lieutenant Gillespie, 14th brigade Royal Artillery, in extension till October 17th, Neilgherries, medical certificate; Lieutenant-colonel Young, Staff Corps, Commandant 1st Native Infantry, from September 10th, 1868, for six months; Major Gib, Divisional Staff, Assistant Adjutant-General, Southern Division, privilege leave for forty days; Lieutenant Thorp, 2nd battalion 19th Foot, for four months from August 14th, Rangoon.

EXAMINATIONS IN THE NATIVE LANGUAGES.—The undermentioned gentlemen have obtained leave of absence from their stations:—Mr. Sharpe, Civil and Session Judge of Madura, for two years, to proceed to Europe on furlough under Civil Service absentee rules of 1868. The undermentioned officers have passed the Higher Standard Examination in the Hindustanee language:—Lieut. Hotham, General List, attached 34th L. I.; Lieut. Sheppard, General List, attached 35th N. I.; Ensign Porteous, 2nd Battalion 21st Foot, Probationer in Staff Corps; Captain Thompson, Royal Artillery, Ootacamund, passed the Elementary Test in the Tamil language.

CIVIL FURLONGHS, &c.—The following officials have obtained leave of absence:—Mr. Sharpe, Civil and Session Judge of Madura, for two years; Captain Gordon, Superintendent of the Central Jail, Salem, preparatory leave for the prescribed period to proceed to Madras for the purpose of obtaining leave to Europe; Mr. Brewer, Overseer, D.P.W., of Perindoray Talook, of Coimbatore District, one month, from the date of leaving Erode; Captain Magrath, Acting Assistant Commissary-general, for forty days; Mr. Shaw, Appraiser, Sea Customs Office, Madras, for one month; Colonel Denison, President of the Madras Municipal Commission, for six weeks.

MILITARY FURLONGHS.—The following officers obtained furlough in August, on medical certificate, to Europe for two years:—Lieutenant-Colonel Maclean, Staff Corps, Deputy Commissioner 1st Class, Saugor District, Central Provinces, to embark from Bombay; Captain Swinton, Cadre 8th Regiment Light Cavalry, attached 1st Regiment Light Cavalry, to embark from Bombay; Captain Wood, Staff Corps, 2nd Wing Subaltern 28th Regiment Native Infantry, to embark from Madras; Lieutenant-Colonel Holmes, Staff Corps, 2nd in Command and Wing officer 11th Regiment Native Infantry, on furlough for two years, and to embark from Madras; Captain E. J. Watson, Staff Corps, attached 23rd Regiment L.I., on medical certificate, for twenty months, and to embark for Madras; Captain W. Chisholm, Staff Corps, 2nd Wing Subaltern 34th Regiment Light Infantry, on medical certificate, for two years, and to embark from Madras.

HEALTH OF THE MADRAS ARMY.—We lately reprinted in our columns a paragraph which appeared in the London Times, and in which it was asserted; that out of a force of 59,491 European troops serving in India during 1866 only 1,074 deaths occurred, and by which statement the public were led to believe that the loss from sickness in the army had fallen to only 18 per 1,000 of average strength, whereas, we find, by referring to the Madras Sanitary Report for 1866, that out of a force of 11,498 European troops stationed in the Madras Presidency during the year referred to, there were 257 deaths in India, 645 men were permanently invalided, and 108 sent away for change of climate, making the loss experienced from sickness alone at the rate of 87 per 1,000; to which number, if added the 255 men who claimed their discharge, 27 who deserted, 33 who purchased their discharge, and 36 dismissed the service by court-martial, the "total loss" to the army amounts to the rate of 117 per 1,000 of average strength, a loss which, occurring in an army of 60,000 British troops in India, simply necessitates an annual supply of 7,000 recruits. Some medical authorities in England are recommending that British troops when in India should be stationed on the Hills, but it is curious to observe that in the regiments stationed on the Hills in Bengal during 1866 the mortality was in the inverse ratio of the invaliding, and vice versa. Besides which, if the recommendation is adopted, we fear the number of men who have been in the habit of claiming their discharge, or getting themselves released from the service, will not be diminished to any extent.—Madras Times.

A COMPLAINT.—The anchorage regulations at this port are characterised by delightful uncertainty. Each ship as she comes in takes up such vacant berth as seems most convenient, and the steamers, as a general rule, finding it impracticable to approach within easy distance of the pier, and yet to have room for a swing round, have over and over again been forced to anchor outside all the shipping, to the great inconvenience of passengers, and the increase of the difficulties of shippers or consignees. Now, these steamers contribute in dues to this uninviting and inhospitable port upwards of Rs. 13,000 per annum, for which they practically obtain nothing. So the local Chamber have agitated the question, and the Government on their recommendation, have directed that a space extending from opposite the Peninsular and Oriental Company's Office on the north, to opposite Messrs. Arbuthnot and Co.'s office on the south, bounded on the east by a line at a distance from the shore of 300 yards from the head of the pier shall be set apart, until further notice, for the anchorage of steamers exclusively. The Master Attendant objected to this allotment of the most convenient portion of the roadstead to the use of the steamers, as he feared that such an arrangement would prove exceedingly distasteful to the owners of sailing vessels frequenting the port; but the Chamber replied that the local agents of these owners have unanimously agreed to the scheme, and the Government consider they have thereby satisfactorily disposed of his objection. To the passenger public at large this devotion of the anchorage within easy reach of the pier's head to the use of steamers should prove a great gain.—Madras Times.

THE ECLIPSE.—A writer in the Athenæum records his experiences:—"My instruments were a ten-inch transit theodolite by Troughton and Simms—a sextant by the same makers—a very sensitive thermometer by Negretti and Zambra, and a good Aneroid barometer, which had been compared with the mercurial standard barometer at the Observatory. I was also furnished with a chronometer whose error and rate were known. The time of first contact was noted 8h. 14m. 57s., Madras mean time, the thermometer then reading 90 degs. and barometer 29.72 inches. At 8h. 36m. 13.7s. the large spot on the N.E. portion of the sun was covered, thermometer now reading 91 degs. The temperature from this time gradually and sensibly diminished up to time of greatest obscuration (9h. 32m. 35s.) when it was as low as 84 degs., and after this it as gradually rose again. At 9h. 5m. 32.7s. the moon's head was distinctly serrated or jagged, and just about this time a distinct ring of light, or Aurora, was seen around the sun, which ring lasted for nearly half an hour after the time of greatest obscuration. At 9h. 35m. 27s. the large spot on the sun was uncovered, and 3m. 17s. afterwards a thin band of greenish yellow light was distinctly visible round the moon's edge, and this continued for nearly ten minutes. This band of light was seen by friends as well as by myself, and so cannot be due, as I at first thought, to imperfection and derangement of my vision caused by continued observation of the sun for cusp measurements—(see below). The time of last contact was noted at 11h. 0m. 36.7s., Madras mean time.

When getting near the time of greatest obscuration I ceased the cusp measurements in order to give all my time to the telescope in case any wonders might be then revealed. These measurements were renewed at 10h. 22m. 16.7s., and continued pretty regularly up to the end of the eclipse, but I do not place much faith in the last two or three observations, as my eye was getting fatigued."

STATION TALK.

RAJCOTE, Aug. 13.—We have had heavy and continuous rain since the night of the 7th. It was a regular downpour, the violence of which caused a good number of huts in the bazaars and sepoy lines to tumble down. The rivers also were so much flooded as to impede the progress of the mails. It cleared up last night, and the Bombay mail of the 7th has just come in. About fourteen inches of rain must have fallen. The affairs of the chief of Wulleh have been in such disorder that it was found necessary for the interests of the chief and the protection of his subjects to exercise a slight degree of interference, and accordingly an assistant of ability and experience, Mr. Kristnaje Luximon, was deputed to make personal inquiries, when it was ascertained that the State was fearfully involved in debt, that village after village was mortgaged, that matters connected with the chief's household were so scandalous as to give offence to neighbouring petty chiefs and landholders, and that the people around the chief plied him with kussoomba (opium water) and liquor to such an extent as scarcely to allow him to keep possession of his right senses for two hours in the day. Arrangements are, I believe, being made, with the consent of the chief, to place matters on a more satisfactory footing. The administration of Talooka Gondul is also unsatisfactory, though a Kamdar on Rs. 7,000 a-year was thrust upon it. The chief is a nobody, the reins of government being in the hands of his wife and a lot of scheming Brahmins, one of whom, it is well known, rules the Ranee, so that a little friendly interference here cannot but be attended with good results. Our political agent, Colonel Anderson, with his wonted liberality, has presented the Roman Catholic chapel with a bell, and a sum of Rs. 50 towards completing the parsonage, which has not yet been finished for want of funds.

Aug. 18.—The great eclipse of the sun, which everybody was so anxiously looking out for, began this morning at about a quarter-past seven, arrived at its greatest obscuration at about nine, and terminated a little after ten o'clock. Solemn fast was kept by the Hindoos during the continuance of the eclipse, after which there was a great rush to the river for ablutionary purposes, in order to secure themselves from evil influences, as the greater number of them regarded the eclipse with some degree of terror, and connected it in a secret manner with some national calamity that is to happen. There was sunshine up to about noon, after which clouds collected; but there is no rain, owing, doubtless, to the prevalence of strong southerly breezes. The Bombay mail of the 10th, which should have been delivered here on the 13th, has not yet arrived, nor was any circular issued by the Post-office to explain the cause of detention. I hear, however, from other sources that communication between Ahmedabad and Veerungam has been stopped, owing to the road having been flooded and rendered impassable. The mail superintendent, Mr. DeSilva, has gone out on the postal line, and I feel sure that he will do all in his power to hasten its transit. One feels rather dull and miserable without the sight of a newspaper for so long as ten days.

KURRACHEE, Aug. 21.—The good folks of Kurrachee were in a terrible way the day previous to the eclipse, and predicted all sorts of evils, but the 18th of August passed off like any other day. The sun was only partially hidden from my eyes. I myself observed nothing, but the Sindian states that the first contact took place at eight o'clock and the last at about twenty-nine minutes past nine. At 8.35 the sun presented a crescent shape, nearly seven-tenths of the disc being darkened. The natives fasted on that day, and did not touch anything until the sun, according to their ideas, was relieved from the clutches of the moon. To-day, after nearly two weeks, is the first day we have received our letters and papers from Bombay by the land route. The interruption is supposed to have been caused by the flooded state of the Runn of Cutch, which, as you must be aware, has often before interfered with the postal communication. Major Widdicombe, by a recent Government order, will act as Judge of the Sudder Court until the return of Mr. M. Melvill, now engaged on the Bombay Bank Commission in Bombay, to Sind—or until another civil servant be permanently appointed to the post. Mr. Foxton acts for the major as District Judge. They respectively delivered over and received charge of office to-day. There is a rumour current that our present Deputy Magistrate is to exchange places with Mr. Bolton at Jerruck; but I hardly think it true. On a former occasion this change was to have been made, but the press and the people were against it and it was abandoned. I should not now be surprised if the Commissioner were petitioned against the transfer, as Mr. Gibbons has made himself a great favourite with all who come before him, both European and native. Major Wilkinson, 82 P. W. V., leaves by to-morrow's steamer for Bombay, en route to Europe, for the benefit of his health, and Colonel Mellersh, for some years Commissary of Ordnance at Hyderabad, has been relieved from his duty at that place, and will proceed by the steamer next week to take up his place in charge of the Grand Arsenal in Bombay. There were a few cases of cholera in the city this week; but prompt measures were adopted and the persons attacked are now in a fair way of recovery. The rains still hold off, and everything is getting frightfully dear, especially grass and gram. A person cannot keep a horse now for less than Rs. 50 a month. What a difference between the present and the olden times, when the keep of a nag did not cost more than Rs. 20!

JAULNA, Aug. 22.—The appearance of cholera, in rather an alarming form, has cast quite a gloom over the quiet little station of Jaulna. Within this past week upwards of forty persons have been attacked with the disease, and the average rate of mortality has been about thirty per cent. Prompt steps have been taken by the Superintendent of Police to check the epidemic, and it is hoped it will soon disappear. After an unusually hot season we have had very favourable rains, and the place is nice and cool now. The sowing operations have long since been completed, and the crops are in a promising condition. Cotton has been sown to a great extent, and it is expected that next winter the crop will yield a bountiful harvest.

Aug. 13.—The rain still continues in all its severity, and the destruction in the city is awful. It has been roughly estimated that more than ten thousand houses and buildings (or nearly one-third of the entire city) have been either damaged or destroyed. It is stated that the damages caused will not fall short of twenty-five lakhs of rupees. The calamity has fallen heavily upon the poorer inhabitants, who are at present in great distress; food, clothes, and the necessaries of life having disappeared with their homes. The members of the Ahmedabad Relief Fund contemplate affording them relief. Such a storm is not in the recollection of even the oldest inhabitant of this place. The fall of rain on the 22nd June, 1853, was certainly excessive, but then it was of very short duration, and it was not accompanied with such a gale, nor was the result in any way disastrous to life and property. There is a report current here that many villages adjacent to Ahmedabad have been washed away. Dead bodies of animals and human beings were seen floating down the river Sabarmuttee. It is impossible yet to ascertain the number of lives lost, or the destruction caused in the villages, as communications have been completely stopped. The Hindoo population (Vishnu), both men and women of this city, greatly afflicted by the tempest, repaired in multitudes, on the 12th and 13th inst., to the Sabarmuttee to offer prayers and solicitations to the "god Neptune," to discontinue sending rain, and to stop the destruction.

Aug. 14.—The rains have abated; but railway, telegraphic, and postal communications still remain entirely interrupted. The total fall of rain, up to yesterday, is forty-four inches and sixty cents., or more than double the quantity we generally have during the whole season. It is reported that there was a slight shock of earthquake felt here at 1.45 on the morning of the 11th inst.

Aug. 15.—We are just informed that telegraphic communication by the railway wire has been restored, but only for the company's service. Mr. Matthew, the chief engineer, and Mr. Duxbury, the traffic manager, notwithstanding the difficulties on the road, have managed to come down as far as Mehmoodabad, and are expected here to-day. On their arrival we shall learn the extent of damages on the line, and no doubt they will bring with them the post, which we have not seen for several days. It has not rained to-day, but is very cloudy.

Aug. 18.—Messrs. Matthew and Duxbury and Captain White arrived here on the night of the 15th instant. The great Nerbudda viaduct has given away in the middle. The Mhye bridge remains safe, but the "Meswa" is completely gone. Damage to a certain extent has also been done to other bridges on this side, and in many places the roads have been washed away. The up trains run only as far as Keem, near Surat. The train service from thence to Ahmedabad is completely stopped. It is as yet uncertain when the line will be available for the use of the public.

KAIRA, Aug. 28.—A great calamity has befallen Kaira and its vicinity. From the 8th to the 13th inst. such storms of rain and wind prevailed as were never before seen or heard of in Guzerat. The three rivers which run past the town overflowed their banks, and destroyed the houses of rich and poor alike. At least four hundred are in ruins. Neighbouring villages were submerged, and the huts swept away. The inhabitants could find no refuge elsewhere than on the hill and tree tops, and the sufferings they have endured are indescribable. The authorities did all they could to provide shelter and relief, and foremost in this good work was Mr. Elliot, the Collector and Magistrate. He set sail in a small boat when the tempest was at its height, and conveyed provisions to the starving people who were cut off from the town. Many he provided with lodgings in his own bungalow and stable. Lives have, it is feared, been lost; but the number would have been much greater had not Mr. Elliot been so daring and energetic in conveying succour and relief where they were most needed.

BARODA, Aug. 20.—The last week has been an eventful one for Baroda, and one that will be long remembered with sorrow. On the 10th instant the river and adjacent nullahs commenced rising from the great fall of rain towards Powaghur hill. On the 11th the whole country was submerged, public roads and all. Several European gentlemen with their families were driven out of their bungalows, the water from the overflowed river having entered their houses; the camp bazaar was partly submerged, most of the people having to desert their houses, a boat running up and down the streets to rescue those who were surrounded by the flood. Many houses fell, and all communication with the city was cut off, by an overwhelming flood running across and over the public highway, from near "Waddington's bridge" to the city gate. The high road to the railway station was also submerged. At the railway station a most melancholy occurrence took place. A Mr. Thompson (Lieutenant in the Guicowar's service), with his son, a boy of fifteen or sixteen, and four other friends, had gone to see the state of the railway and the great flood of water about it. After the visit they tried to get back to the city by the way they had come, i.e., the public highway, but it was submerged to a depth of above twelve feet, as also were the shops of the new bazaar recently put up. Mr. Thompson placed his son on a door plank inside one of the shops, telling him to remain there till he brought another plank, for which he swam back to terra firma. He had scarcely left the boy when the force of the current tilted over the plank, and his son sank to rise no more. At the same time a Mr. Smith, one of the party, was also trying to breast the flood and swim across to the city side of the water; he managed to get half way across when he became exhausted; he tried very hard to get to a post only a few feet from him, but failed, in consequence of the current being too strong, and he, too, sank to rise no more. Mr. Thompson, in diving and searching for his son, was also nearly lost, but was rescued by Messrs. Burton and Richmond, of the railway. The bodies were recovered and buried on the 13th instant. The body of poor Mr. Smith, with carpet-bag in one hand and umbrella in the other, firmly clenched even in death, was afterwards found. In the city, above a hundred lives were lost, and hundreds of houses demolished. Many more would have been lost but for the kindness and forethought of the Guicowar, who came out in person, and placed all his available elephants at the disposal of the people, to rescue those who were surrounded by water; and thus a great many were rescued. Most of the village of Champaneer (near Powaghur) has been washed away, and many lives lost. I yesterday observed several dead bodies washed down the river, almost bleached white. I could see they were natives by their clothes. In Surat the gentlemen of the garrison were sailing up and down the streets in boats, but I have not heard yet what damage has been done.—Times of India Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

DEATH OF CAPTAIN SMITH.—The Times of India regrets to announce the death of Captain Smith, of the 21st Bombay N.I., who died somewhat suddenly on the 26th of August. The deceased was buried, with military honours, in the afternoon.

RETURN OF MEDICAL OFFICERS FROM ABYSSINIA.—The undermentioned Acting Veterinary Surgeons, lately attached to the Abyssinian Expeditionary Force, having completed the duty on which they were detached from Zoula to Bombay, will return to England at the public expense, and on arrival will report themselves to the Principal Veterinary Surgeon, Woolwich:—Mr. Berne and Mr. Wilson.

MERCANTILE.—During the month of July 34,870,844 lbs., or 44,478 and 23-196ths candies of cotton, valued at Rs. 1,03,51,508, were shipped from the port of Bombay to foreign external and foreign Indian ports. From ports in Sind, during the same month, 1,651,720 lbs., or 2,580 candies and 520 lbs., valued at Rs. 5,37,505, were shipped to foreign external ports.

MOVEMENTS OF THE GOVERNOR.—His Excellency the Governor and suite returned to Poona on Wednesday, from Beejapoor, accompanied by the German astronomical party, who were his Excellency's guests during their stay there, and by whom they were treated with the most flattering consideration and hospitality. A short time will, we hope, afford us the opportunity of learning the result of their observations.—Poona Observer.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.—The following officers obtained leave of absence on m.c. in August last:—Brevet Major Goldsworthy, 91st Highlanders, from Aug. 22, 1868, to Sept. 30, 1868, in extension, to remain in the Deccan; Lieutenants Gardiner and Stopford, 14th Brigade Royal Artillery, from July 21, 1868, to October 21, 1868, in extension, on the recommendation of a medical board; Brevet Major Gammel, 46th Foot, from July 17, 1868, to Jan. 17, 1869, at the recommendation of a medical board.

MEDICAL ARRIVALS.—The undermentioned officers are brought on the strength of the Bombay Medical Establishment from the dates specified opposite their names:—Surgeons Gordon, M.B., 16th April, 1868; Davidson, M.B., 16th April, 1868, date of arrival in Annesley Bay, vide certificate; Keith, M.B., 16th April, 1868.

FURLONGS.—The following officers obtained furlough to Europe on m.c. in August:—Captain Blew, thirty days from date of departure, to proceed to Bombay, preparatory to obtaining a final certificate to Europe; Captain Knapp, 46th Foot, to proceed to England—this officer is not available for duty with troops, and will, on arrival, report himself to the Adjutant-general, Horse Guards; Second Captain Lluellyn, 14th Brigade R.A., from date of embarkation to Jan. 10, 1869, to England, on urgent private affairs.

OFFICE ALLOWANCES OF BRIGADE-MAJORS.—With reference to G. O. of 12th March, 1867, fixing the office allowances of Divisional Assistants, Adjutants General, and Brigade Majors, it has been decided by the Government of India that those allowances must cover all expenses incidental to travelling on duty, except by rail or steamer, when free passages will be granted to the officers and such clerks as are absolutely required to accompany them. This order supersedes any existing orders on this subject, and is applicable to Assistant Quartermasters General of Divisions.

BOMBAY MARINE.—The following arrangements by the superintendent of marine are confirmed:—Mr. Carter was appointed second officer of H.M.'s hulk Semiramis from June 8, 1868, vice Mr. Roberts, transferred to the Earl Canning on the 7th idem; Mr. Fisher, first officer of H.M.'s steamer May Frere, R.M., performed the duties of store accountant of that vessel from December 1, 1866, to October 31, 1867; Mr. Young (late master R.N.), was appointed third officer of H.M.'s steamer May Frere from June 27, 1868; Mr. Clarke, superintendent third officer of the Amberwitch, was transferred to the Earl Canning for duty in the same capacity on July 7, 1868, to complete complement.

A SAD ACCIDENT.—We very much regret (says the Poona Observer) to announce that Lieutenant Speke, of H.M.'s 46th Regiment, met with a lamentable accident on Saturday last, August 22, which resulted in the loss of one of his legs. It appears that the unfortunate young officer had been taking a walk before mess with two of his brother officers, and on returning towards Ghoreporie about six P.M., attempted to jump over a small nullah, at the back of the Wallowrie Lines; in doing so his foot slipped, and he was thrown to the bottom of the nullah with considerable violence. At first he merely asked for assistance, as he believed he had only sprained his ankle—but, on one of his companions descending to help him to his feet, it was discovered that his leg was fractured below the knee in two places. He was conveyed to his house as rapidly as possible—where it was pronounced by the doctors to be necessary to amputate the limb, which was happily accomplished with safety, and the sufferer is now, we are glad to say, doing well.

THE COMMISSARIAT DEPARTMENT AND THE LATE ABYSSINIAN EXPEDITION.—We have received a somewhat lengthy appeal from inspectors in the Commissariat department, who, it seems, have been refused the batta to which they consider themselves entitled as part of the Abyssinian Field Force. We do not think it necessary to publish this appeal; but cannot forbear calling attention to their case, as it seems a very hard one. These men state that they were among the first to land at Zoula, having proceeded thither under Lieutenant Shewell, and that they laboured constantly and untiringly in the landing and forwarding of stores, till the end of the campaign. Thereafter, they appear to have been cut adrift, without any further acknowledgment of their services than their pay up to date, and a good certificate from their superior officer. Now they find it impossible to procure other employment, and have their claims for six months' batta disallowed. If the facts are as stated, these inspectors have good reason to complain of the treatment they have experienced. We trust, however, that in their anxiety to receive the donation money due to them they have rushed straight upon the military pay office and lodged their demand, without making application in due form, and that they will yet receive their batta in due course.—Times of India.

DEPARTURE OF DR. BIRDWOOD.—In this country, where disinterested and public-spirited citizens are the exception, and where we are all apt to neglect the public weal in the absorbing demands of private gain, the departure of Dr. Birdwood by the P. and O. steamer becomes a loss to the whole community of Bombay. Dr. Birdwood is compelled to return to England to seek that health which he has not been able to retain here; and we venture to say, within the limits of truth, that there is scarcely one among us whose absence will be more felt or whose place will be more difficult to fill. For many years past his name has been associated with every public-spirited movement in this city, and the restless zeal and untiring self-denial with which he has devoted himself always to any object in which he took an interest have laid the community under obligations which it can only repay by remembering him in the future as one of its most conspicuous and unselfish benefactors. A man himself of wide scientific culture, with such a close and accurate knowledge of details in some branches of science as to enable him among other things to prepare a laborious "Catalogue of the Vegetable Products of Western India," and with enough of philosophy in his composition to prevent him on the one hand from dwelling in that arid region of details where mediocrities find fitting pasture for their intellects, and on the other to lift him into those wider scientific generalisations which are in these days becoming the axioms of a new school of thought among half the thinking men of Europe, he has mainly, as a matter of course, concentrated his energies on objects calculated to promote education and intelligence among each of the two great sections into which the population of Bombay is divided. It is not our purpose to rehearse the labours he has spontaneously taken upon himself in the cause of the public during his many years' residence in this city, for these are better detailed in the addresses and votes of thanks which have been adopted within the last fortnight, on the eve of his departure, by the Senate of the University, the Agricultural Society, and the Royal Asiatic Society, and which have been already published in our columns. We desire to add that no man in the community has undertaken so much gratuitous labour from the sheer love of pushing forward any worthy scheme that will benefit his fellow men, or could have performed the self-imposed task with more disinterested energy. We believe he has often sacrificed his own personal aims and opportunities in the cause of the public. He has certainly sacrificed the claims which his great intellectual powers have upon him, in order to promote the public good. These powers are perhaps too exuberant for general appreciation, but the standard of critical taste in England (if his irrepressible energy forces him into public life when his health is somewhat restored) may subdue them into calmness without a sacrifice of strength. As public spirit is always at a discount among us; we see him depart from our shores with considerable regret. It is however left us to hope that his journey to Europe may so re-establish his health that we may see him once more restored to Bombay.—Bombay Gazette.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

ADVANCES FOR BUILDING PURPOSES.

Simla, Aug. 20.—No. 806.—H.E. the Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to notify that, in the event of an officer who has obtained an advance for building purposes, or for purchasing a house, in accordance with the provisions of G.G.O. No. 985 of 1867, proceeding to Europe on leave, the regular monthly deductions in liquidation of the amount will continue to be made from his furlough pay, unless he refunds the outstanding balance before he embarks.

The amount of the monthly deductions, and of the balance still unpaid, must be clearly shown on the officer's last pay certificate.

NO-DEMAND CERTIFICATES.

Simla, Aug. 20.—No. 798.—H.E. the Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to direct that, as veterinary surgeons have public stores entrusted to their charge, they must in future, before quitting India on leave, obtain a "no-demand certificate" from the examiner of medical accounts, in the same manner as officers of the medical department.

DISCIPLINE—DOING DUTY.

Adj. Gen.'s Office, Head Qtrs., Simla, Aug. 8.—No. 252.—It appears from applications which are received from time to time in the head qtrs. offices, that many of the officers in the army imagine that they can make a convenience of the service, and be sent to do nominal duty in stations other than those where their regiments are placed.

Such applications are invariably refused, but H.E. thinks that it should be publicly made known that the existing system of the army leaves no opening for such an abuse, and that excepting on a ground of real public service officers cannot be permitted to be detached from the regiments in which they are enrolled and hold substantive appointments.

ALTERATION IN UNIFORM.

No. 257.—With reference to standing G.O. No. 114, dated April 2; the C. in C. is pleased to notify that the Govt. of India has sanctioned the following alterations in the uniform of the 16th Bengal Cav. :—

The European officers are permitted to wear a green patrol jacket and green overalls.

Colour of facings to be red instead of black.

EXCEEDING LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

No. 258.—Under instructions from Govt., Articles 50 and 51, Section XLV. Military Regulations, are cancelled, and the following substituted :—

50. Whenever an officer shall exceed 60 days' privilege leave, the circumstances of the case are to be fully reported to army head quarters, when, if the C. in C. shall be satisfied that the absence in excess of the original leave could not have been anticipated when the officer proceeded on privilege leave, leave for the period in excess will be accorded in general orders, and the officer concerned will not under these circumstances be subjected to any forfeiture of service or allowances for the term of the privilege leave, but for the period in excess he will come under the rules applicable to general leave.

51. When however the sickness or other emergency necessitating an extension could have been foreseen when the officer proceeded on privilege leave, general leave will either be granted covering the entire period of the officer's absence, such leave involving forfeiture of service and allowances to the extent prescribed by the regulations, or be refused altogether according to the merits of the case; in which latter event the officer will be looked upon as absent without leave from the date of his quitting to that of his return to his post. Privilege leave may, however, be converted into general leave with the sanction of the C. in C. or the Government.

OFFICERS' BAGGAGE ON FOREIGN SERVICE.

Simla, Aug. 20.—No. 802.—The Right Hon. the Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to sanction a scale of baggage for officers proceeding on foreign service on board Government or other steamers, whenever provided with free passages.

2. The amount of baggage must be so packed as not to exceed five cubic feet in measurement for each hundred weight allowed.

3. Staff officers not specially provided for will be allowed the amount of baggage of their army rank according to the regimental scale, with the additional allowance for the equipment of each horse accompanying them within the regulation limit.

4. The quantity of baggage allowed to regimental officers will be regulated by their regimental rank.

5. In the event of an officer proceeding by a vessel of the Peninsular and Oriental or other company, in which the amount of baggage allowed to be taken without extra charge is less than the scale now sanctioned, the officer must defray the cost for any extra quantity, and submit a bill for the amount, duly supported by the requisite vouchers.

The political agent will hold his court at the capital of H.M. the King of Burmah.

The seal shall be made under the direction of the G.G. in Council for the said court, to be engraved in Burmese and English characters, "the seal of the court of the British political agent in Burmese territory," and the same shall remain in the custody of the political agent.

The G.G. in Council further empowers the political agent to make rules to regulate the service and execution of processes issuing from his court; also to settle a table of fees to be charged to suitors for persons employed in serving the said processes.

All questions of law and fact arising in cases in the court of the political agent to be dealt with and determined according to the law as administered in the commission courts of British Burmah under Act. I. of 1863.

It shall be lawful for the political agent to submit any question arising in any cause pending before him to the Chief Court of British Burmah for decision, and in all cases where such decision has been given, the political agent will be bound to act accordingly. There shall be no appeal for any order or judgment passed by the court of the political agent.

The political agent shall keep such registers, books, and accounts, and submit to the Chief Commissioner of British Burmah and agent to the Gov. gen. of India such statements and returns of the work done in his court on the civil side as may be prescribed by the said Chief Commissioner.

The political agent shall also comply with such requisitions as may be made by the Chief Commissioner and Gov. gen.'s agent for records.

Duties of the same amount as the stamp duties prescribed by Act X. of 1862, and other Acts amending, or which may hereafter amend, the said Act, shall be enforced in the court of the political agent.

The political agent may license advocates to appear in his court for parties to suits, and allow a reasonable sum for professional services rendered in the cause, provided the aggregate amount of costs of all kinds in each suit does not exceed five per centum on the amount at which the suit is laid. No sum for professional services shall be recoverable by a licensed advocate, unless the same shall have been sanctioned on the records in the case in which the services were rendered.

The political agent may withdraw any license, either general or special, granted by him to any person to act as an advocate in his court.

CIVIL FURLOUGHS.

Simla, Aug. 17.—No. 3,414.—Under Section 12 of the Rules published in Financial Department Notification No. 533, dated June 16, 1868, the following Regulations are laid down for the disposal of applications for furlough from officers of the Bengal Civil Service, or from officers of the Madras or Bombay Civil Service employed directly under the Government of India:—

I. The Government of India will refuse furlough on private affairs to any officer when the exigencies of the public service require that he should continue at his post.

II. The Local Governments and Administrations are empowered to grant leave on medical certificate. But the grant or cancelment of such leave, or any extension of the leave granted by the Local Government, as well as the return to duty of every officer to whom such leave has been granted, must be at once reported to the Government of India in the Home Department; if the officer to whom such leave or extension of leave be granted belong to the Madras or Bombay Civil Service, similar reports will likewise be made to those Governments.

III. A registry should be kept at the office of the Secretary to the Government of India in the Home Department of all grants of furlough on medical certificate or on private affairs, of all extensions of furlough, and of all returns to duty from furlough of any kind.

IV. The Local Governments of Bengal, the North-Western Provinces and the Punjab, and all Chief Commissioners and the Commissioner of Mysore will receive and forward applications for furlough on private affairs to the Government of India.

V. If the officer belongs to the Bombay or Madras Civil Service, the Government of India will, if no objection exists, forward his application for final disposal by the Government of those Presidencies.

VI. All applications for furlough, whether on medical certificate or private affairs, should be invariably accompanied by a certificate from the local Accountant General showing that the applicant is entitled to the leave asked.

VII. The term of a furlough can only be altered with the permission of the Government under which the applicant is serving.

VIII. Every officer who obtains a furlough shall supply himself with a last pay certificate, and with a statement showing the pay which he is entitled to draw while absent. It shall be the duty of the local Accountant General to furnish these documents, and no furlough allowances will be payable without their production.

IX. A statement of the officers absent on furlough, with the date of the expiry of their respective furloughs, will be published quarterly in the Gazette of India, brought up to March 31, June 30, September 30, and December 31 of each year.

X. Every officer to whom a furlough on private affairs is granted must take such furlough, or the subsidiary leave given him in anticipation of it, within three months of the date on which the furlough was granted to him. If he do not so avail himself of it, or if he previously apply for its cancelment, the grant of furlough will be held to have lapsed and the applicant will be liable to forfeit a portion of the furlough due to him, equal to the time between the date on which his furlough was available and that on which the grant lapsed or was cancelled.

XI. Privilege leave will be granted by Local Governments, Chief Commissioners, the Departments under the Government of India, and the Commissioner of Mysore, to the officers serving under their orders.

SALARIES OF CHURCH OF SCOTLAND CHAPLAINS.

Simla, July 6.—Resolution.—The Governor General in Council observes that it is declared in Acts 3 and 4 William IV., cap. 85, sect. 102, that the ministers of the Church of Scotland at each of the presidencies in India "shall have and enjoy such salary as shall from time to time be allotted to the military chaplains," i. e., to chaplains of the Church of England "at the several presidencies."

2. According to this enactment, the salaries of chaplains of the Church of Scotland in India should be the same as those of chaplains of the Church of England, and the pensions of the two classes also should be assimilated. The Governor General in Council has, therefore, determined to recommend to the Secretary of State that the salaries of such chaplains of the Church of Scotland in India as now receive Rs. 700 per mensem should be raised to Rs. 800 from the date on which that salary was allowed to senior chaplains of the Church of England in Madras and Bombay; that, on the occurrence of vacancies, the salaries of such chaplains of the Church of Scotland in India as now receive more than Rs. 800 per mensem should be reduced to that amount; and that the rates of pension sanctioned for chaplains of the Church of England in the financial despatch from the Secretary of State, No. 32, dated Feb. 17, 1865, should be sanctioned for chaplains of the Church of Scotland also.

3. The Governor General in Council has further resolved to recommend to the Secretary of State that the senior chaplains of the Church of Scotland at the three presidencies should receive special allowances at the rates noted in the margin [Bengal, Rs. 200 per mensem; Madras and Bombay, Rs. 150], to cover their expenses as the channels of communication between the Presbyterian community and the Government, and the cost of collecting registers of births, deaths, and marriages for transmission to the Secretary of State.

Theological treatises will not be received, nor treatises containing anything obnoxious to morality. There is no other condition either as to the subject or treatment. The theme may belong to history, biography, or travel, science, art, or philosophy; it may be a work of fact or of fiction, and may be composed either in prose or verse. In short, the only condition is that the book shall subserve some useful purpose, either of instruction, entertainment, or mental discipline; that it shall be written in one or other of the current dialects, Oordoo or Hindee; and that there shall be excellence both in the style and treatment.

Neither is there any restriction as to the author, whether in respect of birth, place of education, or residence.

The reward will, as a rule, in each case be one thousand rupees; but it may be more, or it may be less, according to the merits of the work.

The Lieut. gov. will be prepared to give at least five such prizes in the coming year.

Books suitable for the women of India will be especially acceptable, and well rewarded.

The Govt. will ordinarily be prepared to aid in the publication of any meritorious work by subscribing for a number of copies. Such assistance will be exclusive of and in addition to the rewards now promised.

Any work for which a reward is sought may be submitted to the Secy. to the Govt., or to the Director of Public Instruction, or to the Principals of the Agra, Benares, Bareilly, or Ajmere Colleges.

BOMBAY BANK COMMISSION.—The Commissioners resumed their sitting yesterday, when Cowasjee Manockjee, Dossabhoj Dhunjeebhoy, and Hormusjee Nowrojee were called. Premchund Roychund was also re-examined as to the jewel account, and it appeared that according to his books the total amount expended by him in jewels was Rs. 3,32,811, which, with 1,47,000 belonging to his father, Roychund Deepchund, made a total of Rs. 4,80,000, or thereabouts. It appeared also that the land which had been deposited as security was far from fetching the price at which it had been valued. The witness also stated that accounts were kept in the Asiatic Bank in the names of persons who had no interest whatever in them, one of them turning out to be the somewhat notorious "A. B. C." account. Mr. Baker, late of the Asiatic Bank, was examined as to these accounts, and was censured by the Commission for having in a letter to the newspapers denied the statement of Premchund at a previous examination that there was such an account. Mr. Baker denied however that Mr. Morrison used to do business in that account by means of "slips" sent to the clerks below. The Commission adjourned until to-morrow.—Times of India, Sept. 1.

ROYAL ENGINEERS.—"A Despairing Sub." writes:—"You have so consistently advocated an increased rate of promotion for the two ordnance corps, that I trust you will find space to insert the suggestive facts that there are now 287 lieutenants in the Royal Engineers, and that exactly six months have elapsed since a single step occurred to relieve this intolerably long list!"—Army and Navy Gazette.

PROMOTIONS.—(India Office, Sept. 19.)—Her Majesty has been graciously pleased to command that Surgeon John Lumsdaine, Bombay Army, and First-class Veterinary Surgeon William Lamb, Bombay Army, be promoted to the ranks of Surgeon-major and Staff Veterinary Surgeon, respectively, from Aug. 15, 1868, in consideration of their valuable services with the Abyssinian Expeditionary Force.

ARRIVAL OF THE INDIA AND CHINA MAILS.—(SOUTHAMPTON, Sept. 27.)—The Peninsular and Oriental Company's steamship Tanjore, with the heavy portion of the above mails, arrived this evening. She brings thirty packages specie, value £5,838, 122 passengers, and a general cargo, including 4,873 bales raw silk, value £400,000. The Tanjore experienced bad weather throughout the voyage from Malta. From Finisterre to Ushant, squally, with heavy sea and rain; thence to Southampton heavy south-westerly gales.

SHIPPING DISASTERS.—The Riever, steamer, with mails and a valuable cargo of opium, from Calcutta to China, was totally wrecked on the 19th inst. on Preparis Reef, in the China seas. The opium alone was valued at about £300,000, but it was fully insured, and policies effected in the China marine offices. The ship Henry Moor, from Liverpool to Bombay, with a general cargo, was totally destroyed by fire on Saturday night last off the coast of Portugal. The crew were saved.

LORD NAPIER OF MAGDALA.—Lord Napier of Magdala has lately been the guest of Mr. Robert Napier, of West Shandon, on the Gareloch. His lordship was in Glasgow on Wednesday, September 23, and visited the Royal Exchange. In passing up and down the hall and on leaving the building he was loudly cheered by the members present. The gallant general subsequently visited some of the public works in the city and neighbourhood. Lord Napier will leave England next month on his return to India. By reference to our passenger list it will be seen that he has engaged a passage by one of the P. and O. steamers.

TROOPS FOR INDIA.—H.M.'s Indian relief screw troopship Serapis, Capt. John Soady, sailed from Portsmouth on September 20, on the resumption of her troop-carrying duties between Alexandria and Spithead. She is to call at Queenstown, and to embark there the 52nd Infantry for conveyance to Malta, to relieve the 1st battalion of the 8th Infantry, the latter going on to Alexandria in the Serapis, en route for India. The Serapis had on board the following officers, troops, and general military passengers:—To join head-quarters of 52nd on embarkation at Queenstown from depot—Lieuts. J. E. C. Doveton and Henry Syngé, and Ensign L. H. Cockran. For India—Lieut. E. J. Wynne, R.E.; Lieut. S. Howard, R.E.; Mrs. Howard and child; Ensign E. H. Derman, 1st battalion 1st Royals Infantry; Capt. H. EMPLOYMENT OF SOLDIERS IN MAKING ROADS.—We learn from India, through a private channel, that the system introduced by Lord Strathnairn of employing the troops in India in the formation of roads is likely to be carried out, not only in a more extensive degree, but also upon an improved principle. It has hitherto been the case that such labour has been to a certain extent of a voluntary character, and although each man has been paid for his work, still there has been but a limited benefit derived from the system. In future, if our private letters prove correct, it is probable that the services of the troops with the pickaxe and shovel will be compulsory during peace, the men being paid, as heretofore, for their work. In that case the effect doubtless would be not only that the men will be kept in better health by being set to work in the hills, instead of remaining in the plains, but they would also be drilled into the use of the pick and the shovel to an extent which would make them infinitely more useful for the duties which, in a recent issue, we pointed out would most likely in the future form a considerable portion of the employment of an infantry force in the field, namely, for throwing up extemporised entrenchments in the manner which has been put in practice in the Camps of Chalons and Coblenz. Sir William Mansfield will deserve the greatest credit for the statesmanlike manner in which, we are informed, he has been endeavouring for some time past to carry out this change. It appears to us likely to effect four objects. First, an improvement in the health of the troops; secondly, the formation of good roads; thirdly, the pecuniary benefit of the soldier; and, fourthly, his vast improvement as a combatant, from his being initiated into the use of the pickaxe and shovel.—Broad Arrow.

ABYSSINIAN PRISONS.—The prison-house, a common gaol for political offenders, thieves, and murderers, consisted of five or six huts inclosed by a strong fence, and surrounded by the private dwellings of the more wealthy prisoners and guards, extending from the eastern slope of the hillock to the edge of the precipice and to the open space towards the south. At the time of our captivity these houses cannot have contained less than 660 prisoners. Of these, about 80 died of remittent fever, 175 were released by his Majesty, 307 executed, and 91 owed their liberty to the stormers of Magdala. The prison rules were in some respects very severe, in others mild and foreign to our civilised ideas. At sunset every prisoner was ordered into the central inclosure. As they passed the gate they were counted and their fetters examined. The women had a hut for themselves; only a late arrangement, however, as before they had to sleep in the same houses as the men. The space was very limited, and the prisoners were packed in like herrings in a barrel. Abyssinians themselves, hard-hearted as they are, described the scene at night as something fearful. The huts, crowded to excess, were close, the atmosphere fetid, the stench unbearable. There lay, side by side, the poor, starved vagabond, chained hands and feet, and often with a large forked piece of wood several yards long fixed round his neck, and the warrior who had bled in many a hard-won fight, the governor of provinces—nay, the sons of kings and conquered rulers themselves. In the centre, the guards, keeping candles lighted all night, laughed or played some noisy game, indifferent to the sufferings of the unfortunates they watched. At day dawn, always about six A.M. in that latitude, the prison door was opened, and those who were lucky enough to possess any, repaired to the huts they had erected in the vicinity of the sleeping-houses, while the poorer crawled about the prison inclosure, awaiting their pancake loaf with all the impatience of hungry men, just kept from immediate starvation by the bounty of the Emperor. Others strolled about in couples, begging from their more favoured companions, or, when leave was granted, went from house to house imploring alms in the name of the "Saviour of the World." The prison guards were the greatest ruffians I have ever seen. They had been for so many years in contact with misery in its worst shape that the last spark of human feeling had died out in their callous hearts. Instead of showing compassion or pity for their prisoners, many of them innocent victims of a low treachery, they added to their misery by the harshness and cruelty of their conduct. Had a chief received at last a small sum of money from his distant province, he was soon made aware that he must satisfy the greed of his rapacious gaolers. But that was nothing compared to the moral tortures they inflicted on their prisoners. Many of them had been for years confined on the amba, and had brought their families to reside near them. Woe to the woman who would not listen to the solicitations of these infamous wretches; threatened, and even beaten, few indeed of the sorrowful wives and daughters held out; others willingly met advances; and when the chief, the man of rank, or the wealthy merchant left his day-house, he knew that his wife would immediately receive her chosen lover, or, what was still more heartrending, a man she despised but feared.—Dr. Blanc's "Narrative of Captivity in Abyssinia."

THE FUTURE SEAT OF INDIAN GOVERNMENT.

The Broad Arrow by no means professes itself a devoted champion of Simlah. The relative advantages of one hill station for a summer residence as against another, seem, indeed, to us a matter best left to the decision of those whom it most immediately concerns. But to institute a change of system, avowedly based on the assumption that Calcutta is to continue indefinitely the seat of Government in India, does appear to us to indicate an extraordinary blindness to the manifest tendency of events. Our Eastern Empire has outgrown the circumstances that rendered "the City of Palaces" its natural capital. Recent changes render constant communication between the Indian Government and England more and more indispensable, and the door for such communication is Bombay. If there are objections—and we believe there are—to making Bombay the political, as it is already the commercial, capital of India, policy would yet suggest that some more central position has greater claims for that honour than a place like Calcutta at the other extremity of the country. From this point of view alone much might be said for a transfer to one of the great cities of Hindostan Proper, Agra, or Allahabad, which latter place will in the course, we believe, of another year, by the completion of the railway between it and Jubbulpore, become the centre of Upper and Central India. We ourselves however should give the preference to Agra. We have heard men who have closely studied the native character assert, sentimental as it may sound, that it is a great mistake, in dealing with an impressionable race like the Hindoos, to throw away the moral effect that would be produced by the Viceroy visibly bearing sway in the very seat of Aurangzeb and Shah Jehan. Calcutta is a thing of yesterday, a place for which the Hindoo entertains the smallest veneration, and is moreover far too much associated with memories of our weakness and humiliation. Besides, it is the North-west, Oude and the Punjab, that really tasks the energies of Government, not Bengal, which is as firmly settled under our rule as Middlesex.

IMPORTANT HISTORICAL WORKS.

Just published, in Two thick Volumes, demy 8vo., price £1. 12s.,

LIVES OF THE ENGLISH CARDINALS, from NICHOLAS BREAKSPEAR (Pope Adrian IV.) to THOMAS WOLSEY, Cardinal Legate. Including Historical Notices of the Papal Court. By FOLKESTONE WILLIAMS, Author of "Court and Times of James I.," "Court and Times of Charles I.," "Memoirs of Sophia Dorothea," &c.

Scarcely one adequate biography exists in print of "the Princes of the Church" of English birth; and when they are named collectively by their own countrymen, or foreign writers, they are briefly catalogued—frequently with doubtful incidents and questionable dates; nevertheless, the majority attained the highest honours, spiritual and temporal, and were engaged in some of the most important transactions in European history. It has, therefore, been considered that an acceptable service might be rendered to students by collecting the trustworthy details of Bale, Pits, Leland, Godwin, Tanner, Dugdale, and similar explorers in the same field of inquiry, adding such notices as may be gathered from the annals of the popes and cardinals, Baronius, Ciaconius, Aubrey, Spoudanus, &c.; from the numerous monkish chroniclers, from Hemmingford to Jocelin de Brakelonde, as well as from contemporary correspondence; and combining with them new facts from the researches of modern historians, such as Paulli, Neander, Dollinger, Ranke, Cardella, Sismondi, Guizot, Lingard, Milman, Brewer, Giles, &c., &c.

Whilst tracing the development of the papal system, care has been taken to exhibit its influence upon society, especially at Rome, Avignon, or wherever the Pontifical Court resided. As members of what may be called the Privy Council of the Pope, each of the English cardinals who chose to remain at the seat of government assisted in its administration. Many were employed as diplomats, or took a prominent part in the great councils, called from time to time to remedy evils then afflicting the Holy See; almost all were members of the hierarchy, in one or other of the principal branches of the Roman Apostolic Church, and not a few possessed almost unlimited authority at home in secular employments.

HISTORY OF CIVILISATION IN THE FIFTH CENTURY. Translated, by permission, from the French of A. FREDERIC OZANAM, late Professor of Foreign Literature to the Faculty of Letters at Paris. By ASHLEY C. GLYN, B.A., of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law.

"Mr. Glyn's translation from Ozanam deserves high praise, and will, we hope, be cordially welcomed."—The Month.

"M. Ozanam's work, when not warped by ecclesiastical assumptions, is a valuable repository of facts and observations, relating to a period of deep historic interest."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"Every ray is collected, as it were, by a lens and thrown upon the Sacred text. The work is so interesting, that it is no easy matter to lay it down. The translation is as easy to read as if it were an original book."—Weekly Register.

"This book constitutes a very valuable addition to English Catholic literature."—Dublin Review.
"This book abounds in wise and interesting teachings."—Examiner.

Third Edition. One Volume, 8vo., with Map, price 12s.,

HISTORY OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE IN INDIA. By EDWARD THORNTON, Esq. Containing a copious Glossary of Indian Terms, and a complete Chronological Index of Events, to aid the aspirant for Public Examinations.

"Mr. Thornton is master of a style of great perspicuity and vigour, always interesting, and frequently rising into eloquence. His power of painting character and of bringing before the eye of the reader the events which he relates, is remarkable; and if the knowledge of India can be made popular, we should say his is the pen to effect it."—Times.

"The writer evinces diligence and research into original authorities; his style is easy, and the intrinsic interest of the important events of Indian history is thus increased by a popular and amusing narrative."—Edinburgh Evening Courant.

In Two Vols., 8vo., price 16s. each,

THE HISTORY OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE IN INDIA from the Appointment of Lord Hardinge to the Death of Lord Canning. By LIONEL JAMES TROTTER, late 2nd Bengal Fusiliers.

The First Volume of this History embraces the period from Lord Hardinge's appointment, in 1844, to the retirement of the Marquis Dalhousie, in 1856.

The Second Volume commences with the arrival of Lord Canning in India, in 1856, and closes with his lordship's death, in 1862. This being the most eventful period in the annals of the East India Company, including the Mutiny, great pains have been taken in its narration.

In One Vol., 8vo., pp. 1015, with Map, price £1. 1s.,

A GAZETTEER OF INDIA, Compiled chiefly from the Records at the India Office. By EDWARD THORNTON, Esq.

The chief objects in view in compiling this Gazetteer are:—

- 1st. To fix the relative position of the various cities, towns, and villages, with as much precision as possible, and to exhibit with the greatest practicable brevity all that is known respecting them; and,
- 2nd. To note the various countries, provinces, or territorial divisions, and to describe the physical characteristics of each, together with their statistical, social, and political circumstances.

To these are added minute descriptions of the principal rivers and chains of mountains; thus presenting to the reader, within a brief compass, a mass of information which cannot otherwise be obtained, except from a multiplicity of volumes and manuscript records. The work, in short, may be regarded as an epitome of all that has been written and published respecting the territories under the government or political superintendence of the British power in India.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S (Ex. Army Med. Staff)

CHLORODYNE

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE. The Public, therefore, are cautioned against using any other than DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

Remedial Uses and Action.

THIS INVALUABLE REMEDY produces quiet, refreshing sleep, relieves pain, calms the system, restores the deranged functions, and stimulates healthy action of the secretions of the body, without creating any of those unpleasant results attending the use of Opium. Old and young may take it at all hours and times when requisite. Thousands of persons testify to its marvellous good effects and wonderful cures, while medical men extol its virtues most extensively, using it in great quantities in the following diseases:—

Diseases in which eminently useful—Cholera, Dysentery, Diarrhoea, Colics, Coughs, Asthma, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Whooping Cough, Cramp, Hysteria, &c.

Those exhaustive diseases—Fever, Ague—so common in tropical climates, are rapidly arrested, and the cold stage in a few moments checked by a timely dose, when warmth and a general glow of the system is established, and comfort secured.

As a Sedative, Neurotic, and Antispasmodic, it is unequalled by any other known Medicine, and not to be surpassed in its specific effects.

Extracts from Medical Opinions.

The Right Hon. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians and J. T. Davenport that he had received information to the effect that the only remedy of any service in Cholera was Chlorodyne.—See Lancet, Dec. 31, 1864.

From A. Montgomery, Esq., late Inspector of Hospitals, Bombay.—"Chlorodyne is a most valuable remedy in Neuralgia, Asthma, and Dysentery. To it I fairly owe my restoration to health after eighteen months' severe suffering, and when other remedies had failed."

Dr. Lowe, Medical Missionary in India, reports (Dec., 1865) that in nearly every case of Cholera in which Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne was administered, the patient recovered.

Mrs. Forbes, wife of the Chaplain at Paris.—"I cannot speak too highly of Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne; I have not in any single instance been disappointed with the result, even in aggravated cases of Indian Cholera."

Extract from Medical Times, Jan. 12, 1866.—"Chlorodyne is prescribed by scores of orthodox medical practitioners. Of course it would not thus be singularly popular did it not 'supply a want and fill a place.'"

Extract from the General Board of Health, London, as to its efficacy in Cholera.—"So strongly are we convinced of the immense value of this remedy, that we cannot too forcibly urge the necessity of adopting it in all cases."

CHLORODYNE, the Great Remedy for CHOLERA.—See Report in the Times, Sept. 6, from the Malta Correspondent, who states, August 24th, that "109 cases and eighty-one deaths occurred at Messina; 50,000 people fled from the town, which is in a most deplorable condition; that Chlorodyne has been found most efficacious as a remedy, and a number of persons are reported to have been saved by its use."

Now as there are various imitations sold under the name of Chlorodyne, containing Indian Hemp, Morphia, &c., ingredients highly adverse to the cure of Cholera, the public are cautioned against the use of any compound under the name of Chlorodyne, unless it bears the name of Dr. J. Collis Browne, who coined the word Chlorodyne to designate his wonderful discovery, which he fully tested for many years in her Majesty's Service before introducing it to the public, the wonderful success of which has given rise to various imitations totally different to genuine Chlorodyne. See the decision of Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood, reported in the Times, July 13th, 1864.

The extraordinary medical reports on the efficacy of Chlorodyne renders it a subject of most vital importance that the public should obtain the genuine, which is now sold under the protection of the Government of Great Britain, authorising a stamp, bearing the words "Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne," without which none is genuine. Sold in bottles, 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d., by all Chemists. Sole Manufacturer, J. T. DAVENPORT, 33, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury, London.

INDIAN POLITY: a View of the System of Administration in India. By GEORGE CHESNEY, Accountant-general to the Government of India, Public Works Department; Fellow of the University of Calcutta.

"Major Chesney's book not only gives a complete view of the way in which India has been and now is governed, but it also suggests the course to be adopted with regard to many matters in which we all know that some change or other is imperative."—Imperial Review.

"Major Chesney's 'Indian Polity' is really what it professes to be, a manual for everyone who wishes to learn how we govern India, what are our relations with our subjects and our neighbours, what are the defects and merits of our government."—Morning Star.

"The book is so fair and just towards all classes, that it will make a strong impression upon the minds of those who have given any attention to Indian affairs. To those who have not given this attention, but who are desirous of understanding the subject properly, we can strongly recommend Major Chesney as a guide."—Pall Mall Gazette.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, September 8; Agra, September 5; Calcutta, September 3; Madras, September 2.

Matters on the Hazara frontier remain much as they were. There has been no fighting and no enemy to follow. The Hussunzais have vanished from the scene as abruptly as Catiline did from Rome; and our troops are still waiting for the final order to advance or disperse. Some say that nothing further is to be done. Others declare quite as positively that the forward movement was to begin in the middle of September. One mysterious correspondent of the Delhi Gazette names the day for prudence sake in Latin, which the still more prudent editor declines to print, lest some traitor from our side of the frontier should translate it into Pathan for the benefit of his friends on the other. A little further on the same caution leaves a blank instead of the name of the place from which operations were to be begun. In another week or two however we may expect to know the truth. It seems absurd to suppose that 20,000 men have been ordered out in hot haste for the purpose of paying off a few hundred robbers, who were sure to take to their heels on much slighter provocation. In all likelihood the weather has had something to do with the delay. At any rate the 6th Foot had some sixty men struck down with heat apoplexy on the march up from Rawul Pindi, although not more than eight or nine died. In spite of weather however the 20th Punjabies marched in eleven days from Lahore to Abbottabad without losing a man from the heat or wet. They swung along at the rate of more than twenty miles a day; a very creditable feat even for natives on their own ground.

ONE informant hears of the probable annexation of the whole country from Hazara to the Indus, "which, with the Cherat range in the Peshawar Valley, would do very well for the present." We imagine that it would.

OF course there was not a word of truth in the rumoured engagement between a part of our force and the hill-men, in which engagement General Wilde himself was said to have been wounded. There has been no fighting since Colonel Rothney's short and successful brush with the enemy. Preparations for a forward move on our part are certainly going on, to judge by the bustle along the roads from Peshawar and Lahore. "A very nice force," we are told, is being massed at Manserah, about sixteen miles beyond Abbottabad.

THE Indian Press in general has nothing pleasant to say about the Viceroy elect. The Bombay Gazette regards his appointment as a reward for "sheer importunity," and charges Mr. Disraeli with having sacrificed the interests of India to party purposes. The Times of India for once agrees with the Gazette. It finds in "the mere fact of Lord Mayo being chiefly known as a thorough thick-and-thin partisan a sufficient reason against his eligibility." A man of Sir S. Northcote's eminence would have commanded the respect and probably secured "the cordial co-operation of political adversaries." But it foresees only trouble and confusion "with such a downright statesman as Mr. Bright at the India House and the Irish earl at Calcutta," and hopes that the difficulty will be got over by the coming ministry in "one bold stroke of enmity rather than in prolonged obstructiveness." The Friend of India, looking at the appointment as an undeniable job, and protesting against the selection of a mere partisan to fill the place of Warren Hastings, Wellesley, and Dalhousie, nevertheless avers that "India will extend to Lord Mayo if not a warm welcome, at least a generous courtesy," and that all classes there will certainly accord him fair play. According to the Madras Athenaeum "there is no doubt that his appointment to this high post is not quite what people out here like." At the same time "it remains for people in India only to be thankful for what is arranged for them by a paternal Government at home. Lord Mayo may do something to warrant his having got this prize." That is a hopeful frame of mind, which we for our part have no idea of unsettling.

OUR countrymen and the natives also are looking forward with some eagerness to Prince Alfred's long rumoured visit. They will not have to wait much longer now, as the Galatea is on the eve of starting, and will call on India by the way. Among the natives there is even a manifest desire to keep the Duke in their country as a fit successor to Sir John Lawrence. They yearn for a genuine scion of the Royal house that furnishes a common sovereign for England and India. Your regular Viceroy is well enough, according to one of the native journals; but "the same amount of love and gratitude will never be given to any Viceroy that would be given to a Prince. A Viceroy is but a working man, but a Prince is a Prince. And if Hindostanics make so much of Europeans of no very exalted rank, what would they not do for a Prince?" Besides, as the same journal quaintly remarks, "by having a Prince for Viceroy, the Government of England will be spared the cost of his pension, as the Prince who draws the allowances of a Viceroy ought to find them sufficient for his needs."

CALCUTTA has lost an eminent citizen and Bengal a wealthy zemindar by the death of Baboo Prosunno Coomar Tagore, c.s.r. The head of a very ancient-Hindoo house, born to great wealth, and blest with superior talent, Prosunno received a good English education, and early devoted himself to literary pursuits. Before he was twenty years old he had joined with Romanath Tagore in bring out an English paper called the Hindoo Reformer. His wealth being diminished by unlucky speculations, he took to studying for the Bar, and soon retrieved his losses by practising as a pleader in the Sudder Court. As Government Pleader he attracted the notice of Lord Dalhousie, who made him clerk-assistant to the Legislative Council. His knowledge of the land-tenures of India ensured his prospects of rising yet higher. He became in due time a member of the Bengal Council, received the Star of India at the Agra Durbar of 1866, and last year was made a member of the Viceroy's Legislative Council. As a Fellow of Calcutta University he took a warm interest in the spread of education, and gave all possible encouragement to Sanscrit studies. The British Indian Association owns him as one of its founders. His son's conversion to Christianity somewhat cooled his zeal in the sphere of religious reform, and he died, it seems, an orthodox Hindoo. "His munificent gifts and charities" are named in one journal as familiar facts; but according to another his tenants regarded him as a hard landlord. What his son may think of him, we can hardly guess; but if it is true that he has been disinherited for his Christianity, we hope he will be Christian enough to forgive his father the unkind act.

THE last sitting of the Bombay Bank Commission was fixed for the 9th September, the day after the departure of the mail. In the sittings of the previous week Messrs. Lidderdale, Stuart, Steele, and Baker were among the witnesses re-examined. Mr. G. Norman, of the Civil Service, sometime a Government director of the Bank, gave some pertinent evidence touching the real value of Premchund's landed and house property, and acquitted the commercial directors of keeping information back from their colleagues. It is worth noting that Mr. Norman for one received no instructions by word or letter from any one when he came to take his seat in the Bank direction. Mr. Tyndall, a Bank auditor in 1865, had the courage to insist that the payment of a dividend that year out of capital ought to be regarded by the experience not of the present but of a past time, when cotton seemed likely to rise again and no one doubted the prudence of a step which nowadays might seem wholly unwarrantable. Mr. Tyndall's evidence further shows the futility of bank audits under the present system. So long as the balance-sheet looks all right, any attempt of the auditor to get at the value of the securities held would only "be resented as an impertinence;" and auditors are but men.

WHAT is to be done with the Bengal Zemindars? They held a great meeting in Calcutta on the 2nd September, to consider the proposed cess for roads and education. With very few exceptions the enlightened gentlemen present scoffed at the bare idea of contributing £75,000 a-year towards improving the minds of their tenants and the condition of their roads. One or two speakers, including the Rev. J. Long, on the side of the ryots and fairplay, were hooted down; and the meeting resolved with nearly one accord that the present mode of voluntary schooling with public grants in aid was the best, that the landholders of Bengal were quite as enlightened as their neighbours, that the proposed cess on land was a flat breach of a solemn covenant between Bengal and Great Britain, and that the duty of improving roads and other such means of popular advancement rests entirely with the government of a civilised country. These gentlemen, who contribute less than any other class in India to the public revenue—for the land assessment is no tax at all—and begrudge all help to their washed out and starving tenantry, have now given us a fresh reason for doubting the perfect wisdom of Lord Cornwallis's Permanent Settlement. Is there no way of getting out of that mess without flagrant breach of "a solemn covenant?"

THE air of India seems unfavourable to paymasters of British troops. There is always some piece of scandal just coming up or dying away about some member of that unfortunate body. Capt. Cunningham succeeds Capt. Smales, and is presently followed by Capt. Lawes, of H.M.'s 90th Foot. This officer has lately been undergoing his trial before a military court at Subathoo, for fraudulently misapplying and covering by false statements the fraudulent misapplication of public moneys placed under his charge. In the days of the old Company's paymasters one never heard of these exposures. Was it because the old system of supervision was more lax, or that regimental paymasters have more temptations thrown in their way, or that the regimental system of keeping accounts leaves a loophole for the oppression of an obnoxious paymaster?

THE last of Azim Khan's troops have been driven out of the Bala Hissar of Cabul. Azim Khan himself seems to have made one last despairing effort to retake Ghuzni, but was beaten off with heavy loss by Shere Ali's brave son, Mohammad Yakoob Khan. On his way towards Turkistan a letter received from Abdurrahman Khan induced him to waive for a time his further retreat; and the last news left him hanging about the frontier with the remnant of his troops, in hopes either of coming to terms with his rival, or else regaining his throne with his nephew's help. The nephew however is still quiescent.

SIR HENRY RAWLINSON has exchanged his seat in Parliament for a seat in the India Council, of which he was a conspicuous member in other days. What Parliament loses from his Indian experience the India-office will gain. As he cannot fill both places at once, we may hope that he has chosen the more useful part; and that some of the new Anglo-Indian candidates will find their way into the coming Parliament in his stead. Sir Frederic Halliday, whose appointment we had just time to mention last week, was the first Lieutenant-governor of Bengal, under the new arrangement of 1854. Having been one of Lord Dalhousie's ablest subalterns, he afterwards won the highest praises from Lord Canning for his "invaluable aid and support during the whole time of trial through which we have passed." In thanking Sir Frederic on his departure in 1859, Lord Canning went on to write:—"Those thanks are very warm and earnest, as they ought to be; for if I had not felt that in Bengal I had your watchfulness and your sound, experienced, vigorous judgment to lean upon, I should have had much greater anxiety about this part of India than after the first few weeks I ever felt."

THE minds of many anxious people, including the soldier whose letter will be found elsewhere, will doubtless be gladdened by the announcement of a third instalment of the Banda Prize being ready for distribution from the India Office.

ACCORDING to a weekly contemporary, Captain Cunningham, the paymaster who last year was sentenced to five years' penal servitude for embezzling public moneys at Rawal-Pindi, has begun the proceedings which even before his conviction he threatened to take against his judges and Sir W. Mansfield. It seems that actions have already been opened by him against all concerned, and that thirteen writs are already on their way to India, to be served on the members of the Court-martial and on the chief who confirmed their sentence. Whether the Court's award was justified by the evidence, we cannot say; but the prisoner had some grounds for complaining of the length of time, ten or eleven months, that elapsed between his arrest and the trial; and no doubt he felt himself aggrieved at the Court's rejection of some evidence which tended to impeach the credit of witnesses for the prosecution, but which the Court and Sir W. Mansfield agreed in deeming irrelevant. If the story now circulating in the clubs be true, Captain Cunningham's case will become as great a bone of public controversy as that of Paymaster Smales. If he has been unfairly punished—and we cannot venture to assume that he has not—we can only hope that he may succeed in re-establishing his innocence now.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

WEDNESDAY, October 7, 1868.

THE MYSTERY OF THE HAZARA CAMPAIGN.

THE Hazara business has blown over, we are told; but the public hardly as yet comprehends what brought it on. Was the attack of the Hussunzaies—a tribe who have never yet mustered more than 600 fighting men at one time, the sole Alpha and Omega of “the difficulty?” If so, what could have induced Government to assemble a force in the Agroah Valley, larger than that which landed at Annesley Bay last year? Surely so many European regiments armed with Sniders, so many regiments of Goorkas, Punjabees, and others, backed up by mountain batteries and cavalry, could not be concentrated there solely and simply for the suppression of some hundreds of ill-armed fanatics! The Black Mountain may be a strong position, but Colonel Mackeson scaled its crest, and scattered the Hussunzaies to the winds with less than 900 men, none of whom were armed with Sniders.

One is therefore driven to the conclusion that the army of Hazara—for surely the splendid force under General Wilde merits that appellation—is (or was, for there are reports that it has been already ordered to be broken up) massed amidst the Hazara hills for some other purpose, and with an eye to some more serious eventuality, than the punishment of a rather small and insignificant Pathan tribe. Even supposing that some considerable portion of the Chungulzies (who are a large and important clan), a few of whom are said to have been seen among the marauders upon our border, coming from their rather distant territory across the Indus, should make common cause with the Hussunzaies, surely the force brought together is preposterously large for the occasion, especially when we recollect that the powerful Tunawullee Chief of Umb, whose country joins that of the Black Mountain, is bound by the tenure under which he holds his land to resent any infraction of our frontier, when called upon to do so. If this be so, some danger must have been foreseen by Government, of which the public and the press are ignorant. What was it? The general state of politics in the country lying upon the Yusufzai border does not point to the probability of much combination in that quarter at present. The peoples of Swat and Boneyr, the most formidable of its inhabitants, seem at loggerheads among themselves. The old “Pope of Swat”—the Akhoond—is said to have lost much of his influence, and to be himself in his dotage. The fanatic colony of Hindustanees in the Judoon country, as far as the Indian public know, make no sign, and are supposed to be in anything but flourishing circumstances; and it seems preposterous to credit the individual who calls himself Prince Feroze Shah, and who is reported to be located somewhere in the Swat district, with influence or money sufficient to instigate an outbreak.

What was it then? The two most powerful causes which operate to excite these tribes for good or evil are—their religion and money; but the first, which is better perhaps described as religious bigotry, could not be suddenly acted upon, so as to drive them to make war upon us, unless either we had offended their pious sensibilities in some new way, or somebody else had persuaded them that we had done so. The first we have not done, and in the second case an agent is requisite—who is he? Again, a supply of money, with the promise of more, would at any time be sufficient in all probability to set any or all of these border tribes in motion, and to cause the formation of a combination against us; here again the necessity for a primary cause becomes apparent.

Whether Government can assign such the public is unaware; meanwhile every one probably has an opinion as to the motive which operated to induce Sir J. Lawrence to resort to the prompt and vigorous measures of the last few weeks; we certainly have ours. But as each succeeding mail must be expected authoritatively to solve the mystery and to set the question at rest, it would be perhaps unwise to hazard a suggestion—which after all is only a suggestion—and which before this appears in print may possibly be proved to be a mistaken one.

HOW TO KEEP SOLDIERS OUT OF MISCHIEF.

SIR CHARLES STAVELEY and several other officers of the British army have lately been edified by the spectacle of a mimic campaign waged by large bodies of Prussian troops near Berlin, and again at Stettin. Under the eyes of the Crown Prince and his guests the latter force, about 13,000 strong, was manœuvred without tents in the open country for three days, one half acting against the other without any preconceived plan of operations. At Landesburg, near Berlin, the same process was carried out under the same conditions by an army of 16,000 men of all arms. In both instances the troops had to bivouac every night in the open. The Englishmen were agreeably struck with all they saw, with the martial bearing of the men, their steadiness under drill, their rapid movements on the march, the splendid figures and thorough efficiency both of horse and foot. Young men of less than four years' service did ample justice, we are told, to the excellent leading of officers thoroughly conversant with their duties.

It is to be hoped that the lesson thus learnt will bear some little fruit in this country and, let us add, in India also. Our soldiers indeed are probably drilled hard enough after a fashion. They have their battalion and company parades ad nauseam. They fire away endless rounds of blank cartridge. Of guard mounting and sentry duties they get a sufficient share. Brigade exercise is not quite unknown. On field days at Aldershot and Chatham a good deal of dust is kicked up in the faces of wondering spectators; there is much banging of field-pieces, and not a few saddles are emptied in the inevitable charge of cavalry. But who ever hears of two generals taking out their divisions for a regular game of military chess that may last for two or three days; each side doing its best to deceive and outmanœuvre the other? And how many of our commanders could cut a decent figure in such a game, and what proportion of British officers could handle a battalion in the way these Prussian officers are trained to do?

If there be certain difficulties in the way of moving troops at home across country, India at any rate offers “ample room and verge enough” for field exercises of the Prussian sort. But even there the opportunity is sadly neglected. Lord Frederick FitzClarence, if we remember rightly, did once or twice attempt a peaceful illustration of the great game of war. But since his departure from Bombay his favourite innovations seem to have found no later advocate, and the old routine has resumed its reign. Sir Sydney Cotton once tried hard to make the cold-weather encampment at Umballa an occasion for manœuvring large bodies of troops across country. But his urgent entreaties were disregarded, and the finest practice-ground in the world remains unfamiliar to the soldiers in the Lahore division.

Perhaps the Prussian soldier has quite as much work as is good for him. Be that as it may, he has all the less time for indulging in the vices begotten of too much leisure. The British soldier certainly beats him at drinking. It is not pleasant to learn from Colonel Henderson's Report on Military Prisons that crime in the army has increased nearly threefold in the last thirteen years. Of the offences recorded by far the greatest number are connected with drunkenness, and the older soldiers, who commonly have the greatest leisure, are very much the worst offenders in this respect. Such revelations speak for themselves. Give the soldier more employment and he will naturally find less temptation to turn himself into a hog or a ruffian. Under a proper system, the British soldier would be enabled to keep himself out of mischief and to save the country a large part of its yearly expenditure on the army. But no serious effort has yet been made to turn him to so good an account. In this, as in some other directions, it is India that shows England the way to do better. There the cultivation of soldiers' gardens by the soldiers themselves has already been developed into a regular system of reproductive labour, beneficial alike to the soldier and the State. New rules for the due maintenance and extension of the system have lately been issued by the Government of Bombay. There are two sorts of gardens, the regimental and the company. In the former the men work at fixed rates for the benefit of the Commissariat; in the latter they work for their own; selling the produce to the Commissariat and the Regimental Messes. The Government furnishes sites for the garden; the Barrack Department finds tools and puts the ground in due order for the first start; the Public Works Department looks after the water supply, and the Commissariat generally finds the bullocks needed for drawing water. Skill and industry on the part of the soldiers are further encouraged by periodical prizes for the two or three best gardens of each kind; and arrangements are made for transferring the gardens and their contents from one regiment to another.

Regimental workshops are likewise doing much to guard the soldier in India from the evil effects of an idleness hardly else avoidable in so burning a climate. And Sir W. Mansfield treading in the steps of Lord Strathnairn has been turning the soldier's labour to good account in the making and repairing of roads among the hills. It is even likely that this kind of work, hitherto done by volunteers, will ere long be made compulsory on all alike, at a fair rate of payment for the work done. No need to dwell on the advantages of a method which keeps the men in good health, out of mischief, and accustoms them to wield in time of peace the tools which, next to the sword and musket, are of most importance in time of war.

When will the War-office insist on carrying out like experiments with the English soldier in his own country? A little less of the old drill and a good deal more of the training which serves a man for all occasions would make a vast improvement in the health, both bodily and mental, of our troops. Carry out to its widest results this plan of utilising the soldier's labour, and the saving on our military estimates might be carried to an extent of which now we hardly dream.

WANTED—A FULL GOVERNMENT FOR BENGAL.

WHATEVER comes of the present controversy regarding the future seat of government for all India, there can be little doubt that some important change will have ere long to be carried out in the present system of governing Bengal. Whether the Viceroy shall continue to divide his year between Calcutta and Simla, or fix his nominal head-quarters at some point of vantage like Allahabad or Poona, or at some old native city such as Agra or Lucknow, or go on circuit from one part of his empire to another, it seems nearly as inevitable as it would be right, that the oldest and most civilised of Indian provinces should henceforth enjoy a full working government of its own. With new conditions the need for a new system grows daily more imperative. For the last half century in British India events have been working steadily towards such an issue. Each new addition to the limits of what is still called the Bengal Presidency has brought with it a new argument for relieving the viceregal Atlas of the burdens thereby heaped upon shoulders already overborne. The arrangement that worked well enough in the days of Warren Hastings, or even of Lord Wellesley, became a sore inconvenience in those of Lord Dalhousie, and is found to be a positive nuisance in the last days of Sir John Lawrence. How his successor will grapple with the growing difficulty we cannot tell; but our surprise will be great if he too will not soon be learning the same disagreeable lesson as the bulk of those who have ruled and written minutes before him.

To come to the point then—is it desirable or is it not that the administration of Bengal should be entrusted to a Governor and Council, on a footing equal to the Governments of Madras and Bombay? That was the question virtually put by Sir S. Northcote to various members of the India Council, and of late or present administrations in British India. To that question the whole weight of opinion as collected by the Minister for India, not to speak of evidence furnished from other quarters, indicates but one possible answer, and that in the affirmative. If Bengal Proper is ever to be administered aright, if the central government is ever to become in fact what it is in theory, a government for the whole empire, not for any of its parts, the old connection between the Viceroy of India and the local government of Bengal must be dissolved, and the latter be raised not in fact only but in name also to the same footing of general independence with the smaller Governments of Madras and Bombay. To such conclusions we are inevitably driven, not more by the counsels of men like Sir Bartle Frere arguing openly to that end, than by the counter-pleadings of those who agree with Mr. Mangles and Sir John Lawrence in wishing to lighten the labours rather than increase the power and dignity of the Lieutenant-governor of Bengal.

Both sets of reasoners are equally desirous to "improve" and "strengthen" the Government of Bengal. Both allow that under present conditions the Lieutenant Governor is overworked, while the Viceroy himself has much ado to keep his own work from running into arrear. Mr. W. Grey can hardly put the case for a large addition to the working strength of his administration in stronger and plainer language, than do some of those who object most strenuously to alter the existing relations between the Lieutenant-governor and the governor-general. If the one is notoriously overworked, and the other has already quite as much business as he can manage, something must clearly be done to lighten the load. Sir S. Northcote's Special Committee would meet the difficulty by detaching Calcutta bodily from the rule of the Lieutenant-governor, to place it under the direct control of the heavily-burdened Viceroy; much in the spirit of the Irishman who thought to lengthen his blanket by cutting a piece off from the top and sewing it on to the bottom. This proposal however has already been shouted down or dismissed in half a sentence by almost every one outside the Committee, as well as by two out of the six who composed the Committee. Sir R. Hamilton's idea of utilising the deputy-governorship of Fort William by extending its scope to all Calcutta is still less worth considering.

Another plan, suggested by Sir F. Halliday, would reabsorb Bengal into the Supreme Government, turning the Lieutenant-governor into the head of a department under the Viceroy. How this would mend the existing difficulty we are at a loss to see. Two affirmatives may make a negative, but the task of governing an overgrown province can hardly be lightened by turning two high officers of State into one.

Sir H. Durand would make all the minor governments equal by levelling downwards; in other words, by turning Bombay and Madras into Lieutenant-governorships. It was natural that the Viceroy, with his self-reliant energy and glorious reminiscences, should uphold the advantages of personal government as compared with government by a council. Yet he, too, allows that the existing Government of Bengal "may not have by itself, standing alone, so much weight as the Governments of Madras and Bombay." What it wants however in substantive weight is made up to his thinking by its adjective position; for "it is supported and sustained by the immediate presence of the Government of India."

That, to our minds, is the very strongest reason for bestowing a full government on Bengal. So important a province should no longer be treated as a mere adjunct to the viceregal power. It needs no bolstering of this questionable sort. If any part of India is fit to stand alone, to live its own life unchecked by official meddling with its ordinary affairs, Bengal Proper is surely that part. Its present state of virtual dependence on the head of the whole empire tends alike to hinder its own development and to keep up in the other Presidencies a chronic jealousy of a rival seemingly upheld and petted at their cost. Bombay and Madras are always rightly or wrongly complaining of the greater indulgence shown in various ways to Bengal; while from Bengal itself comes the very opposite complaint of undue neglect in one direction varied by excessive meddling in another. And of course the present system tells injuriously on the Central Government also. In spite of the viceroy's warm disclaimers, it is a fact as certain as it was inevitable, that a Supreme Government fixed in Calcutta and organised mainly from residents in Bengal, has continually displayed a tendency to look at questions of imperial interest or of special importance to other parts of the empire from the standpoint of traditions peculiar to Bengal. Under the present Viceroy this tendency has been largely counteracted by his frequent travels and good preliminary training; but will anyone who has followed the course of legislation in India, or watched the working of like influences in our own Imperial Parliament, deny that under present conditions such a tendency cannot but exist?

In commenting on the report of his Special Committee, Sir S. Northcote avows his wish "to strengthen the Presidency Governments for the purpose, not of weakening, but of strengthening the Government of India." Just so; you cannot really strengthen the one without adding strength to the other. How is the needful strength to be obtained? Clearly not by making the Government of Bengal more dependent than it is on the Government of India. Will a Lieutenant-governor with an enlarged secretariat supply what is wanting? Mr. W. Grey, who writes feelingly on this point, pleads for the negative, in which he is strongly supported by a majority of Sir John's own Council, by statesmen of the stamp of Sir Bartle Frere, and by a writer so well-qualified to pronounce an opinion as Major Chesney. The Lieutenant-governor of Bengal, however willing to make shift with a larger staff of secretaries, owns himself "sure that the business of the Government will be better done by a Governor in Council than by a Lieutenant-governor with a secretariat, however strong." And such a Governor, aided by an Executive and Legislative Council as a working cabinet, would certainly "have more weight with the public and more weight with the Government of India than a Lieutenant-governor can ever have." There is no need again to quote Sir B. Frere's vigorous demonstration of the need for such a reform, in accordance with the methods which have proved so thoroughly successful in the cases of Bombay and Madras. Even Sir F. Halliday admits that if the Supreme Government were removed from Bengal, "you might properly place" that province "on a like footing with Madras or Bombay." Nothing, in short, but that "if" seems to stand in the way of such a consummation, in the opinion of all but one or two of those who have written upon the subject. And the stumbling-block after all seems based on the mere assumption that the Viceroy and his Council, or at least the Council, ought to remain at Calcutta the whole year round. But why should the Supreme Government remain there altogether, after experience has amply proved the futility of such a return to former usage, in the face of overwhelming reasons for quite a contrary course? And even if the Supreme Government were to be tied down to Calcutta for more than half the year, why should that interfere with the concession to Bengal of a Government fairly suited to the wants of forty million civilised and industrious Hindoos? Sir B. Frere indeed argues that more good than harm would come of the Viceroy's constant presence in the capital of Bengal. Be that as it may, there is no special reason for such an arrangement, while everything speaks in favour of raising Bengal to at least the same level of administrative independence as the sister presidencies. To do so indeed is only to restore the old fabric of government which made her famous in the days of Lord Cornwallis.

The question therefore is narrowed to this: Shall Bengal be administered by a single governor with a secretariat, or by a governor with a full council? And to this question we can see but one answer. A governor alone may do well enough for a newly-annexed or a semi-barbarous province; but Bengal, in the words of Mr. Grey, "has a claim to the very best form of government which can be given to her." Her great size, her wealth of people and natural produce, her great progress in civilised pursuits and habits, the variety of interests that need considering, and the presence of so many Englishmen within her borders, all point to some form of government not wholly depending on the personal merits of any one man. A governor, advised by a working council, which he has the power at need to overrule, and for whose proceedings he is finally responsible, seems to be the nearest approach to a settled polity of which any part of India is yet capable. For such a government Bengal is at least as ripe as Madras, where it has stood the test of a century. If the Viceroy himself cannot be trusted to rule all India without a Council, is it likely that any one man could be found equal to the government of Bengal? Experience at any rate is dead against the notion; and indeed the time is at hand when not Bengal only, but the North-Western Provinces as well, must exchange the simpler for the more complex form of rule.

In amending the present system it would be well to strengthen the viceroy's hand by withdrawing from all the local Governments the power of corresponding direct with the Secretary of State. At the same time it is only fair to the local Governments that their power of dealing with financial questions should be greatly enlarged, without trenching on the just claims of the Central Government to give the law on all matters of imperial moment. Some sort of line must be drawn between the revenues raised for imperial and for local outlay; and the minor Governments must be left free to raise and to spend for provincial purposes whatever sums they please after contributing their proper quotas to the Imperial Treasury.

Spirit of the Indian Press.

THE BANK OF BOMBAY.

The Times of India considers that the victims of the bank are not only to be pitied, but that they ought to be indemnified. By a process of elimination it would not be difficult to arrive at this class, and let it be as numerous as it may, and the indemnification as heavy as it may, we give a full endorsement of its claims. Sir Stafford Northcote protests that he does not see how it is possible with justice to tax the ryots of India to indemnify the shareholders of the Bank of Bombay, as it would simply be to substitute one class of victims for another. But there is no need to tax the ryot. The revelations made before this Commission show plainly that a large amount of the bank's capital was lost, directly or indirectly, through the land companies of the island. In other words, the land sales fund, amounting to about Rs. 7,500,000, represents so much of the bank's capital drawn out of its coffers in discount, and sent into the Government Treasury in payment of the land bought at the speculative prices of 1864. The fund is the produce of dishonour, and ought to go back into the coffers of the bank; at all events, so much of it as may be necessary to indemnify the victims whose lost fortunes it represents. It is impossible to exaggerate the blame due to the local Government and to the Supreme Government of India for ministering as they did in 1864 to the madness of the people of this island; and every rupee received as the price of the land then sold, deducting only its fair value, ought to be given back for the indemnification of the victims of their joint folly. The formation of these land companies and the vast sums of money drawn by the State therefrom, have the most direct connection with the fall of the bank. The mania of 1864-5 would have been impossible but for the complicity of the State therein, and if our native contemporaries were not too wise to learn from the Times of India, instead of blaming, they would join us in an effort to stem the jealous reproaches cast upon the place, and unite with us in pointing out the justice and propriety of using this fund for the indemnification of those who have been innocently ruined by our folly. Who can doubt that the trust funds invested in the bank's shares should be replaced, and the fortunes of the old, the widowed, and the fatherless reduced to beggary by the combined folly of the Government and the people? We do not make this suggestion thoughtlessly, and we would press it with earnestness upon the Bank Commission. We know very well that their business is simply investigation, but it is certain that any incidental recommendation coming from them would carry with it great weight. It is impossible for the State, with honour or decency, to continue to hold this land fund; and it is impossible to suggest a more becoming or righteous use of it than that we have been pointing out.

IRRIGATION.

The Times of India declares that it is the smaller class of water-works like those which transformed Ajmere that are at once easier to carry out and more necessary for the welfare of the masses of the population. There are in this presidency numberless sites where these works ought to be carried out, and where nature craves for only a little help. Take, at random, one of our Deccan districts, the physical geography of which is thus described in an old Gazetteer, "The mountains . . . have a more gradual declivity on the Deccan side, or towards the east, and diversified by many considerable ranges and isolated mountains, it sinks gradually to the plains of Hyderabad. . . . All the streams hold a south-easterly direction," &c. What possible configuration could offer better facilities for arresting the treasures of the monsoon in their hitherto headlong and ruinous waste? And how more forcibly could the imperative duty of accomplishing this be impressed on our rulers than by the facts mentioned immediately after the quotation just given, "The climate of the higher parts in the west of this territory is characterised by extreme moisture, the annual fall of rain exceeding that registered in many other places," but "in the lower parts still further east (Indapoor, for instance, and, further south, Sholapore) the rains are light, uncertain, and in all years barely sufficient for the wants of the husbandman, and a slight failure occasions much distress?" So little comparatively has been done for water conservancy in the Deccan for these twenty years past that the above stern "handwriting on the wall" still rebukes the culpable insouciance of the distant Supreme Government. On this side of the Ghauts we have the Konkan now deluged with floods, that would be invaluable were but a tithe of them arrested. This might be done at small outlay, and with no more engineering skill than that which Colonel Dixon probably derived from the ancient "rule of thumb," and which for these smaller class of works is supplemented with a little zeal, of far more service than a hundred marks for "fluxions."

THE VALUE OF INDIA TO ENGLAND.

The Englishman remarks that the indifference of the present generation of Englishmen to the possession of India is one of those extraordinary facts which no reasoning can account for. Acquired after a long and desperate struggle with French, Dutch, and native powers, the Indian Empire has now reached the highest point of prosperity and power. Of all the possessions of Great Britain it is the only one that pays its own charges. The fact that we are now commenting upon is still more inexplicable from the altered position of two great Powers which may, at any moment, become the formidable enemies of England. It is only during the last twenty years that Russia and America have obtained strong positions bordering upon the Pacific Ocean. When we held India, and appreciated properly her position during the latter part of the eighteenth, and a large portion of the present century, the nations we have mentioned had no strong positions on the Pacific. We had only our trade with China to protect, and Australia was the home only of a few squatters and convicts, offering no temptation to the attacks of foreign enemies. Yet the statesmen of England had a proper appreciation of the value of India at that time, and when war broke out with France and Holland, English fleets were sent to guard her Indian possessions and her trade with China. Then India had a fleet of her own, sufficiently strong to guard her coasts and destroy the privateers and pirates that infested her seas. Nay, every Indian trading ship was well armed, and one of the most glorious maritime exploits on record was achieved by a fleet of Indian merchant vessels against the men-of-war and frigates of France, commanded by the celebrated Comte de Linois. The merchant vessels, laden with the teas and silks of China, instead of attempting to escape, which would have caused their capture in detail, boldly bore down upon the French fleet in the order of battle, and the latter absolutely fled. Now all is changed. The merchant vessels are no longer armed; the Indian fleet has ceased to exist; British commerce with the Straits, China, Japan, and Australia has increased enormously; another large and important colony—New Zealand—has been added to the British Crown; the United States has in California a strong position on the Pacific; Russia has an equally strong position on the Amoor and Petropolauski, which will enable either of these nations, in case of war, to attack our helpless and now wealthy Australian colonies, and destroy our Chinese trade. And this is the time when the present generation of Englishmen regard with indifference the possession of India. A debate in the House of Commons, on Indian questions, is like reading the Riot Act to a mob. A general skedaddle, to use an expressive Americanism, of members takes place, and matters of the largest importance are discussed in an empty house. We have just seen that only twenty members, out of some 650, could be got to listen to the Indian Budget, and some of them were asleep. We confess that this marked indifference to the possession of India, in a people so shrewd and so thoroughly alive to their own interests, is altogether incomprehensible. This is not the case with other European Powers. The conquest of India has been the ambitious aspiration of every Czar of Russia since the days of Peter the Great to the present hour. It was the dream of the first Napoleon, and the sole object of the expedition to Egypt. Baffled in all her attempts against British India, France never remained satisfied until she obtained a footing in the East, by taking possession of the territory of Cambodia. India is the right arm of England in the East. She is the giant guardian of her golden colonies of Australia, and the protector of her vast commerce with China and Japan. Her armies are ready to march to China, to Persia, to Abyssinia, or to any country in the eastern hemisphere, where the flag of England may be insulted, or her commerce interrupted. And this is the country that the present generation of Englishmen grumble at as a burden and a nuisance, and speak so glibly of giving up!

THE DUKE OF EDINBURGH FOR VICEROY.

The Oudh Ukhbar advocates the appointment of the second son of the Queen of England to be Viceroy and Governor-General of India. This is a fitting season for carrying it out, inasmuch as peace and contentment reign throughout Hindoostan. As the Queen's eldest son claims the title Prince of Wales, so her Majesty's second son should claim the title Viceroy of Hind. The objection that the Governor-General of India requires experience and merit of the first order could be easily overcome by fair argument; and if, in the experience of Indian affairs, patronage and favour are combined with prejudice, it is better not to possess any experience at all. The remedy for such inexperience in any Viceroy of Hind can be found in many ways; but if innate good qualities are not to be found in a Viceroy, it would be difficult to supply them. Enough; if one Prince be appointed Viceroy, and his councillors are men of merit, rank, dignity, as great as that of the Prince himself, the Prince, like an old and experienced person, would perform his duties well; and who can tell what benefits would result to the empire? Of Lords Dalhousie, Canning, and Elgin, all of whom were great statesmen, to which is Hindoostan most indebted? One good thing would arise out of the appointment of a Prince to rule India; all the inhabitants of the country would turn to him with loving hearts, and no one would be found wanting in fidelity and interest in the welfare of the Prince. Some people will look upon this as absurd talk, and will say "What have the Hindoostanees to do with the caste of a Viceroy? They cannot know what a Viceroy ought to be." But sensible people know full well that this is quite a false idea, for Hindoostanees have a great deal to do with the character of a Viceroy, on whom they depend; they care very much for him, and look to his measures, politics, &c., looking upon him, in fact, as few other people do upon him. We do not mean to argue that all India will at once be filled with love, honour, and respect, but that in comparison with other Viceroys, one of the Royal family will be viewed with greater veneration and regard, and the people of India will be more true and faithful to him. We feel certain that the Prince who comes with good councillors will soon be beloved by all, and in a very short time the contentment of the people under British rule will show itself; besides which other benefits of lesser importance will be made manifest; among other things, after five years a Viceroy is changed, and at the vacation of high appointments there is generally some delay or interruption, and because a limit is placed upon his term of office he is apt to think more of the benefits he may be able to confer upon the country and people during the five years of his reign than he thinks of the future, which he considers the duty of his successors.

THE PUNJAB LAND TENURE BILL.

The Friend of India thinks that the amended Bill is as objectionable as Mr. Brandreth's bantling. It certainly demands the careful manipulation of the Murree Committee. Generally these objections to it may be stated. All allusion to customs having local recognition is ignored. Everything is still presumed to be divinely correct, though every member of the Council knows, for the Lieutenant-Governor has forcibly drawn attention to it, that the facts prove the past settlements to be more commonly erroneous. Yet there is to be no redress except on conditions so restricted as to prevent a fair inquiry or effort to put things right. Still, as before, the onus of setting aside the presumption of error devolves on proprietors, and they can do this, generally, only after a suit in court and paying enormous stamp charges which are next to prohibitory. New rights are still to be created in the great legislative workshop, in spite of Sir H. Durand's statement in council that the only condition on which he would agree to the Bill going into committee was that nothing should be done to give offence to the people, that full inquiry should be made as to what were their customs and that new rights were not to be created. Whereas sections 26 and 28 do confer new powers, the one of alienation, the other of sinking wells and reclaiming waste, regarding which, in all the old records—presumed by the Bill itself to be correct, though full of error—these powers are declared to belong to the proprietors and never to the cultivators, who even at last settlement were entered as of the privileged class. Why is the Bill not as just to the proprietors as it is partial to the tenants, to whom it gives an occupancy right, while it imposes on the landlord the duty of proving that right? The truth is that the select committee have ignored the results of all the inquiries and investigations of the last four years. No less than sixty officers of the Punjab, native and English, deny the existence of tenant-right in the Punjab exactly as Mr. Davies unwillingly disproved its presence in Oudh. The verdict of almost all the Punjab authorities is—(1.) That landowners did under Sikh rule possess and exercise as a matter of fact certain and admitted right over all their tenants; (2.) That they have been largely deprived of these rights since the English came; (3.) That in consequence great irritation and bitter animosities have been engendered ever since; (4.) That the further manufacture or recognition of tenant rights is likely to cause dislike to our rule. Such is the verdict of the generality of officers, and yet we see the Council upholding erroneous records, concocting novel definitions of occupancy right, legalising presumptions in the most offensive way—and then trying to open the door of relief just to show that the majority have some qualms of conscience. For do they not allow of impossible rebutters and rectification by lawsuits innumerable, till the English rule shall irritate thousands and yet be looked on as a huge engine of interference with landed rights? The simple points at issue seem to us to be two-fold; the origin of the holding and the subordination of the holder. Instead of looking into the real existence of these as facts, civilians of the old school will hold to their views, under a general and easily formed conclusion that these tenancies in the Punjab were acquired from parties other than the real landowners, and that they were held altogether independent of so miscalled a class. Until the members of Council will go into the villages and satisfy themselves on these points, they will go on legislating on mere theory, and producing increased irritation everywhere in the province in which, of all parts of India, our relation to the finest races in Asia is of a most delicate character.

ZANZIBAR.—It is stated by the Englishman that the Sultan of Zanzibar has yielded to the representations of the Government of India, and has paid into the Bombay Treasury Rs. 1,68,000 as the amount of the subsidy, with arrears, due from him to his nephew the Sultan of Muscat.

Bengal.

HAZARA.

The frontier tribes seem to like to add internecine struggles to foreign warfare. With our forces advancing to subdue them the internal feuds of Swat and Bonair can only be favourable to the object we are pursuing. Reports of sharp contests have reached us, and although they may possibly exaggerate the amount of life lost, the facts they disclose are undoubtedly advantageous to our intended operations. A short account of them may not be deemed uninteresting by our readers. The dissensions among the Bonair hill tribes resulted lately in the formation of two parties; the one headed by Zaidulla Khan, Nawab Khan, and Ascem Khan; the other consisting of a "league" of the remaining Bonair tribes. The Akhund of Swat at once joined the second party with about 4,000 men, commanded by the leader who is popularly called that saint's "son," although he is not so in reality. A victory was obtained over the three Khans—Zaidulla being killed, the Nawab Khan surrendering, and Ascem Khan taking flight. The latter, who had always been a great supporter of the Hindustani Moulvies and mutineers of 1857, called in the aid of their famous "settlement," but in the meanwhile was closely pursued by the Swatis up to the village of Bajgut, where he was besieged. On the 15th instant he broke through the siege, and in endeavouring to continue his flight the two parties came again into conflict in a small valley. The encounter was unquestionably very severe for Hill men; the loss on each side being great, and there being about fifty killed among the Hindustani allies alone. Finally the Swato-Bonair party triumphed, and Ascem Khan, accompanied by some followers and a few Hindustani Ghazis, abandoned Bonair altogether, and has taken refuge in the Amazeyce and Bord Gulloona villages. If our "politicals" can manage to fan this flame, it will greatly accelerate the movement of our troops should they operate on the west side of the river. After completely extinguishing the Agror disturbance, and leaving detachments along the river on the Hazara side, the main body of the force will probably move south, cross over by Torbela, Umb, and Pihoor (the three ferries), and then enter the hills in two or three columns. The force under Cotton and Edwards in 1858 thoroughly explored that part, and found out all the best passes. Neither the Khuda-Khays, or Amazais, or any other of the tribes in that quarter could offer any serious resistance.—Indian Public Opinion.

The Pioneer understands that it is the intention of Government to establish a station right in the midst of Hazara, or, as it is called, advance the present station, Abbottabad, twenty miles or so further on into the interior.

The up-country papers contradict the rumour that General Wilde had been wounded in the Hazara country. Neither General Wilde was wounded nor any other officer. Colonel Rothney alone, as was stated some time ago, was bruised by a spent ball, and Captain Hughes had his shin cut by an artilleryman who was mowing Indian corn.

A correspondent of the Delhi Gazette, writing from Abbottabad on the 29th August, says:—"At present there is nothing very stirring going on here, but I suppose it is the lull which precedes the storm which is going to break over the heads of the devoted 'Chizzulzais' and Hussunzais who, I should think, are now extremely sorry that they put themselves out of the way to pay that evening visit to the Oghee thannah; we are shortly going to return it en grand tenue, and a very nice force is now being massed for that purpose at Manserah, a place on the Abbottabad and Cashmere road, sixteen miles distant from the former locality. The force at present in the Agror Valley consist of the 5th Goorkhas, under Colonel Rothney, the Peshawur mountain battery, under Major Hughes, a wing of the 16th Bengal Cavalry, under Captain Ross, a squadron of the Guides, and the 2nd P.I. The key of the Agror Valley (the Soosul Pass) is held by Colonel De Bude's battery and the 2nd Goorkhas, under Colonel Macpherson. At Manserah are the 1-19th Foot, and a wing of the 16th B Cavalry, and one-half of Rennie's Horse Battery. At Abbottabad, the base of operations, are the 6th Foot, the remainder of Rennie's Battery, the 20th P.I., the 24th P.I., and a detachment of the 77th Foot. Colonels Bright and Vaughan have been appointed temporary brigadier-generals. It was originally intended that the two columns should start, one (the right, Bright's) from Khoond Gully, and the other from Derbund, and simultaneously advance on the celebrated Kala Dakah, or Black Mountain, and sweep the whole range clear, driving the rebels across the Indus, where a little later in the year we could follow them, and if thought necessary it would be a splendid opportunity of advancing on Swat, and making a thorough example of that vexatious country. Up to the 11th of this month the hills surrounding camp were literally covered with men shouting and yelling, but since the action of the 12th not one of them has been seen; the advent of the cavalry had a very salutary effect on them. The 20th P. I. made the march from Meean Meer to Abbottabad (236) miles in eleven days; this is a feat worthy of notice; but indeed the whole of the regiments had to start at very short notice and make long marches. The Goorkhas left Pindue at three hours' notice, and the wing of the 16th B. C. at two hours' notice. The 6th Foot, I am sorry to say, had rather a disastrous march from Pindee to Hurrecpore; the weather was very hot, they lost six men from heat apoplexy and have thirty-one more in a very dangerous state. The Khan of Agror, the gentleman who is really at the bottom of all this disturbance, is safe in Pindee jail, and I trust he will only leave that edifice to take a view some morning of the surrounding country from an elevated position."

Little or no news, says the Lahore Chronicle of August 29, has reached us from Hazara; but preparations for the move are going on at Abbottabad, and it is rumoured that this will take place about the 13th proximo. The 20th Punjab Infantry reached Abbottabad on the 22nd, having marched from Lahore to that place in the wonderfully short time of ten days; such marching is rarely heard of. The Hussunzaies are quiet, and the Swatties in Tikari want to give in their submission, but it is hoped the authorities will have the good sense not to accept it. It is now said that no column will go in by way of Derbund, but that in all probability one regiment may go there to keep a look out, and the rest of the force, consisting of some ten or twelve regiments, three or four batteries, and a few cavalry will be concentrated in the Agror Valley, and then proceed to carry out whatever plans have been decided on, of which at present nothing is made public. The 38th Regiment from Sealkote have suffered as much in proportion from heat apoplexy as the 6th Royals did at Hurrecpore; the latter corps have reached Abbottabad. The 19th Foot, 16th Bengal Cavalry (head-quarters) and a half battery D—F, R.H.A., are still at Nauserah, sixteen miles from Abbottabad towards the Agror Valley, and will shortly move to Khatee at the foot of the hill leading through the Soosal Pass. The heat must be very great in the valleys, as there has been no rain for some time. The telegraph is being extended from Pindee to Abbottabad, and possibly will be taken on to the front. The 1st and 4th Goorkhas are en route to the front from their respective stations. The survey party from Khagan have gone to the Agror Valley, and they hope to be useful in filling in the different parts of the country, including the "Black Mountain," which has not as yet been done. The engineer, Lieutenant Holmes, has been to Derbund, and three horses of his escort died from the heat; several cast their shoes and came in lame, the road being in a fearful state. Lieutenant Armstrong, R.E., has been recalled to Abbottabad to look after the Telegraph Department. The Elephant Battery (D—F, R.H.A.) is expected to be ready in a few days. The 23rd Pioneers are at Pindee. The 20th made a treble march into Pindee, and lost a man when crossing the Sohan river. We hear there is not a chance of this business being over before December.

STATION TALK.

SIMLA, Aug. 28.—Lecot and Co., of Madras, did business as agents in that place for the late Maharajah of Mysore. They had funds of the Maharajah's in their possession on his death. An account has since been rendered by them to the Commissioner of Mysore—indeed it was furnished as soon as asked for. It contains some items which some people think need explanation. Major Evans Bell was paid Rs. 10,000, and had a present of "muslin," for which, in Lecot and Co.'s account Rs. 75 appears. To Dr. Campbell's name is appended sums aggregating between two and three lakhs. He had lent the Maharajah one lakh, and been made a present of another lakh by him; had remitted to him for the Maharajah's service in England £10,000, and received large sums in the shape of interest both in the lakh lent by him to the Maharajah, and that made a present to him by the same personage, said interest having been debited to the Maharajah. Major Gray (retired Madras Army), late of Bangalore, also appears as a recipient of some thousands, as payment however of a "balance of account," and to Mr. Richardson, the Maharajah's English writer, was paid by Lecot and Co. (the disbursers of all the above-mentioned sums) something above Rs. 40,000, as per the Maharajah's order. Lecot and Co. also paid some thousands to the Madras Athenæum, per the Maharajah's order, but the payment is considered by Mr. Bowring to have been made for articles purchased for and supplied to the Maharajah. The name of no other Indian journal, or of any person connected with the Indian press, appears in Lecot and Co's accounts; but some of your other correspondents, nearer Madras and Mysore, will probably send you fuller information than I can. There are to be all sorts of searching investigations, and I venture to prophesy the Secretary of State will send out some unpleasant instructions on the subject. And now for another little revelation. Large, if not immensely valuable, property in the form of estates, belonging to the late Nawab of the Carnatic, of which Government never heard and consequently knew nothing until recently, have been discovered in the Nizam's country, and even in the Madras district. An Act has just been introduced in the Council for the purpose of appointing a receiver to this property, the final disposition of the proceeds of which is already provided for in Act XXX. of 1858 (to provide for the administration of the estate and payment of the debts of the late Nawab of the Carnatic). The admitted creditors of the late Nawab should regard this as good news. No plans with regard to Hazara have yet been decided on, nor will anything be settled until the proposals of the Commissioner of Peshawur and General Wilde have reached the Viceroy. On all that has been done up to the present time the Viceroy and Commander-in-Chief have been in perfect accord; that is, they neither felt inclined to veto the application of General Wilde and the Punjab Government for the large force now in camp at Hazara, and without anything to do there; though, probably, had the Viceroy taken the framing of arrangements to himself that force would be much smaller than it is, mayhap as much smaller as it would probably have been larger, had carte blanche been accorded to Sir William Mansfield, and his Excellency himself take the field in person, as doubtless he would be only too glad of the chance of doing. Nobody knows as yet who is to succeed Mr. Maine in April next. The Hon. Mr. Norton has been spoken of, and he was asked some time ago by a member of the Council of India would he take the law membership if it were vacant? and answered "that he would." That, I believe, is all. Mr. Maine is known to be very anxious to go into Parliament, and will probably sit in the next. Letters from England say the Tory candidates are certain to head the poll at Liverpool. But as the borough or city is "three-cornered," Mr. Massey will be certain to get returned as third member, if not next after the head of the poll. It would be a pity if he were thrown out.

Sept. 1.—All is quiet on the frontier, the Hussunzaies being reported in an awful state of trepidation lest our force should follow them across the frontier into their own strip of country. But three clans of this tribe have offended against us, and they were suborned to do so by our own feudatory, Atta Mahommed Khan, who could not bear the idea of a police thannah of ours on his jaghir. None of the tribes on the other side of the Indus have stirred against us, and the Akhoond of Swat is believed to have comforted himself in, to say the least of it, a way far from unfriendly towards us. Major General Wilde's plans for a scour through the little Hussunzaie country are, it is said, now before the Commander-in-Chief. The retribution will be an affair of days, and the probability is that our force will not encounter any opposition, but find an empty country from which its few thousand of Hussunzaie inhabitants will have fled, and to which they will return to rebuild the homesteads which our troops will necessarily destroy. There is no prospect of a campaign on a grand scale, though the journals have been full of a project of the kind. Up to the 14th ultimo, Shumsodeen Khan was still holding out the Bala Hissar in Cabul against Ismail Khan. Azim Khan had not then retreated to Turkistan, but was at Jehanabad, between Ghuznee and Cabul. Shere Ali and Yacoub were at no great distance from him, but he had just repulsed their cavalry. It is not likely that he is yet on his last legs. The West and North of Afghanistan may still be said to be in his favour. I have however seen no news by telegram from Peshawur, and I fancy that if the Bala Hissar had fallen it would have been known here by such communication almost as soon as the kossids had reached Peshawur from Cabul. The Uncovenanted Service Rules have been got through by the committee, and are very favourable to that service. They allow a maximum of six years' leave out of twenty-five years' service—three years of which may be taken in India. The distinction between sick leave and furlough is done away with, and on leave half salary will be allowed. The rules are to apply to all employes drawing salaries over 10 and under Rs. 1,200 per mensem. The Secretary of State's sanction will have to be waited for. The Viceroy leaves this in October to open the railway from Umballah to Delhi. There will be no durbar of Cis-Sutlej and Hill State chiefs as stated by some of your contemporaries; for such a durbar, with its masses of troops and natives, could not be safely held (remember how cholera broke out at the Agra durbar) before late in November, and then the Viceroy will have been some weeks in Calcutta. "All Government"—Viceroy, Members of Council, Secretaries, clerks and all—are to leave Umballa for Calcutta in one huge special train! This will be discovered not to be possible, and two or three special trains will have to be employed. Seats for about five hundred persons will be required; but though this accommodation could be provided easily enough, half of the unfortunates condemned to occupy said seats would find themselves at the halting stations unable to procure anything to eat or a bed to sleep on, so great would be the demand for both descriptions of necessities. Colonel Fytche, Chief Commissioner, British Burmah, has been lucky enough to capture the Meng-thoon, the rebel son of the King of Ava, who has been so troublesome to his father and our frontier for some time back. He will probably be sent to this country, and detained here. Captain Sladen has really turned back, and is now at Mandalay. His reasons are, insufficiency of funds—his own fault, for he was asked to take more on starting—and the disturbed state of the country beyond Momein.—Times of India Correspondent.

ABBOTTABAD, Aug. 29.—Hazara is a good district for the commissariat department, and an army which is said to go serpent-like on its belly would not suffer from an empty one where grain and meat are plentiful. In Khagan, the snowy mountains which form a beautiful prospect from Abbottabad, prices are somewhat fabulous. A grassed sheep, equal in flavour to Welsh mutton, costs 12 (twelve) annas in that happy valley! Good milk, and this is a fact, is 64 (sixty-four) seers for the rupee! O fortunatos nimium, sua si bona norint, Agricolas, who inhabit Khagan! No wonder the astute civilian puts obstacles in the way of the British tourist bent upon sowing his rupees broadcast in the Khagan Valley, and realising therefrom his mutton at two rupees a quarter, and milk of sky-blue tint at eight seers the rupee. "No," says the Hazara civilian; "wend thou to Cashmere, Captain Verdant Green, where prices are as thou hast made them, and leave unsophisticated Khagan to us." Yesterday (Aug. 28), at 5 A.M., the 6th Europeans marched in with their Sniders. They made two marches of the long one from Hurreepore to Abbottabad. It does not do marching Europeans at twenty miles a day after a hot season in the plains. The 38th, we hear, have lost nearly as many men as the 6th from heat prostration. When European troops are quartered in the mountains they can do forced marches in the hot weather perhaps, but they must not be expected to compete with native troops in such a climate as this. What natives can do is astonishing. You should have seen Colonel Brownlow's regiment, the 20th P.N.I., swinging into Abbottabad last Saturday on the 11th day from Lahore, more than twenty miles daily for eleven consecutive days? I believe they lost one man, who trod on a snake in the night; the reptile bit him, and he died. They marched in as if it was their first march, in high spirits, and shouting as they passed. No doubt they were glad to see Abbottabad, and glad of the nearer prospect of shooting their brother Pathans of the Black Mountain. Of course there is no news of consequence from the interior, nor is there likely to be till after the date I have mentioned.

AGRA, Sept. 2.—Unhappy India! With Orissa still suffering from the effects of a dreadful famine, the north-west is gliding slowly but surely into another. Cheerfully would I bear the reproach of having been a false prophet should my augury prove untrue, but the omens are too unpropitious to admit of any delusive hopes for the contrary, and there appears unfortunately to be but little fear that I shall have to be called opprobrious epithets for creating false alarms and causing groundless fears through fictitious prognostications. An almost rainless rainy season! One shower only in all August, in July two days' rain and four gentle showers, so gentle that any sort of a thin person might have got in between the drops, the 20th of the same month finding our tatties still in use; such has been the monsoon up to this date at Agra, and, as far as can be gathered from newspaper reports, throughout the length and breadth of the North-Western provinces and the greater part of the Punjab. How, under these circumstances, unusual scarcity, if not famine, can be averted, is more than I can understand. Jowar, bajra, and such like cereals, forming the staple articles of food for the poor, will not arrive at maturity at all except in fields provided with wells or otherwise capable of being irrigated. I have seen in the vicinity of Agra several patches of jowar, which, though not much more than a foot in height, had already commenced to wither without having even shot into ear. Disheartening prospects indeed for people whose income amounts to only four rupees a month, upon which perhaps half-a-dozen mouths are depending. With such limited means of existence, every pice, nay every cowrie, has to be taken into consideration in regulating the monthly expenditure, and any rise, be it ever so slight, above the ordinary average in the price of food makes itself severely felt in a household conducted on principles of necessity so economical. Badly enough though as these four-rupee men are situated, they have yet a sufficiency to save them from actual starvation unless matters turn out desperate; but how the Huns and Arabs of our Indian towns manage is a riddle to me. Without a fixed income their earnings depend upon chance and lucky windfalls that may bring them in a pice or two during the twenty-four hours. Life must indeed have latent charms if thought worth preserving under such adverse circumstances. How utterly unattractive, how devoid of everything that can make it endurable, is the existence of the lower classes of our Indian fellow-subjects. At home the poor man, the beggar, has the chance of the crumbs from the rich man's table, off which, if he knows how to manage, and does not stumble over the block of bashfulness, he may make a substantial dinner every day in the year, while with the help of an occasional sipping he is enabled to drown his sorrows momentarily in the cheering cup, and imagine himself king of the realm. How different the life of the Bohemians of our Indian by-lanes! Parched grain, with an occasional grateful change of bajra and jowar, forms their bill of fare from the day they leave their mothers' breasts until death provides from their bodies a feed for vultures and jackals richer than they themselves ever had the luck of enjoying. These periodical famines, recurring almost regularly at intervals of five years, if not oftener, have not taught Government the advisability of providing for years of scarcity on the plan it is done in the poorer parts of other countries likely to be subjected to famine by the failure of one year's crop, as is the case in India. For instance, in certain of the conglomeration of States forming the Austrian empire, where the poorer classes live from hand to mouth, as they do in this country, in years of plenty, or as I should rather say every year when there is no actual scarcity, a portion of the produce of each village land is stored in granaries erected for the purpose. Should there next year luckily be no occasion to fall back upon this store, it is returned to its respective owners and a fresh supply laid in, but if otherwise, it is sold to the poor at a reasonable rate, and the proceeds paid to the farmers. The wisdom of this system is evident, for while it relieves the needy it does not injure the wealthy.—Delhi Gazette Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

CONSULAR.—The appointment of Mr. James Black to officiate as Consul for H.M. the King of the Netherlands, and as Vice-Consul for H.M. the King of Denmark at Rangoon, during the absence on leave to Europe of Mr. Steel, is confirmed.

THE CHARGE OF LIBEL AGAINST A PUNJAB MAGISTRATE.—In the libel case, Lieutenant Nicolls versus Mr. Wakefield, damages to the amount of Rs. 500 and costs have been awarded to the plaintiff, who sued for Rs. 5,000.

TELEGRAPH INTO HAZARA.—The telegraph line from Hasan Abdal to the frontier of Hazara has been opened as far as Hurreepore. It is expected that there will be communication with Abbottabad in the course of the next few days.

A RUMOUR.—There is a report in circulation, says the Delhi Gazette, that his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief will shortly visit Peshawur. The massed troops at Abbottabad are not to move at present, for it is generally surmised that the frontier tribes are contemplating a combined movement on the Peshawur Valley.

BAD SYMPTOMS.—Letters from Rohilcund inform us that the magistrate of Budaon has reported to Government that petty thefts and robberies on the highway have already commenced in his district, owing to the coming scarcity, and that if the rain held off for ten days longer he could not be answerable for good order, &c. We, however, scarcely think that such an energetic officer as Mr. Carmichael would so soon be pounded.—Delhi Gazette.

OFFICIAL ITEMS.—Colonel Lumsden and Major Garden have been confirmed in the appointments of Quarter Master General and Deputy Quarter Master General of the Bengal Army respectively. It is stated that Mr. W. E. Gordon, Officiating Second Assistant Accountant General, Bombay, has been appointed to officiate as Accountant General, British Burmah, during the absence, on leave, of Mr. H. A. Mangles.

IMPORTANT WORKS TO BE CONSTRUCTED AT GWALIOR.—A number of important military works, hospitals, barracks, baths, &c., are to be constructed at Gwalior; and we understand our Saw Mills and General Contract Company intends to establish a branch at that station, with the hope of doing a good stroke of business. Owing to the octroi chiefly, but also to other causes, this company has removed its head-quarters from Lucknow to Byram Ghaut.—Lucknow Times.

A CANAL FROM AGRA TO DELHI.—By a notification (in the irrigation branch) of the Government of these Provinces, we learn, in the first place, that we are to have a canal connecting Delhi with Agra; and in the next that it will be designated "The Agra Canal." The notification runs thus:—"The canal about to be taken from the river Jumna at Okla, below Delhi, and which, running through the Gurgaon and Muttra Districts, is to terminate at Agra, will be designated "The Agra Canal."

A NEW ARRANGEMENT.—A Lahore contemporary has heard that in future all the new regiments sent to India will be landed at Bombay, and sent up to the Punjab and the frontier generally. They will then work their way downwards, their last station being Calcutta, &c. The object of this measure is said to be to make Europeans acquainted with a better style of natives than meet them in Bengal and Madras, and from seeing whom much of the present "nigger" hatred is imbibed. Considerations of the health of the troops have no doubt also influenced the decision.

PRIZES FOR SWORDSMANSHIP, &c.—In supersession of General Order by the Governor-general, No. 444, dated May 10, 1868, which is cancelled, the Right Hon. the Governor-general in Council directs that the Royal Warrant, dated March 7, 1868, granting prizes for good swordsmanship and lance practice be considered applicable to India, as likewise the Horse Guards General Order, No. 26, of 12th idem, which will be published by his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, with such modifications as may be necessary to render the details applicable to India. The prizes consist of extra pay, and a badge of cross swords or cross lances and crown worked in gold.

CHOLERA AT DACCA.—Cholera is marching with giant strides over the country. It has for some weeks been prevalent in Dacca amongst the native population, and now we learn from a contemporary that it has made its appearance in Lucknow and Benares. The Central Provinces, the North-West, and Eastern Bengal, are all being visited by the grim intruder, the fatal severity of whose attacks are annually borne testimony to by bereaved households and depopulated villages. As a rule the mortality from fever is considerable in Dacca, but it bears no proportion to that from cholera. Both these scourges may be traced to the unclean condition of the city and suburbs. The natives positively revel in filth; one cesspool to every hut is indispensable, two would be preferred, and three would constitute an elysium which none but an oriental imagination could conceive. Medical sanitation is out of the question under such circumstances—where are the appliances to enforce it? Our civil surgeon is earnestly bent on doing his duty, and he does it, but before Dacca can be entirely cleansed from its impurities, the whole city will have to be submerged, and the aggregation of fœtid matter everywhere apparent swept bodily out of sight and smell.

THE COMMISSARIAT.—The following temporary promotions in the Commissioned grades of the Army Commissariat Department have been made by the Governor-General in Council:—Captain Hunt, Sub-Assistant Commissary General, 1st Class, and Acting Deputy Assistant Commissary General, 2nd Class, to officiate as Deputy Assistant Commissary General, 1st Class; Captain Smith, Sub-Assistant Commissary General, 2nd Class, and Acting Sub-Assistant Commissary General, 1st Class, to officiate as Deputy Assistant Commissary General, 2nd Class; and Lieutenant Rowband, Sub-Assistant Commissary General, 3rd Class, on probation, Acting as Sub-Assistant Commissary General, 2nd Class, to officiate as Sub-Assistant Commissary General, 1st Class, from 12th June, 1868, during the absence on sick leave of Major Chalmers, Deputy Assistant Commissary General, 1st Class, or until further orders.

CHURCH COMMITTEES.—Certain rules relating to Church Committees, which have been laid down by the Government of India for the Diocese of Calcutta, are published:—1. In any station where there is a Government Chaplain, or a church which is the property of Government, and in every other station (where there is a clergyman) there may be appointed not less than two nor more than four laymen, with title of the Church Committee, to assist the chaplain or minister in the discharge of such duties as are not necessary parts of his spiritual office. If there be more than one church, a separate committee shall be nominated for each. 2. As a rule, members of the Church Committee shall be two in number; additional members shall only be appointed in exceptional circumstances, and on the recommendation of the bishop. 3. In every station the chaplain or minister shall nominate one member of the committee. From these rules St. John's Church, Calcutta, is excepted, where the present constitution shall remain unaltered. And if in any station, from its small size or other cause, it may seem hardly possible to carry out these rules, the chaplain or minister shall make a representation on the subject to the bishop. There are further rules regulating the duties of committees in military stations, &c. The committees will be appointed annually in Easter week.

A NATIVE SUBSTITUTE FOR THE SEXTANT.—A curious contrivance employed by native navigators in place of the sextant was exhibited at the last meeting of the Bengal Asiatic Society. It consists of a small rectangular thin board or piece of teak wood, measuring three and one-sixth inches long by two and one-sixth inches broad, and is about one-tenth inch thick. Through the point of intersection of the diagonals a fine cord is passed. The small rectangular board is held firmly in the left hand, while the cord from its centre is stretched from it to the eye, where the fingers of the right hand are held. As this cord, or the distance from the eye to the small rectangular board is increased or diminished, so is the angle subtended by the opaque board lessened or enlarged. Marks or notes on the circle record the results of the observations. The principle in optics upon which the use of this simple instrument depends is, that the latitude of any place is roughly the same as the angle of elevation above the horizon of the polar star, and that any opaque object held vertically before the eye subtends an angle, which varies inversely as the distance of the object from the eye. If this distance be constant, and the size of the opaque object constant, the angle subtended by it must be constant also. By this simple instrument Asiatic coasters are generally guided.

CIVIL LEAVES OF ABSENCE.—The following civil servants obtained furlough and leave of absence (in August) under new rules:—Major Hallett, District Superintendent of Police, Allypore, with effect from the date on which he availed himself of the same; Lieut. Lassalle, 1st Assistant District Superintendent of Police, Ajmere, three months, with effect from Aug. 10; Mr. Gordon, Superintendent of Telegraphs, Sindh Division, twelve months, in extension; the leave for twelve months granted to Mr. McManus, Sub-Engineer, Central Provinces, dated June 9 last, is commuted to six months' leave, on private affairs; Mr. Horne, C.S., two years, from date of embarkation; Mr. Jones, C.S., one year, from date of embarkation; Mr. Jones, Deputy Commissioner, Jubbulpore, one month, to Europe; Captain Wakefield, Judge of the Small Cause Court, Jubbulpore, two months, from Aug. 17; Lieut. Vertue, Assistant Commissioner of Boorhanpore, in Nimar, from September 1; Mr. Shakespear, Commissioner of the Benares Division, three months, from September 8; Major Minchin, Political Agent and Superintendent, Bhawalpore, three months, from September 1; Mr. Thorburn, Assistant Commissioner, availed himself of the privilege leave of absence granted him on February 21; Mr. Rivaz, Assistant Commissioner, Umritsur, one month, from date of his availing himself thereof; Mr. Vansittart, Civil and Sessions Judge of Barcilly, one month, from such date as he may avail himself of the same; Rev. G. G. Gillan, Assistant Chaplain, Church of Scotland, Meerut, two months, from August 17, or subsequent date; Mr. Lawrence, Magistrate and Collector of Allypore, two months, from September 16.

THE COTTON CROP OF THE N.W. PROVINCES.—If the comparative statement of the estimated out-turn of the cotton crops of the North-Western Provinces for the year 1867-68 is to be trusted, the yield will be very little more than two-thirds of that of the previous year. This falling off is attributed partly to unfavourable weather, and partly to a contraction of the cultivation, owing to the reduced prices of the staple. Whatever may be the value of these figures, there can be little doubt that that part of the statement which refers to the comparative consumption of English and native cloths is to the last degree unreliable, while it is so indefinite, that, even if it were accepted as correct, it would be quite impossible to draw any general conclusion from it. In twelve districts the popularity of English manufactures is reported to be decidedly in the ascendant, and in nine decidedly the reverse. But when we come to examine the position and circumstances of the districts in either category, we generally find nothing to explain the difference. In Jaloun and Jhansie, for instance, the natives are said to be giving up the use of English goods, on account of their inferior durability, and the native manufactures to be generally improving; while in Lullutpore, close by, the very opposite is said to be the case. Again, while in the other districts of the Allahabad Division the consumption of English cloths is said to be increasing, in Futtehpore, we are told, that of native cloth is increasing from year to year. In the Rohilcund division, similarly, Bijnour, Budaon, and Bareilly are in one category, and Moradabad and Shahjehanpore in the other. These differences between adjacent tracts of country are the more singular that they do not depend on taste, but on a comparison of the price and durability of the two descriptions of goods. Surely if English cloths are rotten in Shahjehanpore, they cannot be sound in Budaon. We are inclined to think that we owe these varying reports to the extreme difficulty, if not impossibility, of forming an accurate judgment in such matters from that simple inspection to which, we expect, the reporting officers have generally trusted for their information. Of one fact, however, there can be very little doubt. It seems beyond question that great dissatisfaction very generally prevails with the quality of English manufactures now-a-days, and there is but too much reason to fear that this feeling is on the increase.—Englishman.

THE SUBATHOO COURT-MARTIAL.—A general court-martial assembled at Subathoo on the 6th August, 1868, for the trial of Paymaster W. Lawes, H.M.'s 90th Light Infantry, on the following charges:—First charge.—With having, from time to time, fraudulently misapplied the sum of rupees seven thousand three hundred and ninety-four and four annas (Rs. 7,394-4-0) or thereabouts, public money belonging to her Majesty's army, received by him as paymaster of the 90th Regiment of Foot. Second charge.—With having, at Subathoo, on the 12th July, 1867, intentionally given in to a regimental committee a false statement of money for the use of H.M.'s forces, the said statement showing a balance due to him of rupees two hundred and seventy-nine, ten annas and six pie (Rs. 279-10-6) to date; whereas in reality, as he well knew, there was a balance against him of rupees two thousand one hundred and eighty, fourteen annas and six pie (Rs. 2,180-14-6) or thereabouts. Third charge.—With having, at Subathoo, on the 10th October, 1867, intentionally given in to a regimental committee a false statement of public money for the use of her Majesty's forces, received and disbursed by him from the 1st to the 10th October, 1867, both dates inclusive; inasmuch as he had intentionally omitted to enter, or cause to be entered in that statement, the sum of rupees two thousand (Rs. 2,000), which he received on the public account for the use of her Majesty's forces before the 10th October, 1867. Fourth charge.—With having, at Subathoo, on the 20th January, 1868, intentionally given in to a regimental committee a false statement of public money for the use of her Majesty's forces, received and disbursed by him from the 1st to the 20th January, 1868; inasmuch as he gave in to the said committee a statement dated the 20th January, 1868, in which he (Paymaster Lawes) had intentionally omitted to enter, or to cause to be entered, two sums of money, to the aggregate amount of Rs. 3,548-13-6, received by him on the public account, for the use of her Majesty's forces, between Jan. 1 and 19, 1868. President, Col. W. Birch, her Majesty's 104th Regiment; Judge Advocate, Lieut. Col. F. C. Maisey; Prosecutor, Lieut. Col. W. Fullerton, Deputy Judge-Advocate-General of the division. After the usual questions, the prisoner objected to Lieut. Col. Fullerton and the Judge-Advocate-General being in court, on account of their being witnesses. Being requested to make a statement in writing, he handed in the following protest:—"Mr. President and Gentlemen,—I beg most respectfully to ask you to enter my protest on the proceedings of this general court-martial against Lieut. Col. Maisey and Lieut. Col. Fullerton, who have been summoned as witnesses for my defence, remaining in court. The court has decided to the contrary. I respectfully submit to its decision, but equally respectfully protest against the decision as illegal and not supported by the rules laid down for the guidance of courts-martial. I have most respectfully informed the court that my objection is not from any frivolous objection to Lieut. Col. Maisey or Lieut. Col. Fullerton; but that I urged this point in the interest of justice and for the benefit of my own defence. I have heard the president order all witnesses to leave the court and not return before called, as is stated should be the case in summons on courts-martial, page 246; and also in Col. Pippon's work on "Military Law," page 49. The Judge-Advocate has said that the fact of witnesses being ordered out of court is a mere matter of process. Even if such be the case, the whole of the forms regulating the proceedings of courts martial are mere matters of process, but none the less necessary to the legality of their proceedings." The Prosecutor then opened the case, some evidence was taken, and the court adjourned to the next day.]

THE MADRAS BREAKWATER.

The Government have nominated Colonel Carpendale, R.E., Colonel Anderson, R.E., Major Shaw Stewart, R.E., Mr. Dalrymple, the master attendant, and Mr. Elwin, the agent of the Madras Railway, to form themselves into a committee for the preparation of plans and estimates of the proposed breakwater off Madras; and the Chamber of Commerce has been asked to nominate a member to represent commercial interests on the committee. The Government, it is said, are in favour of the breakwater being provided at each end with a strongly armed fort, by aid of which the shipping inside the harbour, as well as the town itself, may be protected against possible attack. Madras is almost totally unprotected, and our situation might be most critical were war some day suddenly to break out with a Power which has well armed ships of-war often cruising about these seas. The Armstrong guns on the fort walls would not be useless; but unless the enemy were very rash or unlucky, he would perhaps keep sufficiently out of their way, and yet be able to drop a few live shells into our midst, the effects of which could hardly help being sensational. Bombay is throwing up forts to protect her harbour, so is Melbourne; and Madras, while setting about vigorously to construct a harbour, will be wise in taking steps to defend it also. Lord Napier's Government is said to be fully alive to the present defencelessness of the town, and they have requested the committee above named to deal with the project of a breakwater in all its bearings—maritime, military, commercial and financial, including technical and engineering questions, the agency by which the work may most properly be constructed, and the provisions by which it may be made profitable as a financial investment.

We trust, therefore, that the labours of the committee will result in some scheme which will effectually remove from the Madras shore the stigma of "inhospitable" that has for so many years been associated with it. We find this very expression in a mutilated old report on the "Armogham Shoal and Blackwood's Harbour," dated fifty years ago. At that time Madras was the station for the East India squadron, and the head-quarters of the Commissioner of the Royal Navy; and the principal naval stores and the hospital were also established here. The inconvenience which jolly old admirals experienced in crossing the surf seems to have been the principal reason for abandoning Madras as a naval station. These inconveniences are graphically and amusingly described in the report we allude to. "The admiral himself," it is stated, "whenever he landed, was obliged, at the back of the never-ceasing surf, to quit his own proud barge at some hazard of his life, and to step into one of the most inconvenient conveyances possible, a masulah boat; to be then swept with almost terrific velocity through the repeated surges, in considerable danger of being swamped; ultimately to be bumped on shore like an abandoned boat or wreck, and then to scramble out on men's shoulders or otherwise at the watched moment of a retreating wave." It is hardly surprising that the British admiral of the period considered this an undignified way of landing on foreign territory, and thus it came about that when Mr. Puget was Commissioner of the Royal Navy at Madras he recommended the Lords of the Admiralty to make Trincomalee the navy depot and admiral's station in the East.—Madras Times.

THE PULNEYS.

A cautious civil surgeon was once heard to say, "A man can't die on those hills of anything but old age!" Those hills were the Pulneys. The opinion was given after dinner, it is true, and a certain allowance ought to be made for the sanguine feelings generated by the drinking of a second glass of beer. But we feel no sort of doubt that the worthy doctor would stick to his opinion now, and that it is by no means so extravagant as it seems. Now that Lord Napier is building a house and intends to make a somewhat protracted stay on the Pulneys, it is worth while considering whether that magnificent range of mountains is likely to achieve what it is manifestly entitled to, a popularity as great as that of the Neigherries, if not greater. We think it may be pretty safely predicted that it will, and that within the next twenty years a large and thriving European settlement will have sprung into existence on the Pulney plateau, to the common good of the invalid who needs a bracing air, and the poor ryots of the Madras district, who urgently need money. The world in general, and our readers in particular, know so very little about the mountains we are speaking of, that it will be well to say something about their position, accessibility, altitude, extent and climate, before making a few suggestions which occur to us touching the duty of Government in respect to them.

In the first place, then, the Pulneys or Varahagiris (Boar-mountains), as the Tamils call them, are situated in the Madras district between 10 deg. and 10 deg. 15 min. north latitude, and 77 deg. 20 min. and 77 deg. 55 min. east longitude. At one end they are connected with the Western Ghats, of which they are a spur, by a ridge of hills eight miles broad, and from that point they stretch out E.N.E., a total distance of about fifty-four miles, having an average breadth of perhaps fifteen. The only European settlement on them, Kodikanal, is said to be about 112 miles distant from Trichinopoly, sixty-five from Madras, fifty-two from Dindigul, and ninety from the nearest point on the western coast. Periyakolam, which is to this settlement what the town of Salem is to Yercand, is about seventeen miles distant from it. And the Kodikanal Ghaut is twelve miles long. When the long-talked-of branch line from Caroor to Dindigul has been made, the traveller from Madras or Kodikanal will have to do about forty miles in a bullock coach to horse transit, and if on the other hand a branch line is made from Trichinopoly to Madras, he will have to do about fifty-three in one of these ways. When he arrives at Kodikanal he will find that it is at almost exactly the same height above the level of the sea as the Ootacamund Lake, whilst a few peaks in its neighbourhood are higher by some five or six hundred feet. He will find the air to be mild and yet invigorating; and the temperature one of wonderful equability during the greater part of the year. In the winter season, or from the middle of December to the middle of March, the mornings and evenings will be cold, and the nights very cold. Indeed, frost is quite common at this time in the valleys, and it is even possible to make a little ice by artful management. The cold season ends with a few heavy showers; and the air then becomes exquisitely mild and genial, and not unlike that of the south of France in autumn. April and May are sometimes rather unpleasantly warm, the thermometer rising as high as 77 deg., but their heat is constantly reduced by showers of rain and hail, and seldom lasts long at a time. June, July, and August are cooler. The latter part of the year is characterised throughout by uncertain weather, during which a considerable amount of rain falls, and fog, mist, and drizzle are very prevalent. As might be expected, cloudy skies are very common on the Pulneys during all but the winter months; and there is an abundance of rain, but as a rule the air is dry and pleasant to the lungs, and soppy wretched weather is most rare; fever and other malarious epidemics seem to be unknown at Kodikanal and the surrounding plateau generally, and the only unhealthy season on record was one in which cholera appeared and worked rather busily in some native villages. On the whole the climate of the Pulneys—we speak of course only of the upper range, the lower being quite different in this respect, and resembling the Shevaroy's rather than the Neilgherries—appears to be one of the finest and most agreeable in the world. The irregularly undulating plateaus and table lands of the upper range are covered for the most part with long coarse grasses, and trees are to be found only in sheltered ravines and hollows and in the gardens of the residents. All kinds of European fruit trees and vegetables seem to thrive pretty well at Kodikanal, when properly attended to, but the soil is said to be cold and somewhat sterile. A few tea plants may be seen growing vigorously in the Hon. T. Clarke's garden, and it is supposed that the cultivation of tea might be advantageously tried in certain moist situations. Coffee thrives well on the lower range, which is well wooded and watered, and Chinchona plants have been successfully reared by an amateur gardener in Kodikanal.—Madras Times.

MADRAS MEDICAL COLLEGE.—The trustees of the "Lane Scholarship" have nominated Mr. W. A. Barren to the vacant scholarship.

EXAMINATIONS IN THE NATIVE LANGUAGES.—On the report of the committee for the examination of assistants, the following gentlemen are declared to have qualified according to the standards noted below:—Higher Standard.—Messrs. Clogstoun, Martin, Irvine, Tagg, LeFanu, Crosthwaite, and Overbury. Lower Standard.—Messrs. Glenny, Wallace, Gribble, Turner, Atkinson, Maltby, Maclean, Weir, Cumming, Gibson, Boyle, Johnson, and Bird.

MOVEMENTS OF TROOPS.—The following movements of the batteries of Royal Artillery, garrisoning the Bombay and Madras Presidencies, will be ordered to take place shortly:—No. 4 Battery, 5th Brigade, Royal Artillery, from Kirkee to Thomas' Mount; No. 5 Battery, 5th Brigade, Royal Artillery, from Hyderabad, Sind to Rangoon; No. 6 Battery, 5th Brigade, Royal Artillery, from Belgaum to Fort St. George; and No. 1 Battery, 20th Brigade, Royal Artillery, from Fort St. George to Bellary.

COLONEL LAWRIE, R.A.—This officer delivered over charge of his office to his successor, Major Grove, now Superintendent of Army Schools, on Aug. 25. We believe that Col. Lawrie, who has always during his service in India laboured for the benefit of soldiers in this country, discharged his duties as the head of army schools during the eighteen months he held the appointment, zealously and conscientiously; and we have no doubt that had the rules of the service permitted, he would have been glad to have continued his career in connection with education in the army. We trust that results will prove that Col. Lawrie's energy and zeal have not been thrown away.—Athenæum.

REORGANISATION OF THE MADRAS ARMY.—Preparatory to a re-organisation of the whole army of India, we understand that six more regiments of the old "Coast Army" are to go next year the way of the 18th and eleven others. We think that the whole scheme of this new change ought to be published at once, in order that the goal to which we are being driven may be known; and further changes understood as a system, instead of being regarded as spasmodic acts of bewildered individuals. Another change of Ministry may cause another policy and many changes in the organisation of our army, and it would be well if the British Government could be nailed down to one course, that would not be affected as regards India by that "question of the day," the Irish Church, or any other question over which Messrs. Gladstone and Disraeli choose to fight.—Madras Athenæum.

FURLOUGHS TO EUROPE.—The undermentioned officers are permitted (August and September) to proceed to Europe, on medical certificate, under the new rules:—Colonel Batten, Staff Corps, Commandant 17th Regiment Native Infantry, on furlough, on private affairs, for two years, and to embark from Bombay; Lieutenant-Colonel Bivar, Cavalry, Commandant 1st Regiment Light Cavalry, on furlough, on private affairs, for one year, and to embark from Bombay; Captain Gordon, Staff Corps, Superintendent of the Central Jail at Salem, on medical certificate, for two years, and to embark from Madras; Lieutenant Shelley, General List, Adjutant 28th Regiment Native Infantry, on medical certificate, for twenty months, under the regulations of 1854, and to embark from Madras; Captain Clubley, Staff Corps, Sub-Assistant Commissary General, has been permitted to proceed to Bombay with leave of absence on medical certificate, for sixty days, from 13th August, 1868, for the purpose of obtaining a final medical certificate to Europe; Lieutenant-Colonel Broome, 2nd in Command and Wing Officer 20th Regiment Native Infantry, to Europe, for one year, five months, and twenty days, embarking from Madras; Captain A. T. Searle, 23rd Regiment Light Infantry, to Europe, via the Cape, for two years, and to embark from Madras (this cancels furlough for two years granted 11th August); the leave for two years, on medical certificate, granted 28th August to Captain Gordon, Staff Corps, Superintendent of the Central Jail at Salem, is to the Cape of Good Hope and Europe; Captain Hawkes, Staff Corps, Deputy Assistant Commissary General, is granted one month's preparatory leave, from the 3rd September, 1868, to enable him to proceed to Madras for the purpose of obtaining leave to Europe on medical certificate; the Rev. R. Firth, M.A., Chaplain of Aurungabad, for one year, from 19th December next, to Europe; Mr. George, Executive Engineer of the 4th Grade, for twenty months.

THE DINNER TO THE ABYSSINIAN OFFICERS.—The gathering on Tuesday evening to welcome the heroes of Abyssinia was more, to our minds, than a mere club dinner, more than the mere recognition by a portion of the Madras society of the distinguished achievements of the expedition. It was, and in this light we venture to notice it, the expression by a few of the feelings of the many. And heartily and well were those feelings expressed. The chair was taken by the Hon. R. S. Ellis, supported on his left by his Excellency Lord Napier, and on his right by the chief guest of the evening, Major Hobbs, commanding the 45th Regiment. The other officers of the regiment and the other guests were distributed at other parts of the table, and we were glad to see among them some of the familiar faces of our Madras members of the gallant force. After dinner the Chairman proposed the health of her Gracious Majesty Queen Victoria, who, as he said, was not more distinguished by the many virtues which have adorned her life than by her marked anxiety for the welfare of those who wore her uniform, and her readiness to honour those who have vindicated the honour of her country. We need not say that this toast was duly honoured in an assemblage of Englishmen. The Chairman soon rose again to propose the toast of the evening, and bore eloquent tribute to the services of the whole force, and not least, of the gallant 45th, distinguished among the foremost on this as on other historical occasions. The toast was enthusiastically received, and loud and long cheers rang forth, showing how heartily Madras welcomed back from victory her friends, new and old. Major Hobbs, in returning thanks, modestly said that they had tried to do their duty, and expressed their gratitude for the cordial reception and the honour done to them, and concluded by proposing the health of Lord Napier. His Lordship returned thanks with his usual felicity and readiness, expressing his pleasure at being allowed to join in receiving the guests of the evening. Every one present felt that his lordship was not, as he said he felt, "the wrong man in the wrong place." This was said in graceful reference to his distinguished namesake, Lord Napier of Magdala, whom "all must long to see, and all delight to honour." This was the last speech of the evening, and shortly afterwards a fragrant perfume announced that cheroots were being lighted, and the evening's entertainment was drawing to a close.—Madras Times, Sept. 2.

Bombay.

PUBLIC WORKS CONGRESS.—The annual Public Works Congress is to begin, we understand, on the 15th of September at Gunnish Kind, Poona.

BOMBAY BANK COMMISSION.—We believe it is the intention of the Commissioners now inquiring into the causes of the losses of the Bank of Bombay to leave for England by the mail of the 26th of September.

THE COMING DURBAR.—The Bombay Gazette understands that the durbar which H.E. the Governor is to hold at Poona in October for the reception of the chiefs and sirdars of the Presidency is fixed definitely for the 6th of that month. A circular to that effect has been sent round to those who are invited to attend.

DEATH OF CAPT. SPEKE.—We regret to announce the death of Captain Speke, of H. M.'s 46th Regiment. The unfortunate officer sank under the effects of the amputation of his leg last week, and died at 11 A. M. yesterday. He will be buried at 5 P. M. to-day.—Poona Observer, Sept. 1.

REPAIRING DAMAGES.—We are informed that the Agent of the B. & C. I. Railway telegraphed to Bombay on Friday that the bridge over the river Meshwa, near Memoodabad, had been restored, and re-opened for traffic. There is now only one break on the line—namely, at the Nerbudda.—Bombay Gazette, Sept. 8.

SIR S. FITZGERALD.—Sir Seymour Fitzgerald, we learn on good authority, will come to Sind again next cold season, after visiting Kattyawar, where a few difficulties exist which he will have to adjust. Sir Seymour, we further learn, is urging the prosecution of the Kurrachee Harbour Works. We hope that, when he comes, he will turn the first sod of the "Extension."—Sindian, Aug. 29.

EXAMINATIONS IN THE NATIVE LANGUAGES.—The undermentioned officers are reported to have passed the required examination in Hindustani, according to the lower standard:—Lieut. Dalmahoy, 7th Regiment N.I.; Ensign Hughes, 1st Battalion 2nd Foot; Ensign Simpson, 1st Battalion 2nd Foot. Mr. W. E. A. James, Assistant Superintendent, Revenue Survey, Mysore, has passed an examination in the Marathi language.

OPENING OF THE NEW LINE TO NAGPORE.—The following telegram from the Director-General of Telegraphs at Simla was placed at our disposal on Tuesday:—"The new line from Bombay to Nagpore is opened. Distance from Bombay to Jubbulpore 686 miles; from Hingunhaut to Bombay 700; from Bombay to Nagpore 520 miles. The charge on each for one group is two rupees eight annas, including booking fee. No other stations will be affected."—Times of India, Sept. 8.

MILITARY FURLONGS AND LEAVES OF ABSENCE.—The following officers are allowed furlough to Europe on medical certificate, under the furlough rules of 1868:—Major Allardyce, Madras Staff Corps, Deputy Commissioner Maiker District, Hyderabad Assigned Districts, for two years. Captain Clubley, Madras Staff Corps, for fifteen months. Sub-Conductor Gaffney, of the Ordnance Department, for two years. Lieutenant Trevelyan, Wing Subaltern 15th Regiment Native Infantry, to Europe. Major Wilkinson, 82nd Foot, to England by the overland route; this officer is not available for duty with troops, and will, on arrival, report himself to the Adjutant-General, Horse Guards. Captain Cresswell, 49th Foot, for six months, from date of embarkation; to England. Captain Swinton, 1st Madras Light Cavalry, thirty days from date of departure; to Bombay, preparatory to Europe. Conductor Sutton, Ordnance Department, for two years. Veterinary Surgeon Moir, A Brigade Royal Horse Artillery, thirty days from date of departure, to Bombay. Deputy Assistant Commissary Bunyer, Ordnance Department, to Europe, for two years.

KURRACHEE HARBOUR.—As the outlet of the trade of the Punjab and Central Asia, no less than as a military base for the frontier, the importance of Kurrachee cannot be over-estimated. Ten years ago Mr. Parkes, a civil engineer, was sent out to report on the improvement of the harbour on the recommendation of Dr. James Walker, F.R.S., who had surveyed it previous to 1856. About that time Colonel Turner warned the Bombay Government that they ought to facilitate Mr. Walker's operations instead of themselves attempting to design the works. Since that time report has followed report and memorandum memorandum without the slightest approach to a decision having been attained. In 1863 Mr. Parkes was again called in. The gist of that gentleman's propositions was that arrangements should be made for multiplying Dr. Walker's sections and groynes from Keemari to the sea at frequent intervals. Meanwhile the accumulation of silt was allowed to go on in the harbour, and in April 1863 a notice was issued that vessels of not more than sixteen feet draught should be despatched to Kurrachee. Mr. Parkes paid a second visit to Kurrachee in 1864, and found that little progress had been made. It would be tiresome to follow the details. Mr. Parkes, who has a third time made a personal inspection of the works, has urged that they should be at once prosecuted. It is said that the railway embankment parallel to the Napier mole is to be removed, and that the railway traffic to Keamari is to be carried on by the Chineh creek line.

COURT-MARTIAL AT POONA.—We learn that a court-martial had been ordered to assemble at Poona on the 2nd of September to try Lieutenant Robert Dick Lowe, cadre of the 48th Regiment Madras Native Infantry, attached to the 12th Regiment Madras Native Infantry, on the following charge:—For conduct unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman, and to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, in the following instances:—First Instance: In having, at Poona, on or about the 28th day of July, 1868, made use of, in the regimental mess, the following provoking, grossly insulting language to Lieutenant Charles Woolley Blenkin, of the 12th Regiment Madras Native Infantry: "You are nothing more or less than a spy, to find out what I did, and go and report it like a sneaking spy,"—or words to the like effect. Second Instance: In having, at the place and time mentioned in the first instance of the charge, used provoking language at the regimental mess to Lieutenant Charles Woolley Blenkin, by saying to that officer in a mocking and sneering tone—"What were you afraid of last night, eh? Why did you stop at the door?"—or words to the like effect. Third Instance: In having, at the place and time mentioned in the first instance of the charge, seized a tumbler and made use, at the regimental mess, of the following grossly insulting and provoking language:—"My ears burn to throw this at somebody's head,"—or words to the like effect; at the same time looking at, and leaning across the table towards Lieutenant Charles Woolley Blenkin, thereby indicating that he, the said Lieutenant Blenkin, was the person to whom the above specified grossly insulting and provoking language was addressed. The above being in breach of the Articles of War.

THE PROGRESS OF THE GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY WORKS.—We have been assured that the works on the Great India Peninsula Railway from Beerh to Jubbulpore are being pushed on to completion with vigour, and that the line right up to Bombay will probably be opened to the public by June, 1870. At Jubbulpore the works connected with the roadway are rapidly progressing, and within twelve months the first section of fifty-two miles, including the viaduct over the Nerbudda, will be ready. This will bring the civil station of Nursingpore within a few hours run of Jubbulpore and there is a likelihood of this small section being made available, when it is complete, to the public. The next section of ninety miles from Nursingpore to the Towah Nuddee, was considerably injured by the floods of 1867; but the subsequent repairs and reconstructions are progressing. From the Towah to Hurda embraces the next section of sixty miles on which there is little remaining to be done; on the succeeding section, however, of forty miles from Hurda to Beerh, twenty-one miles from Khundwa, there is much important work to be finished, which creates the difficulty to completed portions of the line being made available to the public before the whole length is ready; but it is believed that extraordinary efforts will, nevertheless, be made to utilise the section between Jubbulpore and Nursingpore when it is finished, perhaps in concert with the East India Railway, whose rolling stock arrangements will then be in better trim. This concession will be of no avail to the English mail, or to travellers homeward, or returning to India, who must continue to use the carriages plying between Jubbulpore and Nagpore until June, 1870, by which time we hope to see the iron link between the rival cities of Calcutta and Bombay an accomplished fact; and there can scarcely be one who will consider that time a day too early.—Delhi Gazette.

COMMANDS—PRIVILEGE LEAVE.

Adj. Gen.'s Office, Head Qrs., Poona, Sept. 1.—No. 749.—The following circular memorandum, by H.E. the Commander-in-Chief in India, No. 84, July 21, 1868, is published:—

Much inconvenience to the public service, attended at times with the practical stoppage of business, has been found to result from an innovation, which now frequently obtains, of general officers and others commanding stations, and their chief staff officers, both being absent at the same time on privilege leave.

The consequence of such arrangement is, that the officer temporarily exercising the command is frequently placed at a great disadvantage, from the fact of his having an inexperienced officer attached to him, who, in addition to being new to the work, is ignorant of the views and opinions of the absent general officer on many local and other important questions. He is therefore deprived of that advice and assistance which an officer in temporary command has a right to expect.

The Commander-in-Chief has no wish to interfere with, or curtail the indulgence of, privilege leave, as allowed by the Government regulations, to general and staff officers. All he desires is that in future general officers and others will so arrange that the officer commanding the division, district, brigade, or station, and the assistant adjutant general, brigade major, or station staff officer, shall not both be on privilege leave at the same time.

In the event of the senior officer of the division or district, on whom the temporary command devolves, not being at the head quarters station, he should remain at and command from his own cantonment; the assistant adjutant general or brigade major joining him, and remaining with him until the officer exercising the permanent command rejoins. The rest of the staff should remain at the division or district head quarters.

In making these arrangements it must be kept in mind that privilege leave is not allowed to entail any extra expense to Government; and all travelling expenses connected with the movements of the staff officer must be privately arranged for by the general officer before he proceeds on leave.

DEATH OF THE HON. PROSSUNNO COOMAR TAGORE.—We believe that but one universal feeling of sorrow will pervade all classes of the community at the announcement of the death of the Hon. Prossunno Coommar Tagore, C.S.I., who died, after a protracted illness, on Sunday morning last, of aneurism of the heart, at the age of sixty-seven. He is almost the last survivor of those well-known native gentlemen who were the first to devote themselves to the general improvement of their fellow-countrymen, and who were always regarded with the greatest respect and esteem by Europeans. Inheriting an ample fortune, Prossunno, from early youth, devoted his attention to the study of the literature and laws of his country, as well as to the acquirement of English, in which he soon obtained such a proficiency that almost his first public act was the starting of a paper called the Indian Reformer. His active mind soon led him into other paths, and his connection with Dwarkanauth Tagore induced him to enter largely into mercantile speculations, in which he was unfortunate. To retrieve his fortune he commenced practice at the Sudder Bar, where his great knowledge of the land tenures of India, as well as of the Acts and Regulations, soon placed him at the head of his profession. He was for some time Government pleader, in which position he obtained the respect of the judges before whom he practised. From the Sudder Bar he again returned after a few years to public life, and was one of the original founders of the present British Indian Association. Shortly after the late Legislative Council was established, Prossunno was appointed clerk-assistant to the Council. This situation he filled for many years with honour to himself and to the satisfaction of Government, and it is not speaking too much in his favour to say that every law that passed through that Council in any way relating to land was in a great measure the work of Prossunno Coommar Tagore. He subsequently became a member of the first Bengal Legislative Council, and only last year was called to the Legislative Council of the Governor-general, where however his health seldom permitted him to appear. His munificent gifts and charities for the benefit of his countrymen are too well known to need repetition.—Englishman, Sept. 1.

COLONEL DE LISLE.—The Hindu Reformer of Sept. 1 says that rumour is now busy circulating a report that Colonel De Lisle, R.E., late Consulting Engineer to Government, Railway Department, is likely to be appointed agent of the G.I.P. Railway, in the room of Major-General H. Rivers, R.E., resigned. How far this information has any foundation in truth we do not undertake to say, but give it just as it has reached us, though we would take occasion at the same time to observe, that in the event of the report proving true, the G.I.P. Railway shall have ample grounds to felicitate itself upon the new nomination; for whether in or out of the service, Colonel De Lisle is almost without a superior, and he is certainly inferior to none. Few gentlemen possess the ability and experience which he commands. He is therefore likely to prove a very good agent.

Home.

Maximum number of marks, 3,400.

INDIAN PRISONS.—At the Friday meeting of the Social Science Congress at Birmingham, Miss Carpenter read a paper "On the Gaols of India," from official reports. She dwelt at length upon the disgraceful state of the prisons in that empire. Sir W. Crofton suggested the establishment of model gaols in each Indian Presidency. After some discussion, the following resolution was unanimously passed, on the motion of Lord Teignmouth, seconded by Lord Houghton:—"That this section, believing from the Indian official reports that the state of prison administration in that country is not in accordance with the principles which have been adopted here, and not calculated to advance the moral and physical interests of the people of India, it is resolved that the Council be recommended to urge, by a deputation waiting upon Lord Mayo, the necessity of investigation by the Government, in conjunction with the heads of Council."

SERIOUS COLLISION AND LOSS OF LIFE.—The Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company's steamer Syria, Captain Christian, which arrived at Southampton early on Saturday morning, reports having been in collision with a pilot cutter about half-past seven on the previous evening, whereby at least four lives were lost. It appears the Syria was making the Needle passage, and when about half-way between Portland Bill and the Needles Light-house, she descried a small vessel burning a light, signalling as if wishing to know whether the steamer required a pilot. The Syria, having a pilot on board, made no signal to the cutter to come alongside, but she, however, did so, and before she could wear off again she was struck under the port paddle-wheel, and immediately sank. Four men were seen on the deck, and no traces of these were afterwards discovered. The Syria remained on the spot for about an hour, and picked up pieces of wreck, but no traces of a human being were seen, and she then proceeded on to Southampton. The cutter was supposed to belong to Yarmouth, Isle of Wight.

BANDA AND KIRWEE PRIZE-MONEY.—The following letter appeared in the Daily News:—"Sir,—Poor soldiers and discharged men are continually asking when the wearisome delay in paying the Banda and Kirwee prize-money is to cease. It is now verging on eleven years since the capture, and two years since the Royal warrant ordering the distribution, and it is not yet accomplished. The Government of India, on the 14th July, directed a third distribution of 120 rupees per share, which by this time has been paid to all claimants in India; and although the official documents have long since reached the India-office, yet this establishment refuses to pay a shilling to the discharged men or others in this country. It is well known there is a vast accumulation of money in the Bank of England called 'unclaimed prize-money,' which, although so called, has no doubt been accumulated by a similar indefensible process to that pursued in the present instance; and as lapse of time is the means to convert claimed prize-money into unclaimed, there can be hardly a doubt but that a vast lump of Banda and Kirwee prize also will be thrown into the heap. It is remembered that the Secretary of State for India last session applied to Parliament for a Bill to dispose of, for State purposes, 'Indian unclaimed prize-money,' and it is not forgotten that we hear frequently of 'British justice;' but what shall we say of that justice if it withholds the soldier's prize-money from him until he and all belonging to him have disappeared from the face of the earth, and his money then taken as unclaimed and appropriated to State purposes? Can this be called justice to the soldier? It may be well assured that Britain never contemplated this treatment of her soldiers. I trust you will allow this matter to be ventilated in your powerful journal.—I am, &c., SUCU CUIQUE.—Sept. 30."

THE DELHI AND LONDON BANK (LIMITED).—At the half-yearly general meeting of shareholders of this bank, held on the 28th ult., the report of the directors with the accounts was unanimously adopted, a dividend at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum having been previously declared. After an expression of confidence in the direction and management, the meeting terminated.

A CHARACTER OF KING THEODORE.—When I first met Theodore, in January, 1866, he must have been about forty-eight years of age. His complexion was darker than that of the majority of his countrymen, the nose slightly curved, the mouth large, the lips so small as hardly to be perceived. Of middle size, well-knit, wiry rather than muscular, he excelled as a horseman, in the use of the spear, and on foot would tire his hardest followers. The expression of his dark eyes, slightly depressed, was strange: if he was in good humour they were soft, with a kind of gazelle-like timidity about him that made one love him; but when angry the fierce and bloodshot eye seemed to shed fire. In moments of violent passion his whole aspect was frightful: his black visage acquired an ashy hue, his thin compressed lips left but a whitish margin around the mouth, his very hair stood erect, and his whole deportment was a terrible illustration of savage and ungovernable fury. Yet he excelled in the art of duping his fellowmen. Even a few days before his death he had still, when we met him, all the dignity of a sovereign, the amiability and good breeding of the most accomplished "gentleman." His smile was so attractive, his words were so sweet and gracious, that one could hardly believe that the affable monarch was but a consummate dissembler. He never perpetrated a deed of treachery or cruelty without pleading some specious excuse, so as to convey the impression that in all his actions he was guided by a sense of justice. For example, he plundered Dembea because the inhabitants were too friendly towards Europeans, and Gondar because one of our messengers had been betrayed by the inhabitants of that city. He destroyed Zagé, a large and populous city, because he pretended that a priest had been rude to him. He cast into chains his adopted father, Cantiba Hailo, because he had taken into his service a female servant he had dismissed. Tesemma Engeddah, the hereditary chief of Gabinte, fell under his displeasure, because after a battle against the rebels he had shown himself "too severe," and our first head jailer was taken to the camp and put in chains because he had "formerly been a friend" of the King of Shoa. I could adduce hundreds of instances to illustrate his habitual hypocrisy. In our case he arrested us because we had not brought the former captives with us; Mr. Stern he nearly killed, merely for putting his hand to his face, and he imprisoned Consul Cameron for going to the Turks instead of bringing him back an answer to his letter.—Dr. Blanc's "Narrative of Captivity in Abyssinia."

Spirit of the Home Journals.

MISS CARPENTER AND FEMALE EDUCATION IN INDIA.

The Daily News again directs attention to the noble effort which is being made by Miss Mary Carpenter to promote female education in India. Miss Carpenter's journey to that country enabled her to point out what was the great want of its female population. Education in India is almost entirely in the hands of men, and the customs of the country withdraw girls from all association with the other sex at an age which prevents their education from being carried on beyond the merest rudiments of knowledge. Miss Carpenter has therefore proposed to make an attempt to provide a supply of female teachers for girls' schools. To do this she proposes the establishment of Female Normal Schools, and her representations, backed by those of educated and influential native gentlemen, have induced the Indian Government to make a grant of £1,500 a-year for five years to each of the Presidency capitals for such purpose. Miss Carpenter, however, feels that Englishwomen must set the example, and make the beginning, as the work of teaching is unpopular in India, and Indian women are hardly likely to come forward to fill the normal schools till the position of female teachers is more assured. Miss Carpenter is therefore about to proceed to Ahmedabad, which city she found most ripe for an effort at female instruction. She will be accompanied by an adopted daughter, and will be followed by two English ladies who have devoted themselves to the work. At Ahmedabad they will found the first normal training school; and Miss Carpenter's hope is, that in a year or two they may be in a position to avail themselves of the Government grant. Miss Carpenter pays the expenses of her own share in this preliminary work from her own private means, but she has appealed to the public for aid in meeting the cost of the passage of her fellow workers and the expense of furnishing and maintaining the institution. We are certain that this appeal has but to be generally known in order to be amply responded to. Miss Carpenter is too well-known for the philanthropic labours of many years for any appeal of hers to need extraneous recommendation and support. This effort to raise and benefit the women of India without attempting any interference with their religion is an eminently philanthropic conception. It necessarily meets with less enthusiastic support than efforts conceived in a purely missionary sense; but it is in itself a missionary effort of the highest character. It is a mission of that knowledge, culture, and civilisation which prepares the way for higher things. Miss Carpenter sets out on this mission, we believe, in about a fortnight, and that she should carry proofs of the sympathy of English women for their Indian sisters is in every way desirable. Western civilisation has in some degree penetrated male society in India, but has hardly touched the women. Miss Carpenter and her fellow-workers will endeavour to find channels through which Western influences can reach the women, and through them enter the domestic life of the Indian people. Western civilisation may gild the surface of Eastern society, but can never reach its heart till it wins the female half. Miss Carpenter sees the way to do this, and that her way is the true one, educated Hindoos and enlightened Anglo-Indians admit. She will at any rate give evidence of her own belief in it by trying the experiment herself; and the good wishes and, we hope, the substantial help of her countrymen and countrywomen will go with her, to cheer her in her task.

EXTRACT FROM PREFACE.

"I am not without a hope that these memoirs may be regarded, in some sort, as a Biographical History of India from the days of Cornwallis to the days of Canning. * * I have not attempted, indeed, to write History; the work has grown up spontaneously out of the Lives of the great men who make history * * and, unless the ability of the execution has fallen far short of the sincerity of the design, I have done something, in these pages, to do honour to a race of public servants unsurpassed in the history of the world. * * I have striven to show how youths, from the middle-class families of our British Islands, have gone forth into the great Eastern world, and by their own unaided exertions carved their way to fame and fortune.

"J. W. KAYE."

From the ATHENÆUM.

"We say at once that more admirably-written and interesting narratives are scarcely to be found in any literature. We do not envy the man who could read without deep emotion the lives here given of Conolly, Lawrence, and Nicholson; and we doubt whether the whole range of history can show more perfect characters. Nobler subjects of biography could not have been chosen, and higher praise it is impossible to bestow on a writer than to say, as we do of this author, that he is fully equal to such a theme. * * Mr. Kaye's 'Lives of Indian Officers' will take a high place among the standard books of England."

From the SPECTATOR.

"A cadet, an artillery officer, an editor, an employee of the first rank, a successful historian, Mr. Kaye unites in his own person all the qualifications requisite to the biographer of the great Indian soldiers."

From the EXAMINER.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS

Are the finest medicine for dilapidated constitutions, disordered liver, bile, and indigestion. The wonderful efficacy of this salutary medicine and the good effects produced in patients suffering from the above complaints would appear incredible if not confirmed by daily proofs of the cures effected by them, and the permanent benefit derived from their use. These invaluable Pills soothe and strengthen the nervous system, purify the blood, regulate the secretions, and invigorate the constitution. Diseases flee before them. They are composed of vegetable extracts, unmingled with a grain of any mineral or noxious substance. They may, therefore, be given with the utmost confidence, and with perfect safety, to delicate females and young children. They cannot do harm.

of blood, &c., &c. To public speakers and vocalists they will be found invaluable, as they impart a clear and beautiful tone to the voice. Free from any preparation

PAINFUL TEETH, or DISEASED
STUMPS EXTRACTED WITHOUT PAIN. No
chloroform, and perfectly safe.

"There is no shame to our manhood if we distrust our own ability to endure the anguish of the body."
It is no secret that of late local anaesthesia has been produced to such a degree, that the patient, retaining his consciousness, can watch the surgeon's knife as it cuts to cure, and yet be without the slightest sensation
of physical suffering."—Daily Telegraph, July 13, 1866.

TEETH PAINLESSLY STOPPED with Permanent
Enamel Cement of the exact natural colour. Guaranteed
not to turn black, or make the Teeth look unsightly.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER AS A BASIS FOR
ARTIFICIAL TEETH.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER.—This material being soft
and elastic, no springs or fastenings are required; the acids of the stomach produce no effect on it; it fits to the mouth with an accuracy which renders detection
impossible, and it is entirely free from taste or smell.
Where the gums are in any way tender, and great absorption has taken place, this system will prove invaluable.

INSPECTION OF MODELS AND SPECIMENS.

Feeling that illustrative specimens of the above improvements would impart a more accurate appreciation of their object, effect, and value, than any written description, a number of models have been executed representing the adaptation of Teeth, and sets to several different shapes, sizes, and defects of the mouth and gums. These models furnish a clear, practical exposition of the principles adopted, and may be seen every day at Mr. Webb's residence, free of charge.

His Treatise, "Dental Mechanics and Surgery," which explains the above painless and inimitable system, free by post, or on application to Mr. WEBB, 27, NEW BOND-STREET (late with Mr. ESKELL, Surgeon-Dentist, 8, Grosvenor-street).

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, September 15; Agra, September 12; Calcutta, September 10; Madras, September 9.

From the Hazara frontier we have no fresh accounts of war-like doings. General Wilde's force was still waiting the word to move on. Meanwhile the Hussunzais, against whom the long-expected movement is said to be specially directed, were keeping themselves as much as possible in the background. There is a division, it seems, in their counsels; a small minority being for resistance, while the large remainder would gladly flee into some safe shelter during the advance of our troops. After all, it seems that the actual invading force may not consist of more than 7,000 men, with a reserve of 1,600 in Hazara. What becomes of the remaining ten or eleven thousand, who were reported on their way up? Are they all to make up the reserve? Two strong brigades with ten guns, under Brigadiers Bright and Vaughan, anyhow form the advanced force, which was to move in two columns towards the Black Mountain. A reconnoitring party on the Kubbul Hills came in sight of a breastwork manned by a few dozen of the enemy. No shots however were exchanged. The enemy were said to be keeping up their courage on the hills fronting Oghee with tom-toms and waiving of flags; but no one expected them to show fight when the time came.

THE Commander-in-Chief has specially thanked the 20th Punjab Infantry for their "admirable march" from Lahore to Abbotabad "during the most inclement weather." Not to speak of the distance only, 232 miles got over in eleven days, there was the "intense" heat of the season, and the two rivers, Chenab and Jhelum, "being in flood, were necessarily traversed by boats." Nor was that all, for "it is matter of record that the Chenab alone is between two and three miles broad."

Two telegrams received last week direct from India give us much later news from the Punjab frontier. According to one of them, which only took twenty hours in its passage home from Bombay, General Wilde advanced with part of his force from Oghee in the Agroah valley on the 3rd October. On the heights above Koodgullie—a pass, we presume, leading into the hills on the north side of Hazara—the enemy made some kind of stand; but owing to their weak numbers, to say nothing of the fire from our Snider rifles, were speedily driven off, and the troops were to advance again the next morning. A second telegram, dating three days later from Bombay, informed us that the hill tribes, already tired of offering a vain resistance, were endeavouring to make terms with the Indian Government. If this be true, and the terms we offer be not too hard for their acceptance, it is possible that the campaign may come to an earlier end than the scale of our preparations seemed to foretoken. But it is useless to speculate while we are still in the dark as to the ulterior purposes of the Indian Government.

THE posture of affairs on the North-Western Frontier would be easier to make out, if we knew exactly on what terms the Akhoond of Swat stands with his neighbours and with ourselves. It is commonly believed that he has turned his arms against the Wahabees or Hindustani settlers in Bonair, and forced them to take refuge with the neighbouring tribe of Chiggunzais. That hardly looks like enmity to the British power. But according to "subsequent advices" he has made peace with his late foes, on condition, we presume, of their making common cause with him and the neighbouring tribes against the Feringhie. His son is even named as one of the two chief leaders in the coming crescentade. If this be true, the Akhoond must by this time have found good reason to repent his rashness.

THE last sitting of the Bombay Bank Commission came off on September 9. Messrs. J. Stuart, Balfour, and Chapman were examined chiefly as to the best way of supervising the Bank's affairs in future, whether by one or more Government directors, by a Government auditor, or by a Government inspector. They were also consulted as to the expediency of the present financial arrangements between the Government and the Bank. According to Mr. Chapman, those arrangements benefit the Government more than the Bank. Mr. Stuart held that the relations between the two parties could not be satisfactory, so long as the Bank of Bengal retained its agency in Bombay. At the end of the sitting Sir C. Jackson gave notice of the Commission's intended departure by the steamer of September 26. The scene will now shift to England.

AN end is reported to the little war in Keonghur or Keonjhur, whichever is the right spelling. Two of the ringleaders have given themselves up. These with the Ranie, the real author of the outbreak, and some other prisoners, have been sent off to Cuttack with one of the Madras regiments. The other was to return at once to Ranchie. Two hundred armed police remain in the district under Lieutenant Johnstone. There has after all been very little fighting, but much sickness among the troops employed. A difficult country and an unhealthy climate were their chief foes. The Bengal police seem to have vied with the Madras sepoys in doing their duty.

LAST year's epidemic of cholera has told upon the death-rate of the British troops in India. Out of 1,071 deaths in the year, 479 were due to cholera, the seeds of which were carried in all directions from the Hurdwar fair. Fever, apoplexy, and liver disease helped to raise the percentage of deaths to close upon thirty-one per thousand. As usual, the soldiers' wives and children were the heaviest sufferers; the former losing 46·21 and the latter 96·91 per thousand. But for the cholera however the year would have been a remarkably healthy one. In Bengal Proper, Behar, Oudh, and Southern India, the percentage of deaths from cholera was comparatively trifling. In Northern India, where it raged the fiercest, so little good was done by moving the men out into camp, that the Commander-in-Chief has ordered a further inquiry into the use of such a step.

A WORSE scourge even than cholera seems to be impending over no small part of India. For want of some of the rain which has washed away the villages and ruined the crops of Bombay and Bengal, the greater part of Northern India is trembling on the brink of famine. In the Punjab atta had gone up to eleven seers the rupee. There, in Rajpootana, and all over the North-Western Provinces, the natives were offering up frequent prayers for rain. The Ganges Canal was said to be running low, and the premature coolness of the weather seemed to forbid the likelihood of more rain. In some parts of Bengal the same want of moisture at a critical moment threatens the same results to the rice crops which in Lower Bengal have suffered from an excess of moisture.

THE official reports of the floods in Western India tell a sad tale of damage done over a wide tract of country. In Ahmedabad 9,566 houses, valued at £100,000, have been destroyed; 2,000 in Veerungaum; 1,000 in Dholka and Patree; besides many hundreds in other parts of Guzerat. Several villages have been washed away, and the damage everywhere, to houses, crops, live stock, and movable property has been very great. Kaira, Baroda, Surat, and Broach have suffered only less than Ahmedabad. In the last-named city twenty-seven inches of rain fell in four days. A great part of the cotton, sugar, and grain crops in Guzerat has been destroyed, but the wheat could be sown again. Happily the loss of life has been very small—hardly a score of persons known to have perished. Measures of relief were at once instituted by Government, and the grants of public money have been quickly supplemented by private subscriptions, in which the natives have borne their full share.

THE rewards so lavishly showered on the heroes of the bloodless campaign in Abyssinia have failed to give the needful satisfaction in all quarters. People complain that after all too many of the wrong men came in for the highest honours, so that some of the right men were left without their share. Captain Holland, for instance, according to the Times of India, has only got "an evanescent brevet majority" for doing the real work of Colonel Phayre's department. Major Mignon again, who really headed the Commissariat, gains only a step in rank. Captain Hand, of the Transport Train, deserved something more than a brevet majority. Perhaps he did, but the Times ought by this time to know that honour and desert are often strangers to each other in this world. But all this clamouring for reward on account of duty done seems rather childish. When the next campaign takes place, we hope that everybody will be remembered. Make every private a corporal, and every subaltern a field officer; give all the camp-followers pensions for life; and make the head of the Commissariat a field-marshal. Even then however we fear the old grumbling would make itself heard. There is no pleasing everybody.

IF Prosunno Coomar Tagore has left £2,000 to his family idol, and nothing but his name to his disinherited Christian son, he has attempted that sort of vain amends which people of his temper are wont to do. The charity which ought to have begun at home has relieved itself in bequests of £10,000 to the Native Hospital, £10,000 to the Calcutta Charitable Society, and £30,000 for endowing a Law-Professor in the Calcutta University. We hope his son will not greatly grumble at the charity which leaves him penniless for the benefit of his countrymen at large.

ONE of Lord Dalhousie's creations, Port Canning, is threatened with early extinction. A year's grace has been conceded to it by the Bengal Government. If at the end of that time it shows no signs of material amendment, if the trade that ought to have benefited the younger city at the head of the Mutlah still persists in crowding up the Hooghly, Port Canning will be left to its fate; for, says Mr. Grey, "the Government would not be justified in imposing on the public revenues further expenditure on account of the port, in the face of the fact that the result of all the endeavours to develop Port Canning as an auxiliary port to Calcutta, and as a commercial town, has been a failure," in spite of the £200,000 disbursed for that end by the State, to say nothing of £600,000 laid out on a railway which nobody will use. The Supreme Government however has not yet finally spoken, and many people are still confident of a great recovery for the place in good time. The railway has only just fallen into the hands of Government; the Rice Mills are hardly finished; and the stores despatched from the India-office have yet to reach the Mutlah—all good reasons for further delay.

LORD NAPIER—not the new one—left Madras again early in September on a six weeks' tour through the Tinnevely districts.

IN Madras itself the great topic of the day is the question of a breakwater, once more brought to the front by the collapse of the pier. This time, we hope, the question will get far beyond the stage of mere talk. Two schemes are already competing for acceptance. The first, that of M. de Closets, C.E., includes a breakwater a mile long, at a cost of a million sterling. M. Norfor, on the other hand, suggests the formation of a regular harbour at the Adyar, with docks between "Parry Castle" and the river.

THERE are no grounds, we understand, for the Englishman's statement that the Hon. Ashley Eden is going out as Secretary to Lord Mayo.

THE Times of India does no more than justice to the late Sir H. Lawrence in correcting the Daily Telegraph's absurd assertion about Sir Henry's betraying "a melancholy failure to comprehend the mutiny." It was a wonderfully bold misstatement for a journal which keeps an eminent Anglo-Indian or two on its staff—a misstatement we had hardly thought possible even to ordinary British ignorance of things Indian.

PEOPLE in India are looking eagerly forward to the happy moment when the Duke of Edinburgh is to set foot on Indian ground. As his Royal Highness, the captain of the Galatea, will not in all likelihood set sail before November, and has to call at various places by the way, his arrival in Calcutta will about coincide with the departure of the cold weather thence. The true season for durbars and receptions will have passed away, though the need for holding them will remain. If the Duke should find the work too hot for him however, he has only to get up steam and make the quickest of his way down the Hooghly, unless he prefers an easy railway ride to the foot of the Himalayas. His progress out there will anyhow lend some of its own splendour to the first appearance of the new Viceroy.

ANOTHER distinguished native is dead—the Hon. Gajala Lutchmanarsu Chutty, C.S.I., Member of the Madras Legislative Council, aged fifty years. In his earlier years he too displayed an active interest in the development of Hindu journalism and vernacular education. His eminence not only as an enlightened native, but still more perhaps as head of a great commercial house in Madras, led to his appointment in 1866 to a place in the Legislative Council. Failing health however is said to have hindered his taking much part in the Council's proceedings. Last year he received a Companionship of the Star of India—for what services we are not told.

THE SAMNUGGUR TRAGEDY.

THE accident of March last on the Eastern Bengal Railway furnishes one more instance of the wonderful ease with which any rumour, however wild, will fasten on minds predisposed through ignorance or prejudice to believe anything. We all know how very hard it is to get at the true version of almost any fact even from witnesses the most truthfully inclined. John Bull himself under certain conditions will accept and propagate the wildest statements on no evidence at all. People of a more imaginative turn have naturally a keener appetite for untruths, and will let their bodily senses become willing slaves of their excited fancies. Our Hindu fellow-subjects seem pre-eminently gifted with the talent for imagining vain things. The worst of it is that so many of the stories they are prone to spread and swallow are very fruitful of mischief to their white rulers. Instances enough will readily occur to any one who has lived in India, or learnt anything of Indian history during the last twelve years. In the present case, as often happens, the mountain of falsehood grew out of a small heap of genuine fact. Samnuggur was the scene of a real accident, a collision resulting in the loss of ten or twelve lives, and in hurts more or less serious to about fifty others. A nervous or bewildered pointsman reversed the points while a train full of passengers was rushing by. Half the train being thus violently dislocated and thrown off the line crashed into another train that stood in a siding waiting its turn to go on. In the darkness and confusion that followed, it was easy even for frightened bystanders to imagine the worst, and a pretty tale of horror was soon spreading throughout Bengal. The deaths were multiplied, in regular Eastern fashion, by twenty, while the wounded were reckoned, with wonderful moderation, at not more than two hundred. It was also given out that many bodies had been burned on the spot to evade inquiry, and that many more had been hurried away in a special train to Kooshtia, where they were all tumbled into the Ganges. Horrible stories were also told regarding the treatment of the wounded, some of whom were bundled into carriages full of dead, while the rest lay untended about the platform for several hours.

So widely were these rumours spread, that at last the Local Government ordered an inquiry that should serve to make their falsehood as widely known. The Railway Passengers' Protection Society, having got the concession for which at first they had vainly clamoured, soon began to find fault with the way in which the inquiry was managed. Being refused leave, we think unwisely, to send an attorney to watch the proceedings, they declined to furnish their promised share of witnesses, and protested beforehand against the Committee's conclusions, whatever these might be. The inquiry however was carried on without them. Every effort was made by the Committee to get at the truth. Reporters for the native press attended the sittings, of which fifteen were held in seven different places. A great many witnesses were carefully examined with the help of two Bengallie interpreters; and the police were set to try and winnow out the chaff from the evidence of some of the more extravagant witnesses. One of these latter, the native who professed to have seen the burning of the dead bodies on the night of the accident, could not find the spot which he had just before carefully described as the scene of that dark ceremony. It is curious to note too that the men who witnessed the most dreadful parts of the asserted tragedy, who saw piles of dead and dying, wounded men vainly crying for help and water, and bodies heaped for burning on the broken carriages or packed off to drown in the Ganges, stood idly by at the time of the accident, and by their own confession gave no help to those who wanted it. "Did the wounded call for help?" one of them is asked. "Yes." "Why did you not help them?" "I was not asked." Another simply states that he gave no help. A third excuses himself for his selfish backwardness by pleading his scared state of mind and the custom which forbids men of one caste from touching the dead bodies of another.

The results of the inquiry reduce the tale to credible proportions. Out of 257 passengers ten died outright and three afterwards, while not more than fifty in all were wounded. This, no doubt, is bad enough. The wounded by their own showing, "were treated with great care and attention by the railway officers and servants." Three surgeons with dressers looked after all who were hurt. The story of wounded men left alone on the platform explains itself by the fact that two men were "designedly placed on the Barrackpore platform by the surgeon," as the best mode of treating them for the time. The labours of the officials were greatly hindered by the apathy of the bystanders—not an uncommon event in India—who "were able to assist, were asked to assist, and refused to assist." And these are the people who brought charges of neglect against those who amidst all drawbacks did their duty as they best could! We are told however that many native gentlemen and some villagers "took the wounded into their houses and treated them kindly."

As for the dead bodies, all that could be found were laid out for recognition a whole day and a-half; about as long a time as such a thing can safely be done in such a climate. The story of dead and wounded being carried off by train to Kooshtia resolves itself into the simple process of shunting carriages in the dark; while the alleged burning of dead bodies dwindles into a bonfire of broken carriages, lighted for the greater comfort of the wounded. Finally, with regard to the treatment of the police who came up to help, it turns out that no time was lost in sending for them, that they "were not turned out of the station, nor prevented from seeing what was going on;" but that those who came up first, being "totally unfit for the emergency," were "very properly prevented from interfering with the clearing of the wreck and removal of dead and wounded." All property found moreover was given into their charge. How much of it ever came out of their hands again is a question which the committee wisely shirks answering.

The accident itself seems directly traceable to one of the commonest sources of disaster on Indian lines. It arose from the pointsman "reversing his points during the passing of a train, which action is apparently involuntary, and arises from want of nerve and the irresolution common among the natives of this country." Had the points been locked, the accident would not have happened. But the system of simple lever points, that need some force to hold them over during the passage of a train, however well suited to English pointsmen, is evidently fraught with danger in the hands of the irresolute, weaknerved Bengallie.

WHAT NEXT, AND NEXT?

THE recent telegrams from Bombay set at rest all speculations as to the further advance of the army placed a few weeks ago under the command of General Wilde. Whatever else is still uncertain, we know once for all that the force got together on the Hazara frontier is not to be dispersed because the Hussunzais have run away. On the 3rd of this month General Wilde had marched from Oghee into the enemy's country at the head of an army which, including all reserves, was reckoned some time back at twenty thousand strong. Some such move indeed seemed inevitably to follow the assembling of so large a force; for who could believe that twenty thousand men were hurried up into Hazara merely to renew the feat of that French king who, having marched up the hill, straightway marched down again? Evidently something more than a mere demonstration was in the wind against an enemy whose actual strength would have been easily outmatched by a single brigade of British troops. It is clear, too, that Sir John Lawrence, if he did at first set his face against any movement on so large a scale, has yielded his own opinion either to the arguments employed by Sir William Mansfield and Sir Henry Durand, or to the teaching, maybe, of those later events which to us in this country are still a secret. Are any other tribes mixed up with the Hussunzais in this present quarrel? One of the telegrams received last week from Bombay seems to suggest an answer in the affirmative, for it tells us that "the resistance of the hill-tribes is coming to an end," and that "some of the belligerents are endeavouring to make terms with the Government." Now, we have hitherto heard of the Hussunzais alone as being in arms, a tribe whose turbulence was easily quelled in 1852 by about nine hundred of our soldiers armed chiefly with the Brown Bess of the period. Have any other of the tribes between Hazara and the left bank of the Indus since taken up their cause, at a time too when all the Indian papers were assuring us that the little Hussunzai squall had blown itself out, and that no more clouds were visible anywhere along the horizon? Must we suppose that the people of Swat and Bonair and the Wahabee fanatics of Sitana were merely cutting each other's throats and plundering each other's goods, by way of blind or prelude to some preconcerted movement against a common foe, whose love of order and of peaceful trade was becoming too sore a burden on their lawless habits and unbending orthodoxy? Or is General Wilde's march from Oghee the inevitable result of some deep-laid plan conceived in the viceregal council-room months before a few score of Hussunzai raiders swooped down on the lonely police-station in the Agroah Valley?

Be that as it may, we cannot help feeling some little anxiety about the probable issue of the present move. Where will it end and how? Ever since 1850 the military snowball on the North-West Frontier has kept rolling and growing bigger. During the first six years our frontier campaigns, however incessant, seldom required the efforts of more than two or three thousand men. In 1856 however more than 4,500 were sent against the Meeranzais; and a still larger force had to rout out the Sitana fanatics in the year following. In 1861 more than five thousand men were employed against the Wazeries. The Sitana campaign of 1863 brought nearly six thousand of our troops into the field. Yet larger was the scale required for the campaign of 1866 against the Afreedies. And now we find twenty thousand of all arms mustered for a grand move, Heaven knows whither, against some new disturbers of the public peace. Here is a force some thousands stronger than that which drove the Sikhs from the fields of Moodkee and Chilianwalla, and as strong as that with which Sir John Keane conquered Afghanistan. The little gathering has swollen into an army almost as numerous as the whole population of the hills that border Hazara. Whither is that army wending, and for what purpose?

One would almost imagine that Cashmere or Kabul was to be its ultimate goal; only nobody has yet assumed or hinted at the open disloyalty of Rundheer Singh, and no English or Anglo-Indian statesman dreams of annexing Afghanistan. But perhaps we are going merely to rectify our frontier by taking in some hill country on the left or the right bank of the Indus, or both? Even in that case so powerful a force seems a mere waste of strength. Or has the Indian Government turned vicious against the Wahabee exiles from British India, and made up its stern mind to extinguish that source of danger at any price? Well, we should think that even a hangman's job of that nature might be thoroughly executed by half the number now marching under General Wilde's orders. Anyhow there is moderation in all things, and in this instance we seem to be taking an infinite deal of trouble for a comparatively poor result.

We may safely put out of court all speculations founded on the idea of any hostile movement got up between Shere Ali and his Russian or Persian neighbours. Enough to remember that the new Ameer has sufficient trouble on his hands without making an enemy of a Power that could any day march another avenging army to Cabul, if it saw good reason to do so. It is absurd to suppose that the Affghans have yet forgotten the way in which Nott and Pollock wiped out the memories of Jugdulluk and the Khoord-Cabul. No fear of Affghan prowess would ever keep us out of Afghanistan, once it seemed worth our while to enter in. The time for that move however is surely not yet come.

But suppose these twenty thousand men succeed in teaching some person or persons unknown a useful lesson, what then? How long will the teaching serve its purpose? One might compound with a little more annexation, if thereby the peace of the frontier could be assured for, say half a century. But is it not likelier that a few years hence another outbreak would have to be dealt with by a yet larger force and a new annexation? There is the difficulty which we have to face. The heads of the Hydra will keep growing again, and where is that game to stop? Unlucky was the day that first saw us masters of Peshawar. The line of the Indus once overstepped, it is very hard to say where we should or might ultimately fix the north-western bounds of our Indian Empire. What is the use of conquering one range of hills, if another and yet another towers behind it? Why make a second and a third step forward into a slough whose further edge remains invisible? To give the Peshawar Valley back to its old Afghan masters may be out of the question; but to pierce deeper and deeper into the adjacent highlands in quest of a safe frontier line seems to us a task as hopeless as the attempt of Schiller's pilgrim to reach the horizon. When we have conquered the Swatties and the Yusufzais, fresh tribes of predatory Afghans will provoke us to fresh interference, and so the ball will keep on rolling until we have scaled the barriers of the Hindu-Khoosh and found ourselves face to face with another sort of foe.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

DEAR SIR,—Would any of your readers who may have come recently from North-west India to Bombay via Nagpore kindly inform me what the section of the journey between that place and Jubbulpore is like? I mean, could ladies and children travel on the intercalary bit between the two railways, without discomfort of an exaggerated nature, and with possibilities of milk, hot water, occasional repose, and so on?—Yours faithfully,
P. B.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—As it is generally considered that the promise of Parliament with regard to the compensation to Indian officers for the loss of their bonus has not been carried out by the authorities, either in England or Calcutta, it is proposed that Parliament be again petitioned to redress our grievance: if any officers who coincide with this view will communicate with "A. B. C.," care of Smith, Elder, and Co., 45, Pall Mall, they will receive further information, and any assistance they may require.

I consider the deduction of the extra pension an injustice; for this reason, that it was given to induce senior officers of the Indian army to retire, the amount of pension being entirely regulated by the nearness of the officer to his off- reckonings; that it could have no reference to the loss of the bonus the following instances, out of many similar ones, will prove beyond a doubt:—

G.—A regimental lieutenant-colonel, of July, 1853, retired December 31, 1861, receiving an extra pension of £450.

C. and J.—Regimental lieutenant-colonels, of July, 1857, retired December 31, 1861, receiving extra pensions of £260. These officers were not entitled to a bonus.

For this reason regimental lieutenant-colonels were of no value to their regiments with regard to purchase, as their retiring merely gave a line, not a regimental step. On the other hand I, a newly promoted regimental major, received, on retirement, an extra pension of £150, being a loser by the amalgamation of a bonus of £3,500.

My extra pension is in reality only £60, as by retiring on December 31, 1861, I had to give up my colonel's pension for that of lieutenant-colonel, having only a few months more to serve, and that in England on sick leave for the former. I know of a still harder case, where a regimental major of 1859 only wanted four days' service for a higher pension; but the date of retirement being fixed for December 31, 1861, he had to take the lower pension, losing by that £100 per annum, his extra pension being £180. He therefore costs the Government £80 per annum, and loses a bonus of £3,000.—All the above are stern facts, for the truth of which I can vouch, and remain, &c.,

A STRUGGLER FOR REDRESS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—Without fully entering into any of those numerous schemes already advocated in your and other journals regarding the Indian Staff Corps, allow me to point out a simple, and, I think, easy mode by which a very great saving annually may be effected to the State, agreeable to its military subordinates.

It is admitted that there are now in India particularly, since the new organisation, more field officers than are required for regimental duty, drawing at the very lowest a monthly stipend of rupees 640—in pounds sterling an annual salary of £768. The arduous duties that these officers now perform are their turn of duty as field officer of the day whenever it occurs, according to the roster kept at each military station, sitting occasionally on courts-martial, house board valuations, and courts of requests; the above is about the total amount of work that supernumerary field officers are now called on to perform. I consider that Government might, with great prudence, allow a number of those officers to reside in Europe on furlough, £290 odd, or say £365 per annum, every eighteen months so passed to count as one year towards retiring pension; these officers when required by the State should be available for duty in India.

The advantages to be derived are—1st. An annual saving to the State of £403 on each officer who accepted furlough of £365, the difference between Indian and English pay.

2nd. The reserve in Europe (a bracing and healthy climate) of a number of experienced officers who, when required, could be called and relied on for duty in India.

It is exceedingly likely croakers will argue that most field officers are married men with families, and could not afford to live in Europe on such a pittance. The offer is optional to those who like to accept it; moreover, they might be permitted to return to India when so inclined. It is clear, so long as they remained in Europe that the above annual saving would be effected. Or the croakers may say £365 is a colonel's pension. The reply is simple; look at the saving to the State of £403 on each officer who resides in Europe. If less than £365 be offered, few could afford to accept it; if more, the State would not be much of a gainer. Most propositions that I have read of strike me as aiming at too great a cost to the State for the retirement of its field officers. Government could never be expected with prudence to grant that which would not be a saving and benefit to itself.

In conclusion, allow me to make a digression, and to state that I consider the creation of wing commands into staff appointments under the new organisation was most impolitic, unprecedented, regardless of proper courtesy and respect to a vast number of old, valuable, and tried military officers; men who had chosen to pass the remainder of their service in military harness. Tantamount to an insult to all unpassed men, it is no argument to say that prior to the new arrangement all regular commands were held only by passed men. Such was the case, but it is not a parallel; in the latter it was optional for the individual so offered to accept the appointment or not; by the new arrangement it is made compulsory. It was the policy of Government to have kept all the military commands for unpassed men, and given to the passed all the former staff and civil employ.—I have the honour to remain, Sir, yours very faithfully,

AN OLD FIELD OFFICER.

Indian Ballads and other Poems. By William Waterfield. Smith, Elder, and Co. 1868.

This is a thoroughly readable volume of good honest verse, that flows freely, with a graceful music of its own, through many different channels. We are not aware if these poems are the first fruits of Mr. Waterfield's muse; but anyhow they attest the ripe workmanship of a literary graduate, enhanced by no small amount of true poetic fire. In spite of Horace's canon against "middling poets," we are thankful to listen to such strains as the present singer woos our ears withal. When the nightingale is silent, shall we turn a deaf ear to the thrush or the wren? If Mr. Waterfield is neither a Tennyson nor a Browning, he is no mere echo of these or other bards; and he certainly rises far indeed above the level of Tupper. The loudest suggestion of Tennyson's manner may be heard in the stanzas on "Rukmini;" in this for instance:—

With voice of music and of song,
O'er silken carpets, down the street,
The gay procession moved along,
The bridegroom's haughty train to meet.
The banners floated from the towers,
The city shone in all her pride;
The stately gates were wreathed with flowers,
And all were glad except the bride!

But after all the echoes are few and faint, and the author handles his metres and works out his ideas with the freedom and force of a self-sustained artist.

In the former respect he is at once daring and successful. And his metres, for all their variety and wilful irregularity, seem generally suited to his subjects. The short but stately measure of the "Hymn to Indra," the brisk trochaic movement of "The Churning of the Ocean," the long Alexandrine cadences of the "Lamentation of Aja," and the ever-changing rhythm of the "Lament on the Death of Epaminondas," may be taken as fair examples of our meaning. In the last-named poem Mr. Waterfield has made his longest and, let us add, his highest flight. The metre, which shifts from stanza to stanza, not with the recurrent irregularity of Gray's Bard, but with the wilder yet equally effective license of Dryden's Ode to St. Cecilia, is handled throughout with much skill and feeling for rhythmical form. Here is a sample, no better than the rest.

Why do ye seek yon gloomy trees,
Nor dream that fate is near?
Ye claim of your chief the rights of the grave,
And vengeance sweet in death;
Ye lie in the dragon's cave,
Destroyed by his baleful breath.
Cadmus strong in the favour of Jove
Fearlessly enters the fatal grove;
The fight is done,
And the victory won,

And he stands alone in a lonely land beneath the setting sun.

* * * * *
By the gods with favour eyed,
And to Venus's daughter wed,
In his children and his bride
Blest the life that Cadmus led;
Till all-controlling fate
Came upon them from above:
One died by Juno's hate,
And the son of Saturn's love.
Inflamed by frenzy, one Destroyed her royal son;
And one (her offspring dead,

By him who gave them birth in madness slain,
Across the white Megarian plain
In hasty terror fled,—

Then leaping from the rocky height, she plunged beneath the main;
While from Juno, ne'er relenting, on the hated town,
And on Laius' royal race a greater evil fell;
Till he, the nameless stranger, to whom we gave the crown,
Unwitting wrought the baleful deed that tongue may never tell.

In this ever-varied, yet always strong, musical, and stately measure, the whole poem moves along, retracing the events of old Theban history and legend from the days of Cadmus to those of Epaminondas, and rich in allusions like those which crop up in the foregoing extract. There is a noble passage, which we have not space to quote, regarding "great Messene's hero-shades," and the opening invocation to Atê strikes the fitting key-note of a poem not unworthy to compare with some of the choruses in Æschylus and Sophocles.

But the author is equally at home in the classic lore of India as in that of Greece. More than half the volume consists of Indian ballads, which reproduce in generally pleasing forms a number of tales and incidents culled from the Vedic Pantheon. There is plenty of sustained power of feeling and expression, as well as graceful scholarship, in the "Fourth Avatâra" and the "Destruction of the Yâdavas;" two poems which, with the help of an occasional note, may be read with interest by any lover of good verse and of stories that touch the heart or fire the imagination. "The Song of Kalindi" clothes the love of the Sun's Daughter for Krishna with the charm of an Indian idyll, steeped in local colour, but breathing the common language of all climes. We have only room for one stanza:—

Like silver shells that float;
The stars and moon loom large by night;
The lilies launch their boat;
Fair laughs the plain with ripened grain;
With birds resounds the brake:
Along the sand white egrets stand;
The wild fowl fill the lake.
Come, Krishna! let thy servants soon
Thy perfect beauty see:
The water-lily loves the moon,
And I love thee.

In "Amba" we have a more lurid picture of a fiercer kind of love, relieved in stanza 5 by an exquisite night-scene, where

All was moveless and still and calm,
Save the wind as it sighed through the groves of palm
And the fireflies flickering midst the trees.

But the reader must turn to the book for further edification. Göthe's few lines on Evening Rest are about as well translated as such lines could be. Some of the Album Verses might have safely been omitted; but the greatest part of the volume invites almost unqualified praise. It is hardly fair indeed to talk of it as middling poetry, so thoroughly does it satisfy almost every requirement of high poetic art. British India has never before, we think, produced anything at once so finished and so original.

REDUCTION OF NATIVE TROOPS.

The Madras Times, quoting the assertion of military men who are in a good position in every way to form an opinion on the point, that the maintenance of so large a native army as that of Madras is not rendered necessary by any present or probable necessities of State, would yet be glad to see the reduction of its strength brought about by gradual and easy methods rather than by the more violent and, in a measure, humiliating scheme of disbandment. Just as among the commissioned officers, so among the Sepoys themselves, no recruits might be taken in until the surplusage had been reduced by the agency of retirements or deaths. However much their rulers may now forget the flagitious reduction of the 18th Regiment N.I., it is not to be supposed that the men of other corps have ceased to talk about that act of grave injustice by which their cruelly maligned fellow-soldiers of former days were punished, and it is unreasonable to expect that the Sepoys whose livelihood and social status are now in jeopardy will retire to their homes in altogether a placid frame of mind. Without for a moment meaning any discourtesy to those men, we think that, taking human nature as we find it, their loyalty may be affected by the rough treatment that shipwrecks their fortunes. Even admitting, for the sake of argument, that a considerable reduction is possible, and for financial purposes expedient, is there no means by which it can be effected without making enemies, perhaps, of men who a decade since stood staunch to their colours, and turned a deaf ear to the seductions of the propagandists of their nationality and religion. A faithful servant, who has proved his worth in days of imminent peril, is entitled to much consideration when fortune smiles again on his employer; and, simply as a matter of worldly wisdom, we think the Government should allow itself to be actuated by some feeling of gratitude when retrenchments are suggested by Finance Ministers. And it has to be always borne in mind by a far-seeing administration that, however remote and improbable the danger may be that would warrant the maintenance of a large army, the time may come when it will be absolutely necessary for our existence here to attempt to revive military ardour with a view to the reformation of an adequate force. Our present cavalier treatment of our native troops is surely hardly calculated to inspire our subjects with confidence in us, or to encourage the sons of old soldiers to enlist in our army, should their services be some day required.

THE UNCOVENANTED SERVICE FURLOUGH RULES.

The Pioneer has good news for its friends of the uncovenanted service. Government has not flinched from justice because, compared with what was expected or asked for, it might look like prodigal generosity. The Government of India has sent home to the Secretary of State draft rules which will practically, if sanctioned, place the whole uncovenanted service on the same footing in respect of leave with the covenanted civil service. The same rules with regard to the proportion of pay to be enjoyed during furlough will apply to both. The rules, moreover, will apply to native and European officers alike, with this proviso—that "only half the amount of leave claimable" under the rules "can be taken in India." We think this a very ingenious, as it is a just, corrective of what would otherwise be an extravagance of liberality. It would be absurd, under ordinary circumstances, to give a native, whose home is close by, the amount of leave of absence which is allowed to Europeans, chiefly on account of the distance they have to go. But if a native official chooses to pass his furlough, or half of it, in Europe, he will enjoy all the advantages of his English colleague. In fact, no difference is made between Europeans and natives, except that where a man could have, for instance, a year's leave if he went to Europe, he can only take six months' leave if he remains in India. We imagine that these provisions must, for the nonce, choke even the ungrateful mendacity of the Bengali native papers; but there is no knowing. Their insolence will perhaps outstrip all the generosity of Government. Nevertheless, advienne que pourra, Government has done what it ought, and has done it spontaneously. No one anticipated or claimed for the native servants of the State such generous equity of treatment. On the other points, respecting which European Uncovenanted servants are anxious, the proposed rules are of a consistent liberality. The Furlough Committee deserves high honour for their reduction. Whether the Secretary of State will sanction them remains to be seen; but the wind at home sets for the moment towards fair treatment of the Indian services, and the English Government will hardly like to seem more illiberal than the Indian.

The Indian Daily News is happy to be able to state that the Uncovenanted Service leave rules have been disposed of by the Committee of Government Secretaries sitting at Simla to revise the Leave and Pension Rules of all branches of the services, and which, in June last, so satisfactorily dealt with the Civil and Military Furlough Rules. The Committee have in the present, as in the preceding cases, acted with a liberality which speaks well for them as regards their generous consideration for the members of the subordinate service, and their correct appreciation of the true interests of the State as an employer. An intimation had come out from the Home Government, that all leave taken by Uncovenanted servants should be deducted from service in estimating claims to pension. This the Committee considered themselves bound to at once throw overboard, and such was done. The Committee are of opinion that all distinction between sick leave and furlough should be abolished. They further recommend that in the period of twenty-five years' service entitling to pension, six years' leave on half salary of appointment be allowed, and they consider that three years of this maximum of leave may be to Europe, the other three to be taken in India. Should an uncovenanted servant overstay his leave in England he may lose his appointment, but will not have his name struck off the rolls of the service. His leave allowance will further be reduced, and should the overstay be long, or without some reasonable excuse, his appointment will be permanently conferred on another, and it will have become a matter for consideration by the Head of the Department to which he belongs, whether his removal from the service should not be recommended. The rules are to apply to all Uncovenanted servants drawing salaries of Rs. 100 a month and more, up to Rs. 1,200 a month; and in their spirit will leave be granted to employes drawing less than Rs. 100 and more than Rs. 10. To native employes the three years' leave to Europe will not be allowed; and in the cases of both Europeans and natives all leave taken in India is to count as deduction from the maximum of six years. These rules will shortly be on their way to the Secretary of State for approval and sanction, and it is not anticipated that any alteration of importance will be made in them by Sir Stafford Northcote, who has hitherto generally shown himself liberally disposed towards the services.

GOVERNMENT AND THE BENGAL ZEMINDARS.

The Englishman holds that whether the Permanent Settlement was a politic measure, and whether the Government are bound to abide by it, are different questions. Though we are of opinion it was a most impolitic and short-sighted measure, we are not prepared to advocate getting rid of it by a breach of faith, and that whether the Permanent Settlement was a contract or not. If, however, the Permanent Settlement was a contract, we entirely dissent from Baboo Joy Kishen Mookerjee's interpretation of it. It concerned the rent to be paid to Government by the Zemindar for his land, and not the amount of total taxation of all kiuds to which he was to be subjected. The rights secured to him in exchange for this rent all concerned the land, and did not extend to immunity from other taxation. The notion that the amount of land revenue payable by the landholder under the Permanent Settlement is in commutation of all other demands, on whatever account, is no doubt an old, deep-rooted, and naturally fondly cherished one, and we regret to say that it has been more or less encouraged by Indian Governments and Government officers from time to time. Such an interpretation has, however, never taken the form of a pledge, or formed the basis of positive legislation, and the Government is certainly not bound by it, as by the original settlement, if it is an obviously erroneous one, of which there can be little doubt. Education of the people was not part of the engagement entered into by the Government at the Permanent Settlement; and the Government, having determined to educate the people, has a right to call for funds for the purpose, independently of the land revenue. The question of the justice of taxing the Zemindars exclusively to provide funds for roads and education is a very different one from that of their immunity. So far we have considered the latter alone, nor so long as the landholders adhere to the ground they have taken up is there any occasion to discuss the former.

A NEW DANGER IN OUDH.

The Lucknow Times complains of a dangerous leaven that exists in the population of Oudh, and particularly that of Lucknow. A large body of men who found employment under the King's Government have been turned adrift, and may now be seen walking the streets in quest of a customer for a piece of old and worm-eaten shawl or a rotten turban that has seen better days. Their case is the more distressing as they are mostly gentlemen who would rather die than beg at another's door. They are accordingly dissatisfied with the present rule, and their discontent is the more dangerous because it is perfectly justifiable and honest. They have presented a petition to Government in which they confess themselves to be "really unfit for the service of their new masters, because they are so wedded to the ways and systems of working of the native Government that they can scarcely be of any use to the new Government." Government has already carefully selected for employment all the old Oudh officers who had sufficient qualifications, and if their number was few the misrule of the native sovereigns, and not the liberality of the British Government, is to be impugned. The present Chief Commissioner may be trusted to deal with this class as they deserve. The abolition of the Court has greatly reduced the population and the vice of Lucknow, which, so far as the natives are concerned, is a decaying city.

THE SIND AND PUNJAB FRONTIER.

The Bombay Gazette thinks there are signs that many influential persons are disposed to treat the whole of the North West frontier question, and the Russian difficulty intimately related to it, not in accordance with the demands of fact, but of a preconceived system. As one party, with very limited perceptions of military and political probabilities, talks scornfully of the "Russian Phantom," so another party, whose broader outlook is distorted by impatience, insists that safety can alone be found in a fresh application, on a considerable and very perilous scale, of the sacred annexionist principles bequeathed to them by Lord Dalhousie. Whether they have to prescribe for a native State temporarily in the hands of a bad ruler, or frontier savages, excited by fanatics and inflamed by love of riot and plunder, the sovereign panacea is always the same. They would annex the native State, and enlarge the frontier. No remedy less heroic than the extinction of the first, and the thrusting forward of the second, has in their eyes any claims to consideration. Like Lord Stafford and the French Jacobins—extremes so frequently meet—they see no line of conduct except that expressed in the famous motto "Thorough." But statesmen, save when national existence is at stake, must use milder means, conducive to more enduring ends; and, in dealing with the present difficulties brought about by the hill tribes, as well as in preparing for any possible struggle with Russia, our rulers ought to be especially on their guard against an over-reaching policy. We need not annex, except for immediate defensive purposes—it would be reasonable for instance to run a line from Peshawur to the westward of Kohat—and a grave blunder will be made if those who advocate a fortified line from Candahar to Cabul should prevail. An extension of frontier on any great scale would only bring fresh difficulties of a like kind, so that we should merely exchange evils we have for evils not yet experienced. Our frontier policy hitherto has not been unsuccessful in restraining the tribes

Applied over a period of years with patience, vigour, and skill, it would probably reduce our restless neighbours to habits of comparative peacefulness and regularity. Moreover, a disturbed frontier is not without its uses, since it keeps part of the army employed and furnishes a school both of politics and arms. We need not say that this journal has any flinching dread or even morbid dislike of annexation. To promote and secure imperial interests we would annex until our flag waved on the shores of the Levant. It is because imperial interests are better secured by a moderate, prudent, and firm policy that we are adverse to the demands for further territorial acquisitions. Extended empire is often only another name for weakness and decay. It is a different thing altogether to make our present admirable frontier reasonably secure. At present armed demonstration is confined to the north-west, but of course the watchfulness of Government is not restricted to that quarter alone. More or less, there is reason to believe the whole line of the Trans-Indus is disturbed, and we should not be surprised to learn that some addition will be made to the 6,000 troops who are now posted in Sind. The recent advances of Persia in Seistan, the anarchy in Afghanistan, the effect of Russian movements towards Bokhara and the Oxus, the ferment throughout the Suliman range and in the mountains overhanging the Upper Indus, render it desirable that Sind should not be neglected. It is quite incredible that the Bombay Government should be at all likely to make light of the possible interruption of quiet in that quarter, and we may be sure that, if it be necessary, Government will not hesitate to rival in energy the proceedings in the Punjab. Forewarned is forearmed.

MILITARY FURLONGHS.—The following officers obtained furlough to Europe in August and September, on medical certificate, under the new military furlough rules:—Lieutenant-Colonel Bagot (Commandant 38th Native Infantry), to Calcutta, from the 11th October to the 10th November, preparatory to Europe on the same account. 11th Foot: Major Williams, from the 22nd February to date of embarkation, in extension of privilege leave (in cancellation of the leave granted in G.O. of the 4th April last). 19th Foot (2nd battalion): Captain Kirby, to England via the Cape, from date of embarkation. HAZARA.

HAZARA FIELD FORCE, Sept. 1.—Nothing much stirring. All the big-wigs are at Abbottabad, heling each other to do nothing. No chance of an advance on the Black Mountain before the 10th or possibly the 15th of the month. In the meanwhile conflicting reports are constantly rife as to the numbers and intentions of our formidable enemy! The permanent disposition of the troops forming the two brigades is at last known. The first Brigade, under Brigadier-General R. O. Bright, 19th Regiment, consists of D Battery F Brigade R. H. A. (Renny's); H. M.'s 1-19th Regiment; 1 Squadron Guides; Headquarters and five troops 16th Bengal Cavalry; 2nd and 5th Goorkhas; 2nd Punjab Infantry; Major Hughes' Mountain Train; and De Bude's ditto. Captain E. W. Evans, 19th Foot, Brigade Major. The 2nd Brigade (Vaughan's) is composed of all troops now at, and in rear of, Abbottabad, consisting of 1st Battalion 6th Royals (Sniders); Detachment 77th Regiment; 10th and 24th P.N.I.; 3rd Sikh Infantry (at Hurrepore); and 1 Troop 16th Bengal Cavalry. Captain Cockburn, 1-6th Regiment, lately Acting Brigade Major at Pindee, has been appointed Brigade Major to this Brigade—the right man in the right place, and no mistake. Yesterday morning a portion of the troops now at Oghee started to make a reconnaissance of the surrounding country. Advancing up the Kabbul hills, which join the Black Mountain, they came upon a "sungah" or stone breastwork recently built by the enemy, and containing about six or eight of them. On the return of the reconnoitring party the number of the enemy was found to have increased to some forty or more. No shots, however, were exchanged, and the party returned to camp. Yesterday morning the enemy made a demonstration on the low hills adjoining Oghee—flags flying and tom-toms going. However, nothing came of it, and in all probability nothing will be done till the general advance takes place.—Pioneer, Sept. 9.

On moving in advance a standing-camp is to be formed at Agror, and the force then marches with what they can carry on their backs, or at the outside three mules per company; one for every three officers, and for the mess one for every three or four officers. A mule carries in the hills two maunds. The first move will be up the Black Mountain, which is about ten thousand feet high—"black" with pine forests. It extends about twenty-five miles, for ten of which from Durbund it runs parallel with the Indus. Swat and Bonair are at logger-heads. A force sent by the Akhoond of Swat has captured the fort of Zaidoolah Khan, one of the Bonair leading chiefs, and killed him and several of his family, the Bonairwals having, it is said, held aloof from contact with the holy Akhoond, and left Zaidoolah Khan to fight, with only his own followers to aid him. The Akhoond has also attacked the Hindustani Wahabees, and report says killed ninety. Certain information has been received of over forty graves having been dug by the Hindustanis after the fight. He has also ordered their expulsion from Bonair, and they and Feroze Shah are in a bad way. They will have to escape by ones and twos, for the Akhazyes, who hold the pass between Bonair and that part of the country and the Indus, have closed it, and refuse to grant a passage to any one. The people of the Black Mountain, the Hussunzyes, Chiguzyes, &c., are keeping quiet, probably strengthening every pass to the best of their ability, but there are said to be only two places where they can make a really strong stand. Hurrepore is reported to be very hot. Abbottabad, Manserah, and Oghee are hot by day but not at night; Soorsal is delightful by day but cold at night. The European troops have all turned into Khaki clothing, and washed the pipe-clay off their belts. They seem to like the change, and certainly look more service like; white or red clothes are visible on a march for a long distance off on a hill-side. The Deputy Inspectors-General of British and native troops are busy with medical and sanitary arrangements. Supplies and magazine stores are being collected in immense quantities at Rawul Pindee, and thence pushed on to the front; mules and baggage animals are going on from all parts.—Englishman, Sept. 9.

The following is an extract from a private letter dated Oghee, September 3:—"Oghee, from where I now write, is situated immediately under the Black Mountain, or Kala Daka. Every night we are kept on the alert watching the signal lights of the enemy, which we can see very distinctly, as they are only some four or five miles distant. The tribes are, however, keeping very quiet, whether through love or fear no one here seems to know; but I should certainly say the latter. Oghee is to be the principal depot for supplies and commissariat stores, which are pouring in daily. We have at present only two regiments of Goorkhas—smart, active little soldiers—one cavalry regiment (16th B.B.), 160 men of the Guides (Cavalry), and two batteries of mountain train guns (Hughes' and de Bude's). We have no European troops here yet, but the right column, under the command of Brigadier General Bright, will come in to-morrow. No move will, however, take place beyond Oghee till the left column is prepared to march simultaneously. It is said by those best qualified to form an opinion that everything will be ready for the advance on or before the 15th; but from what I know of the difficulties of putting a field force into motion, and the time it requires, I should say no movement to the front can possibly take place before the 20th, or probably the 25th. General Wilde has been expected here for some days past. He will probably arrive with the right column to-morrow. All this time he has been as busy as it was possible for a man to be, organising in person the equipment of his force. No one believes there will be any fighting worthy the name, for the Hussunzaies are anxious to tender their submission, and even give up the ringleaders in the attack on the police thanna. It is expected that one month from the time the advance is made will be quite sufficient to bring the tribes to their senses. No one expects the affair to last any longer."—Pioneer, Sept. 11.

No more troops are to be moved to the frontier, and it is understood that General Wilde's plans have been received at Simla, and are undergoing consideration there. Final orders may be expected to soon issue to the general, whose retributory expedition across the Black Mountains and through the Hussunzye country will not only soon commence, but will have terminated before the hill winter has set in. . . . There is no likelihood of any territory being annexed, though very possibly the Khan of Agror, who has hitherto exercised something like extensive civil and criminal jurisdiction in his fief, will soon be spoken of as the last of his house who exercised such powers. The Khan is a prisoner at Rawul Pindee, and as there probably will be forthcoming evidence that it was he who induced the Hussunzyes to break the peace, his reflections cannot just now be of a very pleasant character. Everything considered, it is evident that a little too much has been made of the row in Hazara.—Indian Daily News, Sept. 5.

CINCHONA CULTIVATION AT DARJEELING.

We have watched the progress of Cinchona cultivation in India with unremitting interest. The possibility of naturalising the most useful species of the cinchonas in British India was first pointed out by the prince of utilitarian botanists, the late Dr. Royle. He inferred, from an exhaustive comparison of the floras and climates of the Darjeeling, Cossiah, and Neilgherry Hills with those of the cinchona forests of South America, that the quinine yielding species could, with the usual precautions, be successfully naturalised in this country. It is now upwards of thirty years since Royle gave expression to this opinion. The question was subsequently taken up by Thomson Falconer and Anderson with the happy effect of committing the Government to undertake the experiment on a scale of such magnitude as to reduce to a minimum all conceivable chances of failure. The result has been the naturalisation of the cinchonas on the Neilgherries, the hilly regions of Ceylon, in Java, Jamaica, and British Sikkim, about twelve miles from the Darjeeling sanitarium. In all these localities the plants are reported to be thriving well. In most of them the yield of alkaloids from the bark has been abundant and satisfactory, and in none more so than in the bark sent home from Darjeeling and analysed by Mr. Howard, who found it to contain a larger proportion of the important alkaloids than in that of a corresponding age from the Neilgherries.

No one who has not personally inspected the plantations in the neighbourhood of Darjeeling can form an adequate notion of the gigantic difficulties that have been overcome, and the great work which has been steadily and silently accomplished. Owing to the unflinching perseverance, botanical knowledge, and administrative ability of Dr. Thomas Anderson, the Superintendent of Government Cinchona Plantations, every obstacle has been triumphantly surmounted; and what was regarded not long ago by some as a costly and extravagant experiment has now resulted in the successful naturalisation of the C. succirubra, C. officinalis, and C. calisaya in British Sikkim. These, by far the most valued of all the cinchonas, are flourishing at suitable altitudes on the Rungbee, Rishap and Rayen plantations with a vigour not exceeded in those of any other part of India, or in their congenial homes on the slopes and spurs of the Andes. And what is superlatively important is the fact that the Cinchona calisaya, which, according to the testimony of Mr. Markham, is shrubby, unhealthy, and stunted on the Neilgherries, is being cultivated with success in British Sikkim. This is the "Queen of the Cinchonas." The C. succirubra is also being cultivated on several tea plantations with unrivalled success. The same may be said of the results which have been obtained on the fine estate belonging to the "Pomony Cinchona Association." Such is the progress of this great enterprise that the day is not far distant when quinine and other important alkaloids produced by the Cinchona barks, Quinidina, Cinchonidina and Cinchonine, will become much cheaper than they now are. It is almost impossible to overrate the immense benefit which will be conferred upon the teeming millions of this and other marshy countries, when quinine and its allied alkaloids are brought within the reach of the poorest in the land. Then the malarious fever and the malarious poisonings which now sap the vitality of the rising generations of the indigenous and exotic population, and oppose a formidable barrier to the colonisation of the country by the reflux wave of the western races, will lose more than half their terrors and destructive powers. Then these anti-periodics—for according to the latest experience all these alkaloids are more or less febrifuges, and quinidina is in no way inferior to quinine itself—will be employed by all classes of the community, for the prevention, amelioration, and cure of the endemic fevers of this and other malarious countries. From the costliness and scarcity of these alkaloids only a small percentage of the population can at present command the use of these inestimable remedies.

In a couple of years more the cinchonas at Darjeeling will be propagated from seed. All the expense and trouble of extension by cuttings will be dispensed with. Then the cultivation will spread with great rapidity. For all that will then be needful for the formation of a cinchona plantation will be to clear the ground, keep it free from weeds for a time, and sow the other seed. Such will then be the simplicity of the cultivation that the cinchona may, in the congenial soils of the Darjeeling spurs, be extended to a degree only limited by the law of supply and demand. Even now there is everywhere manifested a desire to stud the spare spaces in and around tea-plantations with these invaluable plants. The supply of bark will eventually become enormous, and that, too, before the lapse of more than a decade. The time has, therefore, come for Government to take timely measures for the extraction of the alkaloids from the Darjeeling barks on the spot. According to Mr. Broughton, the quinologist at Ootacamund, and Mr. Howard, the great quinine manufacturer, all the barks part with their alkaloids with greater ease and in greater quantity when fresh. Apart from the larger yield of alkaloids obtained from the Darjeeling than from the Neilgherry barks of corresponding ages—apart from the unparalleled success, at Darjeeling, in the naturalisation of the queen of the cinchonas, the Calisaya, the time is now approaching when a special officer should be appointed to separate and extract the alkaloids from the barks produced on the Government and private plantations on the spot whilst these are green and fresh. We recommend the selection of a cinchona alkaloid manufacturer, who should be an excellent chemist, for the plantations in British Sikkim.—Friend of India.

COAL IN INDIA.—II.

Before quitting the subject of the Raneeunge coal, some remarks on the number of collieries and the outturn of coal, from that source alone, may be of general interest. In 1839 the total outturn of coal from the Raneeunge collieries was 10 lacs of maunds, or about 35,000 tons of coal. In 1846 the amount was 25 lacs of maunds, and in 1860 it had increased to 90 lacs, or about 325,000 tons. In 1860 there were upwards of 50 collieries at work in the district, employing upwards of 20,000 persons (men, women, and children), and 27 steam engines. Some of the largest companies mined from 18 to 20 lacs of maunds (60,000 or 70,000 tons) of coal per annum; others on a smaller scale only turned out 20,000 maunds in the same period.

Since 1860, however, the number of collieries has increased, and the outturn now may be roughly estimated at about 500,000 tons. The thickness of the workable seams in the Raneeunge mines varies considerably. There is one of 35 feet at a place called Kasta, near the Adjaie river. As the off-bearing is slight, this very large seam of very fair coal is quarried. Quarries, as a rule, are disadvantageous, unless they can be drained, as in the rains they become flooded if there are no means of getting rid of the water easily, and many of them are too low to admit of the water being run off. At the Toposee mine there is a fine seam of 22 feet, 12 feet only of this seam was being worked in 1860. It frequently happens that the roof will not sustain itself when the whole of the coal is removed from between the pillars, in which case it is sometimes customary in the Raneeunge mines to have an arch of coal as a support. In other collieries the whole of the seam is taken clear out the whole thickness, of course the necessary posts and pillars being left as support for the roof. In an under cut quarry of the East Indian Railway, a seam of 17 feet was mined by double galleries, one above the other—the two being separated by a layer of coal 15 to 18 inches thick, which acted as a flooring to the miners who worked the upper tier. The width of the workings in this instance was 10 feet, and the coal being of a very hard slaty nature, was sufficiently firm to allow of a gang of ten men working in the upper gallery, and when often the coal flooring was only 9 inches in thickness.

The greatest depth that had been tried in 1860 was 230 feet, to which depth only one mine had then gone; it has not been exceeded much since, and the average depth may be reckoned at 100 feet. The mode of working varies with the localities. Some of the miners use picks, others use crow-bars, others wedges and heavy hammers. Where men are plentiful, and the workings spacious, the miners prefer long crow-bars, at which 8 and 10 men can work; these bars are from 10 to 12 feet in length, and are tipped with steel, and sharpened with a chisel edge. The miners commence at the foot of the seam, and cut in about 18 inches deep, with a height of 15 inches. One man guides the rod, and when the requisite amount has been undercut the over-hanging coal is "brought down" by repeated heavy blows of the same bar, and the exertion of the men who are working it.

The price paid in 1860 to the miners for coal at the pit's mouth was about 1 pice a maund of 80 lbs.—this rate has however been raised somewhat since that. The lights used are the ordinary chiragh, or common native saucer lamp; if a greater amount of light is necessary, the ordinary "mussal" or torch is used. No cases of fire-damp ever occur, or, if met with, are so very rare that they are not worth mentioning, and as the depth of the mines is so small ventilating shafts at close intervals are easily constructed. The diameter of these seldom exceeds 7 feet; the working shafts are about 12 feet generally. The sandstone met with in the Raneeunge mines is very close and hard, and is much valued in Calcutta for paving purposes.

Indian miners are like their fellow-workmen in England, habitually careless and indifferent; and it is constantly requisite for the "overlookers" to see that they are not endangering their own lives and other peoples in their disregard of all precautions as they become callous to danger. Accidents from roof sinking are of repeated occurrence, yet loss of life seldom is met with, as Providence seems to watch over these people especially, even though they are too lazy to look after their own interests. Masses of rock, of many tons weight, have often fallen in on workings, during the absence of the miners, who would all have lost their lives had they been present, yet with these warnings before them, they still go on in happy-go-lucky way peculiar to a certain class of people in more occupations than mining even. The coal at Raneeunge after being "won" by the miner, is carried to the foot of the shaft by boys, in baskets or trucks. In the large mines the coal is raised in large iron kibles, holding from 400 to 600 lbs., by steam engines. In smaller collieries the kibles are raised by the "gins"—there being from 30 to 40 women to each "gin." Each gin works two kibles, one up and the other down. When there is no coal to raise the coal kibles are replaced by large buckets, and the water of the mine is drawn up by the "gins," in case the pumps may not have cleared it out. Blasting in the mines is seldom practised, although under European superintendence it is much used in open quarries, both for off-bearing and coal.

Volatile matter	40	0
Carbon	46	2
Earthy matter	13	8

But the proportions of Raneeunge coal vary considerably, and those quoted above are not by any means the most favourable, but as they present a fair average they may be accepted as a good sample. The East Indian Railway Company naturally consume very large quantities of Indian coal on their extensive length of line, now upwards of 1,270 miles. They possess very valuable collieries, at a place called Karhurballe, situated about sixty miles in a direct line south of the railway at a station known as Luckeeseraie. There are some fine seams of coal at this spot, and it is said to be superior in quality to Raneeunge, but hitherto the great difficulty of carriage from the mines to the railway has prevented much from being done in it; but now that the new portion of the line known as the "Chord line" is approaching completion, it is the intention of the railway company to run a small branch from the Chord line to their collieries. As soon as they can complete the line and the through communication the saving in the item of coal in carriage to the North-west will be very considerable. At present all the coal destined for the upper stations in the North-west is despatched from Raneeunge, and as there is no direct route up from Raneeunge, it is necessary for the coal trains to come down from Raneeunge to Burdwan to get on to the main line (a distance of between fifty and seventy miles), but depending on the colliery the train leaves from in the Raneeunge district. With the Chord line open to Luckeeseraie, the company will be able to run their own coal direct from their mines to the north-west, at a saving in distance, as compared with Raneeunge, of over 300 miles.

There are several mines and coal quarries in the Rajmahal district, but many of them have closed, as the coal is inferior and will not compare with that of Raneeunge. The East India Railway were quarrying coal at two places, from 1853 to 1863, for purposes of brick burning. The coal was most abundant, there being no less than four workable seams of from seven to seventeen feet in thickness at one of the sites, and two seams of nine feet at another. This coal has been out of water for ages, being now found in a hill some hundred feet above the surrounding country. It is of a very dry friable nature, with a large proportion of sulphur and iron pyrites in it. It is fearfully hard in the seam, and when mined and stacked, is very liable to combustion (spontaneous); in fact, so much so, that it could not be stacked a greater height than three feet, without igniting. But it answered very well for the purpose to which it was put—viz., brick burning—and at the time when the railway was delayed for fuel to burn the bricks necessary to complete the bridges on the line it was found of great service; but as it was utterly useless for any other purpose, and would not do for locomotives, the quarries were abandoned when the line was opened.

Further up the Ganges, or about 400 miles from Calcutta in a north-westerly direction, are situated the Palamow coal-fields. These beds of coal have been known for many years, and even prior to the Raneeunge fields; but owing to their distance from the Ganges, and difficulties in getting it down, it has not met much favour, although it is superior in quality generally to the Raneeunge. An analysis of the two gives the following result:—

	Palamow.	Burdwan.

The Bengal Coal Company commenced to mine coal there some few years since, but they had so much difficulty in transporting the coal that they gave up the idea, and nothing has been done there since.

These remarks close these abridged observations of the coals met with principally in Bengal proper, but there are still those in the North-West, which, with Assam and Sylhet, are very valuable, and will form the subject of a future article.—Times of India.

STATION TALK.

SIMLA, Sept. 2.—It is with very unfeigned regret, and yet with pleasure, that your correspondent has to inform you that there is no foundation for the sensational account he sent you in a recent letter of a grave difference of opinion in the Supreme Council, between the Viceroy on the one hand, and Sir William Mansfield, Sir Henry Durand, and the Hon. Mr. Taylor on the other. Your correspondent has been assured by authority which admits of no question that the most perfect accord, on all questions connected with the Hazara business, has up to the present existed in Council, and especially between the Viceroy and Commander-in-Chief. The story of the "angry debate," the "minuting," the "tergiversation," and the split of the Council into "two opposite parties," turns out to have been simply a "shave," told to your correspondent by one who had been victimised himself, and who, when relating the invention, believed what he was relating. There has been no news from the frontier for the last three or four days. This in itself is good news; if anything worth telegraphing had occurred it would have been flashed hither; for the "line" has been laid to Abbottabad, and will in a few days more have been carried forward to, possibly, Ooghee. It is said that the Hussunzyes have sent in to Major Pollock offering to give up the ringleaders in the late raid, and that the Commissioner had opened negotiations with them; but, should this even be the case, it will not prevent our troops marching across the Black Mountain range, if only to make a demonstration. The probability, however, is that there will be no more fighting, and that the Hussunzyes will make the most abject submission. There is no intention to annex their valley, nor any desire to come to a breach with the tribes beyond the Indus, who have kept themselves wholly aloof from the Hussunzyes in the present affair.

Sept. 9.—Final orders to open "the ball" on the Hazara frontier have left Simla. Your correspondent can give you no definite idea concerning the strategy of the ensuing operations, nor even say, within a day or two, when the frontier is likely to be crossed. These matters are very properly kept secret. In expeditions of the kind even our own officers and troops do not know the route they are to pursue until the last moment; for in such cases—indeed, in every operation of war—secrecy, as far as is practicable, is one of the best aids to success. Nevertheless, General Wilde will be adroit indeed if he contrives to get to the base of the Black Mountain without the enemy knowing that he has moved. In all probability a fortnight will not have elapsed before all is over. The expedition will be against the Hussunzyes alone. It will be punitive, its main object being to convince the clans of that tribe that if they make raids into British territory they will be punished for so doing in a manner they are certain to remember. There is to be no annexation of territory, and no crossing of the Indus, unless indeed a necessity should arise for sending over a detachment to protect those portions of Umb which are on the western bank of the river, and at no great distance from the lands of the Trans-Indus section of the Hussunzyes. It is not probable this necessity will be felt. In fact, it may also be considered certain that the operations will be confined to the eastern side of the river. The severest punishment will, for the sake of example, be inflicted on those clans which are known to have been engaged in the attack on the police post at Ooghee. Their houses will be razed; their crops, just on the point of ripening, cut or burned down; and themselves (for a section of them mean to fight) treated to the compliments of the Snider. The damage thus inflicted will be irretrievable for at least the present year; and experience has shown that such impoverishment is the most telling punishment that can be dealt out to a frontier tribe. There is very little danger, it is considered, of the operations entangling us in hostilities with any of the tribes beyond the Indus. Those tribes, even up to Swat, seem impressed with an apprehension that the Hazara Field Force may be ordered to cross the Indus and operate against themselves. But the Commissioner of Peshawar will probably have assured them on this point; and, to do them justice, they have shown themselves, since the outbreak of the Hussunzyes, to all appearances desirous to avoid giving us any cause of offence. The affair with the Hussunzyes over, there will not be any marching of the force along the Peshawar frontier. It is not intended to deal with either the Salarzyes or the Bazootees, our little affairs with whom will be otherwise settled. It is not contemplated to establish a military post on a large scale in Hazara, nor any new military post whatever there. But our police posts are all to be fortified, so as to be able, like the Irish police barracks, to hold out against an enemy without artillery, as long as their stores of provisions last, or, at any rate, until succour from the next posts, or from our military stations of Abbottabad and Hurreepore, can reach them. Captain Buller, Aide-de-Camp to the Commander-in-Chief, left this yesterday for Hazara to join, it is understood, the Quarter-Master General's department of General Wilde's force.—Times of India Correspondent.

ALLAHABAD, Sept. 9.—Your editorial on the probability of a dearth in these provinces I apprehend will be realised; already pressure is beginning to be felt in some localities, so much so, that I believe the Lieutenant-Governor has issued instructions to district officers to acquaint themselves fully on this matter; so that if necessary, timely means be adopted in the transmission of grain to the impoverished districts. These instructions are highly judicious, and if acted upon with energy and tact they must be successful. It can hardly be imagined that the distress will be general from the failure of the autumn crops, as the last season was very favourable in this respect, whereby sufficient grain must have been stored for the current expenditure of this season. The main difficulty in my opinion is to surmount the proclivities of the grain merchants, who, having the monopoly to themselves, know how to improve their finances when the opportunity offers itself for so pleasant a game. These smooth-faced orientals, that live on the milk and honey of the land, care little how it fares with others of their countrymen; the consequence is that they steadily raise the price of grain until they have secured the reward equivalent to their best calculation. To be equal to them, it ought to be the duty of executive officers to watch all their movements, so that the poor labourers suffer not by their machinations. Although we have had no rain since July, it is a matter for congratulation how healthy we have been keeping. The mornings and evenings are pleasant and enjoyable. You must not infer from this that the station has been entirely free from the great devastator cholera; we lost the Garrison Sergeant Major and his wife last week from it; they were both prostrated within a couple of hours of each other, and were both interred the next evening. Ensign Hughes, of the 107th, who was also attacked about the same time as the sergeant major, lingered for about a week, and died this morning.

Sept. 10.—Just a few hurried lines to say that the price of grain is rising with alarming rapidity. This surely cannot be laid at the door of the drought. The bunniah (a set of unprincipled, heartless, avaricious wretches) are bent on reaping a golden harvest. The day before yesterday grain was sold at 17 seers for the rupee, yesterday it rose to 15 seers! Wheat was sold a couple of days ago at 15 seers, it was yesterday got with difficulty at 11½ seers! I think Government should interfere and put a stop to this robbery. These alarming changes in the prices of the necessaries of life so effectually and quickly unsettle the minds of the poorer class of people, that it becomes a matter of difficulty when the danger has arrived to make them follow a system. Government should, I say, interfere (and it can do so without breaking the rules of political economy), and thus save half the misery we are likely to witness. Respectable and old residents of this place tell me that there is sufficient grain in the city to last us for three years if we get no supplies from outside. Government can very easily find out the truth and prevent the bunniah from forcing famine on us prematurely. Accounts of robberies committed [reach us from all sides; rumours of boats full of grain plundered and granaries forced open and sacked are whispered about. To all this I am glad to say that our Government is alive. Collectors have, I believe, been ordered to go out in camp at once, at least our Collector has gone. The Board of Revenue have awoken from their slumber, and are throwing circulars broadcast on the land. Weather in the day getting hotter and hotter, nights and mornings pretty pleasant.—Delhi Gazette Correspondent.

A QUARREL ABOUT CASTE.—A strange quarrel has broken out between the Santhals and Bhoomoos. Both claim to be descendants of Paramanik Manjee, and both claim a superiority of caste in consequence. Several affrays took place before they could be induced to refer the matter to the decision of the Punchkote Rajah.

THE EX-NAWAB OF TONK.—We learn from the Englishman that the Home Government have expressed great satisfaction with the proceedings of the Viceroy in the case of the Nawab of Tonk. THE SEAT OF GOVERNMENT.—In a recent debate in the Council of the Secretary of State for India, it was finally decided, says the Englishman, that the seat of Government is not to be removed from Calcutta. At the same time final sanction was given to an expenditure of eight lacs annually on the improvements of the capital, and the erection of suitable Government offices.

Ashley Eden will come out as Private Secretary to the Earl of Mayo, and that Mr. Dampier will be confirmed in his present appointment as Secretary to the Government of Bengal." The Pioneer asserts that there is no foundation whatever for the statement that the Hon. Ashley Eden is to succeed Mr. Lushington as Financial Secretary.

CIVIL ENGINEERING APPOINTMENTS, NORTH-WESTERN PROVINCES.—Lieutenant Bagge, R.E., Executive Engineer, Doon Canals, is appointed to the charge of Irrigation Surveys, Bundelcund, from 1st October, vice Lieutenant Home, R.E., to be employed on special duty; Lieutenant Willcocks, Executive Engineer, Meerut Division, Ganges Canal, to be Executive Engineer Doon Canals, vice Bagge; Mr. Brind, Executive Engineer, Cawnpore Division, Ganges Canal, to be Executive Engineer, Meerut Division, vice Willcocks. CAPTAIN LEWIN AND THE KOOKIES.—The Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal has approved of the policy of conciliation adopted by Captain Lewin, the Superintendent of the Chittagong Hill tracts, towards the Howlong and Syloo tribes of Kookies. Captain Lewin's policy consisted in paying the Howlong Chiefs a lump sum, amounting to Rs. 3,400, and the Syloos the sum of Rs. 2,700, in consideration of which they pledge themselves to abstain from making further raids into British territory.—Ibid.

A JUST DECISION.—Under instructions from the Secretary of State, the Government of India has ruled that pensioned European non-commissioned officers and soldiers of H.M.'s forces in India will be at liberty to accept any Civil appointment on any salary they choose to do under Government, retaining their pensions. A similar rule was passed in 1858, but it referred only, we suppose, to pensioned non-commissioned officers. It has now been made applicable in the case of soldiers.—Indian Daily News.

PROMOTIONS IN PROSPECT.—The retirement from the service next month of Lieut.-colonel W. C. Green will promote eight majors to the rank of lieut.-colonel, viz.:—T. Rattray, 64th N.I.; C. Reay, 32nd; W. Fullerton, 14th; P. H. P. Gill, 37th; J. Wedderburn, 69th; C. T. E. Hinde, 65th; A. Fyche, 70th; and J. C. Dickson, 33rd N.I. The next step would, we believe, promote forty-five majors, including Major W. Nassau Lees. It is probable, however, that Major Lees will retire from the service in the event of his securing a seat in Parliament.—Pioneer.

THE RAJAH OF KUPPOORTHULLA.—The appeal of the Maharajah of Kupoorthulla against the orders of the Government of India has been referred to the Home Government. The first prayer of the Maharajah to the State Secretary is to grant him another six months' time, during which the orders of the Indian Government as to the separation of the Jaigheer from the State will not come into operation. The Maharajah, it is said, has deposited one lac of rupees as security. He has also given another lac to Sirdar Bickrama Sing, by order of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal.—Indian Daily News.

THE UBQUITOUS FEROZE SHAH.—A rumour is again current that there are two persons who claim to be Prince Feroze Shah. One is at Sittana, the other at Khoten. The man at Sittana has given out that he is the real Shahzadah, son of the late Bahadoor Shah, Emperor of Delhi. He is, however, so it is reported, one Ally Khan, son of a tailor, named Hosanee; he was a servant of Feroze Shah for many years, and is consequently well acquainted with the Prince's family history. He is also said to closely resemble the Shahzadah. We are afraid it would take a very great deal of proving to make the adherents of the head of the Waiabees of Sittana believe this story.

RUSSIANS MOVING ON BOKHARA.—It is rumoured, according to the Englishman, in official circles that new troubles have broken out in Bokhara. The Russians are said to be marching on the capital of that Khanate with large forces. The immediate cause of this new war is the imprisonment of the Ameer by the priestly party. This party resents the alliance, which has sprung up between the Ameer and the Russian Government, as subversive of the Moslem faith. They preach up war to the death against the Kafirs, and thus only pave the way to the complete annexation of the country to Russia. Of course the forces of General Kaufman have been despatched to effect the release of the Ameer.

FORESTS.—The Governor General in Council is pleased to make the following appointments in postings in the Forest Departments of Mysore and Coorg (Aug. 31):—Mr. Dobbs, 2nd Assistant Conservator of Forests in Mysore, and officiating as 1st Assistant Conservator in the Ashtagram Division, is posted to the Nuggur Division; Mr. Ludlow, Officiating Assistant Conservator in Coorg, is appointed to officiate as 2nd Assistant Conservator, Mysore, vice Mr. Clerk, and is posted to the Ashtagram Division; Mr. Hunter, Sub-Assistant Conservator, Mysore, is promoted to be Assistant Conservator in Coorg, vice Mr. Ludlow; Mr. Clerk, Officiating as 2nd Assistant Conservator, Mysore, is appointed Sub-Assistant Conservator, and posted to the Nundidroog Division.

SURVIVORS OF THE "SULTANA."—We have received reliable information that six more men of the crew of the Sultana have arrived safely at Burrisaul. These consist of a serany, a seacunny, and four lascars. They state that when the ship grounded they were washed overboard, but succeeded in clinging to two spars. On these they drifted for ten days and nine nights about the Bay of Bengal, until at last they were thrown ashore, more dead than alive, at Chaplee, on the south-east side of the Burrisaul district. Here they were most kindly treated by the villagers, who fed them for six days, and ultimately took them to the police-station at Khulsarkhalee, from whence they were forwarded to Burrisaul. Our informant states that the men all seem strong and healthy, and do not appear to have undergone any severe exposure or suffering lately.—Englishman, Sept. 8.

MILITARY.—The 91st Highlanders were under orders to leave Jubulpore for Bombay by the 1st of October.

OFFICERS RETURNING TO ENGLAND FOR STUDY.—Under instructions from the Horse Guards, the undermentioned officers of Royal Artillery will proceed to England during the next cold season, for the purpose of joining the school of gunnery at Shoeburyness, viz.:—Lieutenants Reilly, F brigade, Royal Horse Artillery; West, D brigade, Royal Horse Artillery; Warren, D brigade, Royal Horse Artillery; and Disney, 16th brigade, Royal Horse Artillery. These officers are available for duty with troops on the voyage home, and on arrival should report themselves to the Deputy Adjutant General, Royal Artillery, Horse Guards. As the course of instruction commences on 1st January, they should arrive in England in December.

MEETING AT NYNEE TAL.—A meeting of uncovenanted civilians was held at Nynee Tal on the 31st August. The following gentlemen were present, viz.:—Messrs. Simson, Johnson, C. A. Daniel, C. J. Daniel, Ridsdale, C. Robertson, and Low. The object of the meeting was to take into consideration the proposal of the managers of the Civil Service Annuity Fund. The meeting was unanimously of opinion that the scheme best calculated to benefit the service would be one combining a fixed Government pension of £800 per annum, applicable to all the members of the service alike, and with a proviso that Government might augment it in special cases, and a fund constituted in the mode described in paragraph 14 of the manager's letter. The meeting was also strongly of opinion that the interests of the service require that the Annuity Fund should not be abolished. —Pioneer.

A NATIVE ESTIMATE OF LORD MAYO.—After all, says the Hindoo Patriot, our informant has proved correct, and Lord Mayo will be the next Governor-general of India. He is an Irish Peer, and his experience as a politician has been chiefly derived from Ireland. This circumstance in our opinion goes more in his favour than against him. He is forty-six years of age, and may therefore be presumed to have settled convictions. Our Anglo-Indian contemporaries are loud in denouncing the appointment; but we see no reason to be dissatisfied. Of course we should have considered ourselves fortunate if we could have got the Marquis of Salisbury or Lord Stanley as the Governor-general; but we cannot expect first-class statesmen for India. On the other hand, few of our Governors-general gave much promise in England of the excellence they ultimately attained here. Lord Canning's appointment was at the time considered a Palmerstonian jobbery, and yet we had never had an abler or more conscientious ruler. The first act of Lord Mayo, if the telegram is correct, inspires us with confidence. It is stated that he has appointed the Hon. Mr. Eden as his Private Secretary. His Lordship could not have made a better selection.

REWARDS FOR THE RECOVERY OF SHOT AND SHELL.—The following rules are promulgated in military orders:—The recovery of all shot and shell fired at practice is the legitimate duty of the officers, non-commissioned officers and men of the battery, assisted by the native establishments, and if good arrangements be made to mark down the shot and shell during the firing, few can be lost if search is made each day after the firing. Rewards for the recovery of shot and shell will, therefore, be allowed only in special cases, where, after every endeavour has been made, some of the missiles cannot, from the nature of the ground or any other adverse circumstances, be found. In such cases, the commanding officer is to make a detailed report to the officer commanding the Artillery Division, who, on being satisfied that every exertion has been made, may offer a reward on the following scale for the recovery of the missing shot and shell:—Scale of Rewards: Shells 13-inch, common, 1r. 8a.; ditto 10-inch, ditto, 10a.; ditto Carcass, 10-inch, 1r. 4a.; ditto 8-inch, 12a.; ditto Segment Armstrong, 12-pounder, 9a.; ditto, ditto, 9-pounder, 7a. This scale is applicable on occasions of the recovery of missiles on field service or during sieges. There are also minor rewards for the discovery of smaller shot and shell.

THE OLD BENGAL FUSILIERS.—During the ensuing cold season India will lose a regiment which may fairly be said to have watched over the growth of the British Indian empire from its earliest infancy up to manhood. No corps in the whole British army has seen more hard service or won more laurels in hard fought fields than the 101st, far as it is down in the list of numbers. Scarce a campaign has been carried on, scarce a pitched battle of any importance fought in India during the last century, and there have been a good many, that this regiment has not been to the front and always distinguished itself. Wherever the story of the rise or progress of the English empire in India is recorded, there will the name and the services of this regiment be prominent. The old Bengal Fusiliers, for the corps has borne many names during its career, were raised first either in 1754 or 1755. The first mention of its field service is on the 23rd March, 1757. It was then called "The Bengal Battalion." The nucleus of the corps was reinforced by a party from Madras, under the command of a Major Kilpatrick, in the company's ship Delaware, and this body of men formed the Grenadier company of the Bengal European regiment on Aug. 2, 1756. Since its formation the regiment has borne successively the titles, "The Bengal Battalion," "The 1st Bengal European Regiment," "1st Bengal European Light Infantry," "1st European Bengal Fusiliers," "The 101st Royal Bengal Fusiliers." It would be difficult now to give an accurate list of the services of this regiment in the field without reference to old records which must be in the Adjutant General's or Quarter Master General's office, but the following list of campaigns, battles and their dates, represents a tolerably accurate resumé of the services of the corps in the more important actions that have been fought in India during the century:—1. Chandernagore, March 23, 1757; 2. Plassey, June 23, 1757; 3. Condore, December 8, 1758; 4. Masulipatam, April 8, 1759; 5. Bedanah, November 25, 1759; 6. Bheerpoor, June 16, 1760; 7. Suan, January 15, 1761; 8. Gheerriah, August 2, 1763; 9. Buxar, October 23, 1764; 10. Guzerat, from 1778 to 1784; 11. Deig, November 13, 1804; 12. Bhurtpoor, January 18, 1826; 13. Afghanistan, from 1838 to 1839; 14. Ghuznee, July 23, 1839; 15. Ferozeshuhur, December 21 and 22, 1845; 16. Sohraon, February 10, 1846; 17. Pegu, from 1852 to 1854; 18. Badlee ka Serai, June 8, 1857; 19. The Eedgah, June 17, 1857; 20. Nujuffhur, July 24, 1857; 21. Delhi, from June till October, 1857; 22. Namone, November 16, 1857; 23. Gungaree, December 14, 1857; 24. Puttiallee, December 17, 1857; 25. Mynpoorie, December 27, 1857; 26. Lucknow (capture), in all March, 1858; 27. Baree (date uncertain), 1858; 28. Oudh, from 1858 to 1859; 29. Eusufzai and Umbeyla, 1863. There are few regiments we take it, in the British or any other army, that can show a better score than this.

MR. GREY AND THE UNCOVENANTED SERVICE.—The members of the uncovenanted service will be glad to learn that the Lieutenant-governor of Bengal has taken a very favourable view of their case in reference to their superannuation pensions. In a recent minute his Honour is said to have proposed that a pensionary allowance should be granted to the widows or the infant children (as the case may be) of those uncovenanted officers who, after thirty years' continuous and meritorious service, do not survive to enjoy pensions. The Lieutenant-governor is said to have observed that during his long career in this country he had witnessed with regret several instances in which uncovenanted officers, after having served for thirty, thirty-five, and in some cases forty years continuously, departed this life without enjoying retiring pensions, and without making any provision for their families. Mr. Grey appears to be of opinion that a small pensionary allowance should be granted to the widows or children in these cases. Such allowances or pensions, however, should be discontinued in the event of re-marriage. The pensions of the infant children should be continued until they arrive at a proper age. The Governor-general in Council is said to have concurred in the views expressed by the Lieutenant-governor, but as the measure proposed would entail upon the State a heavy annual expenditure, his Excellency would submit the case to the Secretary of State for his consideration and final disposal.—Indian Daily News.

Mathew, Chaplain of the garrison of Fort William, for two months from the 15th September.

SOLDIERS' INSTITUTIONS IN INDIA.—"A Soldier" thus complains in the Delhi Gazette:—Some three or four years ago a great outcry was made by the people of England for bettering the condition of the soldier at home and abroad. I dare say some improvement was made in some regiments, but I would crave your indulgence for a few minutes while I relate to you how things are carried on in H.M.'s 109th Regiment, at present stationed at Mooltan. We have a native in the coffee-shop who has to pay one hundred rupees to some fund for the privilege of selling coffee and dry goods to the men of the regiment. Of course the men of the regiment have to suffer for this; for instance, tobacco is retailed in the bazaar at fourteen annas per lb., while in the coffee shop we have to pay one rupee two annas per lb. for it; everything else is the same, an advance of from fifty to seventy per cent. is made upon every article sold. The man cannot do otherwise considering the exorbitant rent he has to pay for the privilege which he enjoys. Now with regard to the library. Certainly so far as taking in some four or five English papers and the Delhi Gazette constitutes a library, it is one; but allow me to tell you what I have seen lately. I went into the library to change a book, and I could not get one to suit me, so from a spirit of curiosity I counted the number of books which were in the library at the time. There were just fifteen volumes of different works. They are now making a subscription amongst the men to purchase the library of a regiment going home this year, and I daresay in a few months it will be a little better; the way in which it is conducted now is disgraceful. I will now pass a few remarks upon the canteen. An order has come out during the past month that we are only to receive one mark at each opening; plenty of men like to take a pint at dinner and a pint and dram at night; but according to this new order, if a man only draws his pint at dinner-time he can only get either his pint or his dram at night, he cannot get the two. Now, in my humble opinion, the commanding officer has overstepped the bounds, for I do not think he can stop a man's commissariat allowance. He might think he is keeping the men from drink, but any medical officer will tell you that it is better to let men drink beer, or even drams, than that they should drink and ruin themselves with eau de Cologne. A few more words and I have done. A couple of days ago an order came out that no man was to be seen going about the lines with coloured trousers on. Now Mooltan is a dreadful place for dirtying white clothes; you can scarcely go to a second parade in a suit of clothes, and yet here comes an order that you must wear your khakee clothes going to the library or canteen. Some key to this might be found in the fact that there is an order to purchase all khakee clothing from the stores at a cost of Rs. 4 per suit, while the same can be bought in the bazaar at Rs. 2-8. Further comment is superfluous.

BERHAMPORE.—The Government have, on the request of the directors, sanctioned the establishment of a branch of the Bank of Madras at Berhampore.

MILITARY ITEM.—By the steamship Burmah, which sails from Rangoon on Sept. 3, three commissioned officers, thirteen European, and twenty-one native invalids, in medical charge of Apothecary McFarland, were ordered to embark.

THE LATE MR. J. GEORGE.—We regret to announce the death at the Presidency of Mr. J. George, Executive Engineer, 4th Grade, in the Madras Public Works Department. He was buried yesterday evening in the Cathedral burying ground.—Madras Times, Sept. 3.

OFFICIAL.—It is stated that the Government of India have recommended the abolition of the grades Deputy Assistant-adjutant-general and Assistant-quartermaster-general at head-quarters in the Madras Presidency, as has been done in the Bombay Presidency. The local Government, we learn, have referred for the opinion of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief.—Madras Times.

THE CULTIVATION OF INDIGO IN MADRAS.—The cultivation of indigo appears to be rapidly extending again in this Presidency. There are 20,000 acres more this year than last. In Cuddapah alone the increase has been from 3,662 acres in 1867 to 14,381 acres in 1868. In Kurnool, Bellary, Nellore, and Madras, there has also been a considerable increase in cultivation. In South Arcot, on the other hand, there has been a falling off to the extent of 7,000 acres.—Times, September 2.

INTERRUPTION TO TRAFFIC.—The temporary bridge thrown across the river near Colar, on the Bangalore branch line of railway, was so seriously damaged by the recent heavy rains that an interruption of traffic has ensued. From inquiries we have made there is reason to hope that the interruption will be of brief duration, and that the overland mail from Bombay will not be delayed. It is expected that the repairs will be sufficiently complete to enable the train which leaves Madras to-morrow morning to cross the river in the evening. The permanent bridge will be ready for traffic in the early part of next week.—Madras Times, Sept. 9.

THE PALGHAT EXHIBITION.—The Secretary of State has expressed his satisfaction at the great success which attended this Exhibition, which he considers reflects much credit on Mr. Cameron, the assistant collector, on the rest of the committee, and on all the officers concerned. He thinks it particularly gratifying that, although crowds of people attended during the six days of the show, no offence was committed.

DEFRAYING OF EXPENSES OF LOCK-HOSPITALS.—The Government of India have intimated to the Calcutta, Bombay, and Madras Governments and Administrations, that the cost of lock-hospitals should be defrayed from the Imperial Revenues. Where there is a separate cantonment fund the whole or a portion of the charge, as may be fair in each case, will be recovered from each fund and the general superintendence of the hospitals should be under the control of Government officers.

THE MADRAS RAILWAY.—The traffic receipts of the South-west line for the week ending Aug. 29, 1868, amounted for passengers, &c., to Rs. 28,760-1-3; for goods, &c., to Rs. 58,616-1-1; making together Rs. 87,376-2-4, or an average receipt per mile of Rs. 177-9-6. During the corresponding week in 1867 the receipts were Rs. 68,080-3-3, or an average receipt per mile of Rs. 138-6-0. The receipts of the North-west line for the same week amounted for passengers, &c., to Rs. 5,454-10-11; for goods, &c., to Rs. 19,780-4-1; making together, Rs. 25,234-15-0, or an average receipt per mile of Rs. 164-14-11. During the corresponding week in 1867 the receipts were Rs. 14,309-0-10, or an average receipt per mile of Rs. 93-8-4.

CIVIL FURLONGS AND LEAVES.—The following civil servants obtained furloughs on m.c. and leave of absence in September:—Captain Hodges, Superintendent of Police, Trichinopoly, preparatory leave for the prescribed period to proceed to Madras for the purpose of obtaining leave to Europe on m.c. Privilege leave to Major Heysham, Deputy Assistant Commissary General, for thirty days, from the 8th of September, 1868, or date of availing himself of it. Mr. Brockman, Government Solicitor and Officiating Government Pleader, Madras, privilege leave of absence for one month, from date of departure. Surgeon Paul, M.D., Surgeon, General Hospital, one month's privilege leave from the 3rd of September.

RUMOURED REDUCTION OF THE MADRAS ARMY.—It is rumoured that the breaking up of six more regiments of the "Old Coast Army" is contemplated. The corps to be thus dispersed would, in the ordinary course, be the 36th to the 41st N.I. inclusive, unless, as on a similar occasion not long ago, some of the senior regiments should be selected for that purpose. Of the corps abovementioned four are in orders to move this year, viz.:—36th N.I., from Seetabuldee to Thyetmyo; 37th N.I., from Cuttack to Moulmein; 40th N.I., from Cannanore to Hoosungabad; 41st N.I., from Madras to Cuttack. If further reductions are in contemplation, it will be a great hardship to put the men and officers of the corps under sentence to the trouble and expense of moving with their families from their present quarters, with the certainty of being dispersed all over the country within a short period of their arrival at the stations to which they are destined. As other corps must take their places as soon as they are broken up why not send the former to these stations at once and leave the unfortunates where they are until finally disposed of!—Madras Times.

MILITARY FURLONGS AND LEAVES OF ABSENCE.—The following officers obtained furloughs to Europe on m.c., under new rules, and leave of absence, in September:—Lieut.-Col. Broome, 2nd in command and wing officer, 20th N.I., for 1 month—Madras, preparatory to applying for furlough to England, under the regulations of 1868; Lieut.-Col. Mayne, divisional staff, deputy judge advocate general, centre division and Straits district, for 30 days, in extension of private leave—private affairs; Major McGwire, 1st battalion 1st Foot, from Aug. 18, 1868, for 3 months, to Neilgherries; Capt. Whiteside, 1st battalion 11th Foot, district inspector of musketry, 2nd division, Lucknow, for 2 months, from Aug. 22, 1868—Neilgherries; Major-General Faunce, divisional staff, commanding Pegu division, private leave, for 60 days; Assist.-Surgeon Summerhayes, doing duty in inspector general's department, Pegu division, in continuation to November 20, 1868—Neilgherries; Dr. Mackenzie, inspector-general, Indian Medical Department, is granted privilege leave of absence for 60 days, from date of departure—Deputy Inspector General of Hospitals J. A. Reynolds will, without prejudice to his own duties, conduct those of Dr. Mackenzie during the absence of the latter; Lieut.-Col. Loudon, acting commissary general, is granted privilege leave of absence for 40 days, from the 1st Sept.; Lieut.-Colonel Holmes, staff corps, 2nd in command and wing officer 11th Regt. COCHIN.—A correspondent writing to the Madras Times on the 30th August says:—"Thanks to Lord Napier, to whom the credit is due, the harbour is in a fair way of being saved, and the town also, besides what is left of the island of Vypeen. Lord Napier saw the danger and acted with the greatest promptitude. Had his lordship not come here when he did, it is impossible to say what would have been the consequence, for the officials of the D. P. W. did not seem to see the danger. Captain Castor, as you know, was entrusted by Lord Napier with the work of restraining old Neptune, the D. P. W. being very properly ignored, and he has fully justified Lord Napier's preference, for the work has been done so far in a business-like manner, and that too during the prevalence of the south-west monsoon. There is much to be done yet, and I am sanguine that Lord Napier will have it done, and that well and thoroughly. Trade is reviving a little; there are three ships, 1,600 tons aggregate tonnage, in the harbour, loading for London, a circumstance unknown before in the annals of Cochin, at so very early a date of the season. As to the railway nothing is definite as yet, but I believe there is no doubt that we are to have a branch from the Madras Railway down to Ernacollum. I am happy to say that the growing crops all around are looking splendidly. The coconut trees are laden with nuts. The Civil Dispensary here (which Lord Napier called the Pattern Dispensary of the Presidency) is getting more and more popular every day, under our popular surgeon, and so crowded was it the other day when I paid a visit, that patients had to be accommodated outside in the verandahs. All castes frequent it—Brahmins, Mussulmans, Portuguese, Jews, &c. A Sailors' Hospital is much wanted here, for there is no room in the Civil Dispensary for them.

THE "LITTLE WAR" IN KEONJHUR.—The little war in Keonjhur is all but ended. On the 22nd August the Commissioners of Chota Nagpore and Cuttack telegraphed to the Lieutenant-Governor the news of the capture of Rutna Naik and Nando Pradhan, who had been from the first the chief instigators of the insurrection, and were the only Bhootya leaders hitherto unarrested. Already steps are being taken to reduce the military force at the Commissioner's disposal, and every hope is entertained of the speedy termination of active operations. It would appear that this capture has been effected not a day too soon, for we hear that the uncovenanted medical officer in charge had, without warning, quitted the camp, leaving the hospital full of fever-stricken men, for whom there was, failing him, no proper medical attendant. Government had no doubt taken immediate steps to supply the vacancy, but we trust due notice may be taken of the extraordinary conduct of the doctor in question. Such episodes are rare in Indian medical annals. . . . There is much to be done before the country can be considered settled. It is determined, we understand, that an English officer shall remain in charge of the estate, or as Mentor to the Rajah, for at least a year. Lieutenant Johnstone, the superintendent of Kheddias, whose acquaintance with the wild tribes of that quarter is extensive, has been selected for this duty. He will, of course, have an adequate guard. The campaign was not without incidents. We select one. Mr. Ritchie, Assistant Superintendent of Police, was told off with fifty men to occupy a post; he was suddenly surrounded by about 2,000 insurgents, armed with bows, arrows, axes, and tulwars. These advanced, whooping and brandishing their weapons. Mr. Ritchie ordered his police to fire and disperse the enemy; the police refused, saying they would all be murdered if they fired. Mr. Ritchie at once charged the insurgents single-handed, cut one man's arm half off at the shoulder—wheeled his horse round—dashed at another—over whom his sword (regulation of course) snapped in two. At this moment the police, finding themselves committed to fighting, fired a volley, the insurgents broke, and Mr. Ritchie was saved from almost certain death. Four men of his party were wounded by arrows.—Englishman, Sept. 7.

CULTIVATION OF THE PINUS MARITIMA IN GANJAM.—The Collector of Ganjam has reported the result of the sowing of the Pinus Maritima seeds, sent with the board's proceedings of the 14th May, 1867. The experiment at Chicacole was conducted by Major Worsop, who, at the request of Mr. Wigram, planted a few of the seeds in his garden. Major Worsop had a bed prepared, in accordance with Dr. Bidie's instructions, in a shady spot in his garden, which he kept moist as directed. The seeds were planted on the 23rd November, 1867. On the 11th December a few appeared above ground, looking very healthy and green. After this nearly all the seeds sprouted and came up. On the 22nd December some of the plants were from one and a-half to two inches high, and looked very promising. On reaching the height of about two inches however they began to wither and eventually died. The disease appeared to be in the roots, as the tops remained green to the last. Major Worsop tried all kinds of remedies, such as transplanting some, giving less water to others, exposing some a little more to the sun, and giving others more sand, but with no effect. All the plants died. He thought that worms or white ants might have killed them, but ascertained that this was not the case. The other experiment reported by Mr. Hope, the acting principal assistant, was made by the Purla Kinely manager, and it proved a complete failure. Mr. Goodrich, the junior assistant agent, reports that the Pinus Maritima thrives well at Baliguda in the Khond Hills; a very small portion of the seed sown came up, but he has about twenty-five or thirty young trees which look healthy. A quantity of seed was also supplied to the Salt Deputy Collector, who sent the seeds to the Womeravilly and Nowpada Salt Superintendents for sowing. The soil at the Womeravilly pans being hard and black most of the seeds after sprouting died. At Nowpada three nurseries were prepared half a mile distant from each other, and the instructions contained in the fourth paragraph of Dr. Bidie's letter were fully carried out in sowing the seeds, some of which, sown in August last, have grown to the height of two inches, but have been damaged by the frequent rains. The fourth part of the seed which was sown at the end of November came up within a month, and there are now 610 plants from four to eighteen inches in height, which Mr. Carmichael believes will thrive well during the ensuing monsoon. The Salt Deputy Collector is of opinion that the Pinus Maritima will grow well at the village of Poondy and Woodanam in the Itchepore Talook if sown in November and December, but not sooner nor later. A few seeds were planted in a garden at Chetterpore on the 27th October, and the plants came up on the 10th November; but several of them shortly afterwards withered and died. About fifteen plants remain, and these look healthy, and are from two to eight inches in height.

TOBACCO PLANTING IN DHARWAR.

From Mr. E. P. Robertson, Acting Collector of Dharwar, to the Revenue Commissioner S.D., dated 6th August, 1868 :—

SIR,—With reference to Govt. resolution No. 1,404, dated 25th ult., I have the honour to submit a report as to what has already been done, with the view to introduce finer growths of tobacco into this zillah.

On July 10, 1867, Dr. Birdwood forwarded to the collector some Shiraz tobacco seed for experimental cultivation. At a meeting lately held in Bombay Dr. Birdwood mentioned that with regard to the tobacco seed sent to Dharwar report was awaited. I had at that time submitted a report (copy appended) to Dr. Birdwood. The only further report I had to make was, whether any seed had been saved, and if so, whether it was good.

Upon Mr. Shearer's (the Government cotton gardener, to whom the seed had been entrusted) return from Guzerat, I sent for him regarding the one Shiraz tobacco plant he had reared, when he presented me a plentiful supply of seed he had saved from it. He reported that the plant had thrived exceedingly well. Before reporting any further I deemed it necessary to see whether this seed was good, and as my gardener informed me it was the season for sowing, I caused the greater portion of this seed to be planted in beds. I am happy to say that it has all come up, and I now have sufficient young plants to plant nearly ten acres of ground. I intend to plant one acre myself, and to give away as many of the young plants as possible to cultivators in the district. I have already had several applications for these plants.

I also obtained from Mr. Walton some Shiraz, Ohio, Virginian, and Himalayan tobacco seeds, which had been sent to him from Madras. These have also, with the exception of the Himalayan, germinated exceedingly well. Of the latter only some ten or twenty plants have sprung up.

I saw Mr. Shearer, the cotton gardener, this morning, and he has promised to take away with him to Koosgul, where he has cotton under cultivation, some eight or ten plants of each variety. He will put them out in separate fields, and will pay particular attention to the collection of seeds from these plants. By this means I hope to have next year a plentiful supply of seed of each variety for distribution in this district, and shall at the same time be able to supply other collectorates.

I should have requested Mr. Shearer to undertake the management of one or more acres of tobacco, but did not like to do this without the express permission of Dr. Forbes. I feel, however, certain Mr. Shearer could do this work without detriment to his other duties. I have not hesitated about requesting him to take charge for seed purposes of some ten plants of each variety, and am certain Dr. Forbes will not object to what I have done.

I would (even if I run the risk of being too pertinacious) again draw attention to the absolute necessity of Government taking some steps to teach the natives a proper system of curing the tobacco leaf. Without this, all endeavours in the direction of planting new and improved varieties will be fruitless, as bad tobacco well cured will, in the European market, beat out of the field the best tobacco that is badly cured.—I have, &c.,

These papers were, on the 19th August, by Mr. W. H. Havelock, Acting Revenue Commissioner S.D., "submitted to Government for information, and with a suggestion that the papers be placed at the disposal of the Press. Mr. Robertson's letter has been acknowledged, and an extract sent to the Board of Revenue at Madras for information as to the best steps for testing the quality of the foreign tobacco grown, and for having it judiciously cured for transmission."

Resolution of Government, dated 7th Sept. 1868.

Government approve of the Acting Collector's proceedings, and he should be requested to make a report at the end of the season as to the result of the experiments.

STATION TALK.

BROACH, Sept. 19.—The monsoon seems fairly over here, and the weather is now very enjoyable; though hot during the day, the mornings and evenings are cool and pleasant. The dreadful storm which swept across Guzerat, levelling with the ground hundreds and thousands of houses, sparing neither the mansions of the rich nor the huts of the poor, left behind it, in addition to other troubles, a good deal of suffering in the shape of fever. I am glad however to be able to say that the change in the weather has had the happy effect of abating the disease, and the place is now pretty healthy. The Nerbudda bridge, under the energetic superintendence of Mr. Curling, will be once more open for traffic in about fourteen days. The wooden piles which are being driven in, are only meant as a temporary arrangement for the convenience of passengers and traffic. Yet this part will be as firm and safe (if not more so) than any other part of the bridge. Though very little is being said about our forthcoming Exhibition, active preparations are going on, and I venture to predict that it will far surpass either of those held at Nagpore or Akola. In addition to the original committee, a large and influential local committee has been appointed for the purpose of securing contributions; and for the better working of this committee, it has been subdivided into working parties of twos and threes, each party being responsible for some specific article of manufacture, art, or produce. In fact all is being done that can be done to make of this Exhibition something worth coming from Bombay to see. The secretary, Mr. Greaves, is indefatigable in his labours of love, and he is well and heartily seconded by the collectors of Surat and Broach, Messrs. Hope and Hogg, who both take a deep interest in all that concerns the Exhibition. It is anticipated that the Governor will come up here specially to open it, and that the Gaekwar and many other persons of note will also be present. It is to be opened on the 20th of December, and on that evening fire-works and a grand ball will take place, so that altogether we shall have fine doings up here this Christmas.—Times of India Correspondent.

PRINCE ALFRED'S VISIT TO INDIA.—By the last overland mail to Bombay the Government of India received official intimation that the Duke of Edinburgh would visit this country, arriving sometime in January. Nothing further is known, save that his Royal Highness is coming via the Cape, and in his own ship, the Galatea. It is conjectured he will land at Calcutta, which is likely to be the case, as his Royal Highness's arrangements may take him to places further eastward before making for this country. Sir John Lawrence may have been succeeded by Lord Mayo before the arrival of the Royal Duke.

DISTRESS IN GUZERAT.—The following telegram, dated the 11th September, was received in Bombay regarding the distress in Guzerat:—"From Ahmedabad, from the Collector, to Bombay, to Vurjeevundass Madhowdass, Esq.—No detailed official accounts have as yet been received from the districts. The Relief Committee meet to-morrow to allot charity to other districts. There can be no question that more money will be required to give effectual aid in rebuilding, especially as the committee are alive to the great need for assisting the middle classes as suggested in Mr. Vurjeevundass's letter received from Mr. Premabhai."

THE ASIATIC FINANCIAL ASSOCIATION.—A general meeting of the shareholders of the Asiatic Financial Association (Limited) was held on Saturday, 12th September, Mr. R. L. King in the chair, to consider the final account of the liquidators, showing the manner in which the winding up of the association had been conducted, and the property of the association disposed of. The report of the liquidators was approved, the books handed over to the custody of Mr. Wilson, and a vote of thanks given to the liquidators—the chairman remarking that when these began their work Bombay was in a very bad state, but that now things were better, and this was the first financial association that had been able finally to close its accounts.

MILITARY FURLONGS OR LEAVES OF ABSENCE.—The following officers are allowed furlough to Europe, on medical certificate, under the Furlough Rules of 1868:—Captain Blew, Bombay Staff Corps, for twenty months. Captain Swinton, 1st Regiment Madras Light Cavalry, for two years. Captain McInroy, Madras Staff Corps. Lieutenant Ketchen, General List, Quartermaster, 22nd Regiment Native Infantry. Major General Tremblere, C.B., Royal Engineers, to Europe on private affairs, to commence from the date of embarkation from Aden. With reference to Government General Orders granting furlough to Europe to the officers hereafter mentioned, it is intimated that the said officers obtained furlough on private affairs under the Regulations of 1868, Rule 15:—Surgeon Hewlett, Surgeon Cook, Medical Establishment; Captain Davidson, Royal Engineers; Captain Newport, Staff Corps; Lieutenant Leo, Royal Engineers; Lieutenant Yates, Staff Corps; Lieutenant Hobson, General List; Captain Wilson, Staff Corps. The following officers obtained furlough under the Regulations of 1868:—Assistant Surgeon Banks, Medical Establishment, G.O. No. 444, July 8. Lieutenant Ryves, General List, G.O. No. 540, Aug. 17. Major Vials, 95th Foot, from July 17 to Nov. 17. Lieutenant Adams, 23rd Foot, and Lieutenant Sandwith, 15th Native Infantry, thirty days from date of departure, to proceed to Bombay on medical certificate, preparatory to obtaining a final certificate to Europe.

BOMBAY COAST AND RIVER STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY.—At a meeting of the shareholders of the Bombay Coast and River Steam Navigation Company, held in the offices of the company, on Friday afternoon, Mr. Forman in the chair, the resolution passed on the 26th August, cancelling the clause in the articles of association which provided that the company when wound up should be wound up under the supervision of the High Court, was confirmed, and it was agreed that the company should be wound up voluntarily. The chairman stated that he had been empowered to offer Rs. 2,40,400, or Rs. 350 per share, for the whole plant of the company. That would include the assets and liabilities of the company; and should the offer be accepted, Rs. 350 a share would be distributed within a month. Of course, he said, it would be for the shareholders to decide whether they would accept this offer, by which they would receive the money within a month, in preference to the lingering process of liquidation. After some conversation as to the best means of disposing of the company's property, it was agreed that tenders should be invited for the company's flotilla stores, and other assets, to be sent in before 4 P.M. on 30th September, such tenders to be opened by the liquidators to be appointed by the meeting to be held on that day in presence of the shareholders.

THE ECLIPSE.—It is gratifying to learn that the main objects aimed at by the Royal Society, and the Royal Astronomical Society, in sending out parties to India to observe the eclipse of the sun which took place on the 18th ultimo, have been attained. Lieutenant Hirschel, R.E., observing at Jumkhundie, and Major Tennant at Guntoor, agree in finding the spectrum of the red protuberances to consist of bright lines, with dark space intervening, indicating first, that the protuberances are self luminous, and second, that they are composed of gaseous, not liquid or solid matter. The latter observer interprets the spectral lines seen as implying the presence in the red flames of hydrogen, sodium, and magnesium. The polarisation observations of the corona made by the former agree with this supposition, that the light of the corona is thus reflected light of the sun, not that of incandescent matter. Six photographs of the totality were obtained at Guntoor, and these with full particulars of the observations, and the deductions therefrom, will in due time be published after the societies for whom the observations were made have in the first place received the reports. We fear our German friends, who went some miles south of Bejapoor, were not very successful in obtaining a good view, the weather having been cloudy. In Bombay the effect of the eclipse on the tides was to increase the height by nineteen inches above the highest tide of the month. The height above De Lisle datum was 89.45 feet.—Bombay Builder, Sept. 5.—From Major Tennant's report of the observations taken by him at Guntoor we quote the following:—"I have the satisfaction of reporting, for the information of the Right Hon. the Governor-general in Council, that the arrangements made for the observation of the eclipse of this day have had a satisfactory termination. The photographs, I regret to say, were not more than partially successful, owing to the interposition of thin clouds, but we may yet obtain some results from them when critically examined. The observation with the spectroscope and for polarisation have been completely successful. It is now certain that the 'corona,' which surrounds the moon during a total eclipse, is the atmosphere of the sun, and that a sensible distance from the sun's surface, it is very slightly, if at all, self-luminous, but owes its brilliancy mainly to the reflected light of the sun itself. The prominences or protuberances which are seen are on the contrary gaseous matter, so highly heated as to become self-luminous. Hydrogen, which we know as permanent gas, seems to be one element in a protuberance, but it would seem farther to contain magnesium and sodium (known to us only ordinarily as solids) in a state of incandescent vapour. These results are absolutely new to science, and I venture to beg that his Excellency in Council will offer to the Secretary of State for India my respectful congratulations on the result of his patronage."

FURLOUGH RULES: BOMBAY CIVIL SERVICE.

The following notification is published:—

Under Section 12 of the rules regarding leave of absence to covenanted civil servants, promulgated by the financial department under notification No. 533, dated June 16, 1868, it has become expedient to issue orders as to the manner of dealing with applications for furlough from officers of the Bombay Civil Service, or officers of the Bengal or Madras Civil Services employed under the Government of Bombay. The Governor in Council is accordingly pleased to lay down the following regulations for the disposal of such applications:—

1. The Government of Bombay will refuse furlough on private affairs to any officer when the exigencies of the public service require that he should continue at his post.
2. A registry shall be kept at the office of the Secretary to the Government of Bombay in the general department, of all grants of furlough on medical certificate or on private affairs, of all extensions of furlough, and of all returns to duty from furlough of any kind.
3. If the officer applying for furlough belongs to the Bengal or Madras Civil Service, the Government of Bombay will, if no objection exists, forward his application for final disposal by the Governments of India or Madras respectively.
4. All applications for furlough, whether on medical certificate or private affairs, should be invariably accompanied by a certificate from the accountant-general, showing that the applicant is entitled to the leave asked.
5. The term of a furlough can only be altered with the permission of Government.
6. Every officer who obtains a furlough shall supply himself with a last pay certificate, and with a statement showing the pay which he is entitled to draw while absent. It shall be the duty of the local accountant-general to furnish these documents, and no furlough allowances will be payable without their production.
7. A statement of the officers absent on furlough, with the dates of the expiry of their respective furloughs, will be published quarterly in the Government Gazette, brought up to March 31, June 30, September 30, and December 31 of each year.
8. Every officer to whom a furlough on private affairs is granted must take such furlough, or the subsidiary leave given him in anticipation of it, within three months of the date on which the furlough was granted to him. If he do not so avail himself of it, or if he previously apply for its cancellation, the grant of furlough will be held to have lapsed, and the applicant will be liable to forfeit a portion of the furlough due to him, equal to the time between the date on which his furlough was available and on which the grant lapsed or was cancelled.
9. Privilege leave will be granted under the rules now in force.

FEARS OF A DROUGHT IN THE N.W.P.—The total failure of the rains in the North-West Provinces and the immediate prospect of famine deserve serious consideration. While Lower Bengal and Western India have been deluged by unexampled rains and inundations, the North-West has been suffering from intense drought. Up to the 21st August the rainfall had been trifling, except at some of the hill stations. At Nynce Tal 66 inches had been recorded, while in the plains the average rainfall throughout the Saharunpore district was 11.75 inches, and in the Shahjehanpore district 8.9 inches. From Etah, Muttra, and Etawah the returns were such as to warrant grounds for serious apprehensions. It is doubtful whether, at this late period, heavy rains would prove efficacious in saving the crops. Distress could hardly have occurred at a more unfortunate time for the North-West. There is every prospect of high prices ruling throughout Bengal during the cold weather. The Central Provinces narrowly escaped the fate of the North-West, and only a very moderate crop may be expected. The prospects of the Punjab are fair, but with a large army in the field, and more troops pouring into the province, little surplus grain can be looked for. Reports are already abroad that people are being driven to dacoity and theft by the prospect of scarcity, and that the district officials are apprehensive of disturbances. Meanwhile, Government is fully on the alert; no effort will be spared to meet the calamity with effective measures of relief.—Friend of India.

Home.

THE EAST INDIA COMPANY have removed their offices to No. 11, Pancras-lane, E.C.

BILLS ON INDIA.—The biddings for bills on Calcutta and Madras took place on Wednesday, the 7th inst., at the Bank of England. The whole amount, viz., £200,000, was allotted to Calcutta. The minimum price was fixed, as before, at 1s. 10½d. on both Presidencies. Tenders at 1s. 11½d. will receive about 84 per cent. The result shows a rise of about ½ per cent. The improvement is believed to have been mainly occasioned by recent heavy purchases of indigo in Calcutta.

DISSOLUTION OF PARTNERSHIP.—A circular has been issued announcing the dissolution of the old firm of Smith, Elder, and Co., by the retirement of Mr. George Smith from the home, East Indian, and foreign agency and banking business, and the formation of a new firm for the before-mentioned branches under the style of "Henry S. King and Co." Mr. King, who was a partner in the old house for fifteen years, is now the principal, and intends to carry on the business in the same premises at Cornhill and Pall-mall. Mr. Geo. Smith, however, will retain the publishing business of Smith, Elder, and Co. for himself exclusively.

MILITARY LABOUR.—A fortnight ago we announced the probability of a more extended application of military labour to public works. We have every reason to believe that this subject will ere long receive more attentive consideration from the military authorities in England as well as in India. Upon this subject we may quote the following extract from Las Casas, relative to the views of the great Napoleon:—"He concluded (says Las Casas) that his ideal army could not exist without a revolution in the habits and education of the soldier, perhaps even of the officers. Such an army could never exist side by side with our ovens, magazines, administration, and organised transport. Such an ideal would not be seen until, in imitation of the old Romans, the soldier would receive his corn, would be obliged to have hand-mills, would cook his own bread on his little griddle, &c. Such an army would be impossible until all our frightful system of red-tape ('administration paperassiere') was put to flight. 'I had meditated all these changes, but to dare to put them in practice I would have required a profound peace; an army on a war footing would not have permitted it, it would have revolted.' He added that had he been forced to maintain a large army in time of peace, he would have wished to employ it on public works." Has Sir William Mansfield been studying Las Casas, or are his wise applications of military labour more original?—Broad Arrow.
